PROGRAM FOR RELIEF OF THE FARMER OUTLINED BY JOHN W. DAVIS

DECLARES FOR CUT IN FREIGHT RATES

By CHARLES G. ROSS.
hief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 6.—A finite program for the relief of economic distress of the farm was outlined here tonight by hn W. Davis, the Democratic ndidate for President, in his first rmal campaign speech west of Mississippi River. He offered platform with seven specific dges as follows:

"To adopt an international policy co-operation by direct official tead of indirect and evasive uncial means as well re-establish farmers' export market by rering the industrial balance in rope and the normal flow of innational trade with the settlet of Europe's economic prob-

"To adjust the tariff so that the er and all other classes can again in a competitive market.

"To reduce taxation, both direct irect and by strict economy ighten the burdens of Govern-

Would Lower Rail Rates.

"To readjust and lower rail and ter rates which will make our rkets, both for the buyer and seller, national and internanal instead of regional and local.

"To bring about the early comtion of internal waterways sysms for transportation and to delop our water powers for cheapfertilizer and use on our farms.

"To stimulate by every proper ernmental activity the progress the co-operative marketing ovement and the establishment of export marketing corporation or mmission in order that the exrtable surplus may not establish price of the whole crop.

"This," added Davis, "is our platorm and our program, and if ected I purpose with the aid of a mocratic Congress to put it ineffect."

Tribute to Gov. Bryan.

Davis began his speech—one of most important pronouncents of his campaign to date—h a tribute to Gov. Bryan of this te whose selection as his rung mate, he said, had given him enuine satisfaction."

Where others had talked about reduction, Davis said, Bryan d actually reduced the State y by one-third. Bryan, morer, had saved to the State the ue of its entire wheat crop in duced prices of some of the ssities of life and instead of ely deploring the tendency tord bureaucracy and the grownumber of Federal employes had shown that "the way to duce is to reduce."

Turning to the main theme of speech Davis said, in part: "I here to gather such facts as I y concerning the interests of section of the country and to you from your own experience verify or correct my undernding of the matter.

Causes of Farmer's Plight.

"The picture which has already painted to be in one of great ress for which the causes are far to seek. During the great the farmer was urged to in his production and multiply efforts on the theory undoubtwell-founded that food will the war. He responded in a ner which makes one of the htest pages of American his. When the war came to its the farmer with his greatly ed acreage and production enly found his markets cut and the price of all he had to correspondingly reduced. order that he might meet increased demands that were made upon him he had bormoney for the purchase of and implements, gone heavily debt and many had mortgaged their holdings as security. GRAVE OF EARLY IRON AGE WARRIOR FOUND NEAR PRAGUE

PRAGUE, Sept. 6.—In the course of excavations in the suburb of Stresovice, near Prague, an archeological find of considerable importance recently was made. It is a grave dating from the beginning of the iron age, that of a warrior, who lies on his back holding in his right hand a long iron sword in an almost perfect state of preservation. The grave also contains portions of the harness of a horse which evidently was buried with him and various earthenware vessels, equally well preserved.

The exceptional state of the relics is attributed to the fact that both the warrior and the articles buried with him must have been contained in a wooden box, covered with leather; a fragment of leather was found on the hilt of the sword.

SKY GAZING INSTRUMENT MADE BY KING TUT IS FOUND

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—Announcement from the University of Chicago today says: "Sometime between the years 1370 and 1375 B. C., the King Tutenkhamen, puzzled by the stars that looked down on him from the Egyptian skies, made with his own hands, an instrument which would facilitate his observation of the heavens. It is one of the oldest known scientific instruments and antedates the Muse Urania, to whom the ancient Greek astronomers called in their search for knowledge.

"Made of ebony and bearing the curious hieroglyphs of Egypt, it is soon to be put on display in the Oriental museum of the university."

TWO CHARGES ARE PREFERRED

By the Associated Press
NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Luis Angel Firpo, Argentine heavyweight prize fighter, was released in $1000 bail for a hearing, Sept. 15, four days after his scheduled meeting with Harry Wills, after a warrant, issued today in Washington by Acting Secretary White of the Labor Department, had been served on him by Immigration Commissioner Curran.

The pugilist was arrested on two charges. The first accuses him of bringing Blanca Picart, an Argentine manicurist, into the country for immoral purposes in 1923 and the second charges that he made false and misleading statements before the special board of inquiry which investigated his entry into the country last July.

The case may be subjected to much delay, after the hearing before the immigration inspectors at Ellis Island. The decision of the inspectors must be forwarded to the Secretary of Labor, the evidence and findings considered, and then his final decision given for or against deportation.

After his arraignment, Firpo, through an interpreter, said:

"I am not so much worried about my case or myself as in vindicating the good name of a woman. At the proper time I will prove my innocence of slanderous charges brought by my enemies."

Argentine Papers Comment Bitterly of Firpo Prosecution.

By the Associated Press.
BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 6.—The prosecution of Luis Angel Firpo, Argentine pugilist, in New York, on charges that he violated the immigration laws, is causing caustic comment in the Argentine newspapers.

This comment is epitomized in the English language newspaper, the Buenos Aires Herald, which says the news of the steps taken against Firpo "can hardly come as a pleasant item to those who believe in friendly feeling up and down the Americas."

"We know," the newspaper continues, "that loftier spirits will scornfully refuse to allow that a boxer could materially influence public opinion, but we question whether there is at present a more popular figure among Latin-Americans than this Argentine boxer.

"Furthermore, all sorts of wild conjectures will be rife as reasons for the arrest of Firpo and the vast mass of South Americans will believe that the steps against him had been taken through fear that coveted title of heavyweight champion of the world would leave America.

"A section of the Argentine press is already commenting bitterly on the prosecution to which Firpo is being subjected, and we are not so sure that the complaints are ill-founded."

ZR-3 TESTS OUT ITS WIRELESS ON 480-MILE FLIGHT

By the Associated Press.
FRIEDERICHSHAFEN, Germany, Sept. 6.—Enthusiasm over the airship's excellent behavior was the dominant not here tonight when the giant dirigible ZR-3, built by the Zeppelin Co. for the United States Navy, had completed its second official trial during which the ship covered about 480 miles at an average speed of 60 miles an hour remaining in the air eight hours and 45 minutes.

By Radio to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News.

ABORAD THE ZR-3, Sept. 6.—The Zeppelin airship ZR-3, which is shortly to make a voyage over the Atlantic to America, left Friederichshafen today for a six to eigth hour trial flight. The start was made under excellent weather conditions, the sun shining brightly. The airship headed in the direction of Stuttgart.

The ground drops away rapidly. The ants below who have been hanging to the ropes, scatter, and we rise rapidly heading over Lake Constance. Friederichshafen and the lake below are hidden below a curded cloud bank.

The sun shines. Our shadow follows us in the lake below. We are 300 meters over Friederichshafen. The Reichswehr, good Germans that they are, stand unmovd in lines beside the hanger where we left them. Our course is northeast over Germany toward Munich.

The movement is gentle. Here in the cabins beneath the air trout's nose it is as warm and comfortable as a yacht. The movement is far smoother than it ever is at sea.

There are 30 odd guests, of whom the correspondent is one, tasting the experience of that trans-oceanic travel which Dr. Hugo Eckner, director of the Zeppelin Company, is convinced will be established within three years. There are more than 80 persons abroad.

The ship passed over Munich at 11:30, circling about the city several times. At 1:50 o'clock she passed over Nuremburg, and then headed for Ansback, passing over that city and arriving over Stuttgart at 2:10. There she circled about listening-in on a special concert before starting back to her base.

The airship completed its second trial flight, returning to her hangar at Friedrichshafen at 5:15 p. m.

WORKMAN IS FATALLY HURT WHEN STEAM PIPE EXPLODES

Is Scalded in Manhole—Force of Blast Hurls Cobblestone Over Building.

Robert Keidel, 25 years old, 7120 Virginia avenue, was injured fatally when a 12-inch steam pipe line burst beneath Fourth street, between Washington and Lucas avenues, while he was working in a manhole there at 11:30 a. m. yesterday. He was badly scalded about the body and had to be carried to the surface. He died at City Hospital at 1:30 p. m.

The underground pipe had been laid by the American District Steam Co. of North Tonawanda, N. Y., for the Union Electric Light and Power Co., which furnishes steam heat to buildings. The pipe was being tested with a pressure of 80 pounds to an inch when a sleeve connection slipped and the steam escaped.

The report of the explosion was heard for blocks around. Heavy cobblestones around the manhole were loosened and, some witnesses said, one of these stones was hurled over the roof of a two-story building adjoining the Missouri Athletic Association Building.

LEAGUE ASSEMBLY ADOPTS PEACE RESOLUTION

TO REVISE STATUS OF WORLD COURT

Disarmament Commission to Study Questions With Idea of Creating Arbitration Plan for Peace.

By the Associated Press.
GENEVA, Sept. 6.—A peace resolution drawn up by the British and French delegations was adopted unanimously by the assembly of the League of Nations this afternoon.

The resolution asks the disarmament commission to study the draft of the pact of mutual assistance and also the covenant of the league with a view to deciding upon the necessary amendment to the covenant in connection with the settlement of disputes.

The commission also is asked to examine into the question of a revision in the status of the world court so as to make its arbitration more acceptable and thus prepare the way for the pacific settlement of all disputes.

M. Herriot said he and his British colleague had decided to stop talking about principles and pass to an act which he was convinced would be accepted with joy by the peoples of every part of the world.

Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain urged the passage of the resolution. "We must not stop until the work of peace is accomplished," the British Premier declared.

Premier Herriot of France, following MacDonald, said he and the British Premier had determined not to leave Geneva until they had achieved something concrete and that this was embodied in the resolution which likewise was supported by Belgium.

The resolution adopted declares that inquiries to be started are to be with a view to the convocation by the League of Nations at the earliest possible moment of an international conference on armaments.

Ovation for Politics.

Judging by the extraordinary ovation accorded the sentiments expressed by Nicholas Politis of Greece after his address in the debate on the reduction of armaments in the Assembly today, the sentiment of the Assembly distinctly favors a system under which compulsory arbitration will always be accompanied by effective guarantees of security.

M. Politis is a former Foreign Minister of Greece and one of the best known authorities in Europe on international law. When he resumed his seat after his remarks, Premier Herriot of France and members of the French delegation wrung his hand, while Mineichuro Adachi of Japan who with Elihu Root helped frame the protocol of the preesnt World Court of Justice, lft the Japanese bench on the othe rside of the auditorium and rushing up, warmly felicitated the speaker.

M. Politis, who has devoted much time recently to the tsudy of international arbitration, examined the subject from the standpoint of an international jurist. In an endeavor to prove that compulsory arbitration was impracticable without suitable mutual guarantees or penalties, he cited the creation of a court of justice by the five Republics of Central America at the suggestion of the United States all the signatories agreeing to accept arbitration of any dispute whatsoever.

Tribunal Rejected.

Eventualy, he added, a conflict arose through the contention of one of the signatories that a treaty negotiated by two of the Republics injuriously affected its interests and the signatory states later refused to accept the finding of the arbitration court. The system, he added, had collapsed and was being replaced by a new tribunal more directly controlled by the states concerned.

The countries of Latin-America took a prominent part in the morning session of the Assembly. After an address by the Venezuelan delegate, the rostrum was taken by Narciso Garay, of Panama, who explained Panama's treaty with the United States for the construction of the canal which he described as a political treaty of guarantee by which the United States undertook to guarantee and maintain the independence and sovereignty of Pana-

SYOSSET, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Returning to the James A. Burden home at 4:30 this morning the Prince of Wales remained in bed while a party of huntsmen, which he was to have joined rode over the gentle Long Island hills in pursuit of fox cubs in a hunt organized for his special benefit.

The Prince, whose nocturnal habits no longer keep any but the servants awake sought repose an hour and a half before the hunt started. No delay was occasioned, as the Prince sent Capt. A. F. It was the year's first real autumn morning, a sparkling day of zestful air. The hunt was organized by the Meadowbrook Hunt Club.

SHORT HOP MADE FROM MAINE COAST

"Glad to Be With You Again," Lieut. Smith's Greeting When He Speaks to Mother by Radio.

FOG NEARLY "RANG DOWN CURTAIN"

Planes Narrowly Missed Island on Last Jump to U. S. — "Toughest Hop" From Iceland.

By the Associated Press.
BOSTON, Sept. 6. — The world flyers will not hop off for New York tomorrow, as previously planned. Lieut. Smith said tonight that they would leave Monday, if possible.

By the Associated Press.
BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 6.—Showing the strain of their five months of travel, in which they virtually encircled the globe, the six American round-the-world flyers arrived in Boston harbor today. They reached here amid a pandemonium of fog horns, bells and sirens from hundreds of harbor craft, liners and naval vessels, and were greeted by a crowd of 75,000, probably, the most enthusiastic that has met them since they hopped off from Seattle five months ago to a day.

Glad to be back on native soil again, but with a hint of weariness in their eyes that suggested hours of vigilance and exposure to extremes of climate, the aviators showed even more in their manner than by what they said.

Glad to Be Home Again.

"Hello folks, we're glad to be with you again"—these were almost the first words of Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, leader of the flight. With that short speech into a radio mouthpiece, Smith was speaking to his mother in Los Angeles and to listeners-in throughout the country.

"I guess we're about as glad to be here as you people are to see us," Smith said in an informal talk with reporters and friends on the reception barge, the planes having taxied to their moorings at the buoys off the barge.

"What was the toughest jump you had in your flight" some one asked.

Just Missed Hitting an Island.

Speaking for a moment with newspaper men, Lieut. Erik Nelson, who alone hopped into the fog that held back Lieutenants Smith and Wade on the jump to Iceland, said.

"Glad it's over—practically. We almost pulled the curtain on our flight yesterday on account of the fog. We just missed hitting an island off the Maine Coast while flying low, and believe it one of the worse we had to contend with during our whole flight.

The flyers alighted safely at 2:09, 2:09½ and 2:10 p. m., Eastern daylight saving time, after a 125-mile jump from Mere Point, Me. The three olive-drab craft, escorted by a dozen land planes, circled around the harbor like giant birds before landing.

The planes alighted in the following order:

Lieut Smith's craft leading; second, Lieut. Leigh Wade, and third, Lieut. Nelson in the Chicago, Bostoo II. and New Orleans, respectively.

National Salute Fired.

As they taxied to their moorings anti-aircraft guns fired by Battery A, Ninth Regiment, Coast Artillery Corps, boomed the national salute of 21 guns, usually accorded only to Presidents of the United States and rulers of foreign countries.

Major-General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the United States air service, alighted a few minutes after the world flyers and was rushed to the official reception barge with Assistant Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis, there to greet the flyers. The planes flew easily to their moorings and were

SUPREME COURT OUR SAFEGUARD, SAYS COOLIDGE

If Its Authority Were Lodged With Congress, Minorities Would Suffer, He Declares.

PLEA TO ABOLISH WAR HATREDS MADE

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 6.—President Coolidge called upon the American people in a Lafayette day address here today to take a stand against "a deliberate and determined effort" which he said "is being made to break down the guarantees of our fundamental law" through a movement "to limit the jurisdiction of our domestic courts."

Speaking at the unveiling of a statue of Lafayette, the President characterized the great Frenchman as "a true son of world freedom" and asserted that "this occasion is dedicated to freedom."

"The question," he declared, "is whether America will allow itself to be degraded into a communistic and socialistic state, or whether it will remain American. Those who want to continue to enjoy the high estate of American citizenship will resist all attempts to encroach on their liberties by encroaching upon the power of the courts."

While devoting his address primarily to a defense of the United States Supreme Court, the President also drew a lesson from the French leader, who "joined us in fighting for the maintenance and extension of our institutions," and he proposed a policy of service in foreign relations.

He pleaded also for the abolishment of war hatreds and assistance in the "restoration of the German people, now shorn of militarism."

One Place for Americans.

"The time for Americans to range themselves firmly, squarely and uncompromisingly behind American ideals is now," he asserted. "The great body of our people have an abiding faith in their own country. The time has come when they should supplement that faith with action. * * * In this contest there is but one place for a real American to stand."

The President mentioned no names in connection with the attack he described on the Supreme Court. He characterized it as an assault upon the Constitution, "with its purpose the confiscation of property and the destruction of liberty."

"Very little danger exists of an open and avowed assault upon the principal of individual freedom," he said. "It is more likely to be in peril indirectly, perhaps with the avowed intention of protecting it or enlarging it."

In his discussion of foreign affairs, Mr. Coolidge said "to be independent, to my mind, does not mean to be isolated. * * * There is no real independence, save only as we secure it through the law of service."

Beginning of New Era.

While avoiding entanglements, he pointed out that the United States had pursued that policy in contributions to foreign charities; in counsel at the arbitration tables in Latin-America; in adjustment of war problems in Europe; in the Washington armament conference, and in the settlement of the reparations problem.

"The effect these will have in averting war and promoting peace," he added, "cannot possibly be overestimated. They appear to me properly to mark the end of the old order and the beginning of a new era. We hope they are the end of aggressive war and the beginning of permanent peace."

Function of Supreme Court.

Speaking again of the Supreme Court, as well as of the entire system of independent judiciary, Mr. Coolidge said its establishment through the constitution was "one of the great contributions which America made to the science of government.

"That tribunal," he continued, in speaking specifically of the Supreme Court, "has been made as independent and impartial as human nature could devise. This action was taken with the sole purpose of protecting the freedom of the individual, of guarding his earnings, his home, his life.

"It is frequently charged that this tribunal is tyrannical. If the Constitution of the United States be tyranny; if the rule that no one shall be convicted of crime save by a jury of his peers; that no orders of nobility shall be granted; that slavery shall not be permitted to exist in any State or territory; that no one shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law; if these and many other provisions made by the people be tyranny, then the Supreme Court when it makes decisions in accordance with these principles of our fundamental law is tyrannical. Otherwise, it is exercising the power of Government for the preservation of liberty. The fact is that the Constitution is the source of our freedom. Maintaining it, interpreting it, and declaring it, are the only methods by which the Constitution can be preserved and our liberties guaranteed.

"Power Must Be Somewhere."

"Somewhere must be lodged the power to declare the Constitution. If it be taken away from the court, it must go either to the executive or the legislative branch of the Government. No one, so far as I know, has thought that it should go to the executive. All those who advocate changes propose, I believe, that it should be transferred in whole or in part to the Congress.

"I have a very high regard for legislative assemblies. We have put a very great emphasis upon representative governmnt. It is the only method by which due deliberation can be secured. That is a great safeguard of liberty. But the Legislature is not judicial. Along with what are admitted to be the merits of the question, also what is supposed to be the popular demand and the greatest partisan advantage weigh very heavily in making legislative decisions.

"It is well known that when the House of Representatives sits as a judicial body, to determine contested elections, it has a tendency to decide in a partisan way. It is to be remembered also that under recent political practice there is a strong tendency for Legislatures to be very much influenced by the executive. Whether we like this practice or not, there is no use denying that it exists. With a dominant executive and a subservient Legislature, the opportunity would be very inviting to aggrandizement and very dangerous to liberty. That way leads toward imperialism.

"Some people do not seem to understand fully the purpose of our constitutional restraints. They are not for protecting the majority either in or out of the Congress. They can protect themselves with their votes. We have adopted a written Constitution in order that the minority, even down to the most insignificant individual, might have their rights protected.

"So long as our Constitution remains in force, no majority, no matter how large, can deprive the individual of the right of life, liberty or property, or prohibit the free exercise of religion or the freedom of speech or of the press.

"If the authority now vested in the Supreme Court were transferred to the Congress any majority, no matter what their motive, could vote away any of these most precious rights. Majorities are notoriously irresponsible. After irreparable damage had been done the only remedy that the people would have would be the privilege of trying to defeat such a majority at the next election. Every minority body that may be weak in resources or unpopular in the public estimation, also nearly every race and religious belief would find themselves practically without protection, if the authority of the Supreme Court should be broken down and its powers lodged with the Congress.

"The same reasoning that applies to the individual persons applies to the individual State. A very broad twilight zone exists in which it is difficult to distinguish where State right ends and Federal right begins. Deprived of the privilege of its day in court, each State would be compelled to submit to the exactions of the Congress or resort to resistance by force. On the other hand, the Legislatures of States, and sometimes the people, through the initiative and referendum, may pass laws which are very injurious to the minority residents of that State, by attempting to take away the privileges which they hold under the Federal Constitution. Except for the courts, such a minority would have no remedy for wrong done them. Their ultimate refuge is the Supreme Court of the United States."

Barriers Against Hasty Change.

"At a time when all the world is seeking for the adjudication of differences between nations, not by war, but by reason, the suggestion that we should limit the jurisdiction of our domestic courts is reactionary in the highest degree. It would cast aside the progress of generations to begin again the contest for supremacy between executive and legislative. Whichever side has won in that struggle, the people have always lost.

"Our Constitution has raised certain barriers against too hasty change. I believe such provision is wise. I doubt if there has been any change that has ever really been desired by the people, which they have not been able to secure. Stability of government is a very important asset. If amendment be made easy, both revolution and reaction, as well as orderly progress, also become easy. The nation has lost little, but has gained much, through the necessity of due deliberation. The pressing need of the present day is not to change our constitutional rights, but to observe our constitutional rights.

Struggle of Common People.

"A deliberate and determined effort is being made to break down the guarantees of our fundamental law. It has for its purpose the confiscation of property and the destruction of liberty. At the present time the chief obstacle, besides the people, to this effort, is the Supreme Court of the United States. In this contest there is but one place for a real American to stand. That is on the side of ordered liberty under constitutional government. This is not the struggle of the rich and powerful. They will be able to survive. It is the struggle of the common run of people. Unless we can maintain our institutions of liberty unimpaired, they will see their savings swept away, their homes devastated, and their children perish from want and hunger.

"The Constitution of the United States has for its almost sole purpose the protection of the freedom of the people. We must combat every attempt to break it down or to make it easy, under the pretended guise of legal procedure, to throw open the way to reaction or revolution. To adopt any other course is to put in jeopardy the sacred right to life, liberty, property and the pursuit of happiness."

Time to End Hatred.

Again discussing foreign affairs, Mr. Coolidge concluded:

"American citizens, with full sympathy of our Government, have been attempting with apparent success to restore stricken Europe. We have acted in the name of world peace and of humanity. Always the obstacles to be encountered have been distrust, suspicion and hatred. The great effort has been to allay and remove these sentiments. I believe that America can assist the world in this direction by her example. We have never forgotten the service done us by Lafayette, but we have long ago ceased to bear an enmity toward Great Britain by reason of two wars that were fought out between us.

"We want Europe to compose its differences and liquidate its hatreds. Would it not be well if we set the example and liquidated some of our own? The war is over. The militarism of Central Europe, which menaced the security of the world, has been overthrown. In its place have sprung up peaceful republics. Already we have assisted in refinancing Austria. We are about to assist in refinancing Germany. We believe that such action will be helpful to France, but we can give further and perhaps even more valuable assistance both to ourselves and to Europe by bringing to an end our own hatreds.

The best way for us who wish all our inhabitants to be single-minded in their Americanism is for us to bestow upon each group of our inhabitants that confidence and fellowship which is due to all Americans. If we want to get the hyphen out of our country, we can best begin by taking it out of our own minds. If we want France and the other allies paid, we can best work toward that end by assisting in the restoration of the German people, now shorn of militarism, to their full place in the family of peaceful mankind.

Example of Magnanimity.

"I want to see America set the example to the world, both in our domestic and foreign relations, of magnanimity.

"We cannot make over the people of Europe. We must help them as they are, if we are to help them at all.' I believe that we should help, not at the sacrifice of our independence, not for the support of imperialism, but to restore to those great peoples a peaceful civilization. In that course lies the best guarantee of freedom. In that course lies the greatest honor which we can bestow upon the memory of Lafayette."

SIMILAR STATEMENTS OF COOLIDGE AND DAVIS ON GUARANTEE OF RIGHTS

WHAT COOLIDGE SAID: "So long as our Constitution remains in force, no majority, no matter how large, can deprive the individual of the right of life, liberty or property, or prohibit the free exercise of religion or the freedom of speech or of the press."

WHAT DAVIS SAID: "Now I know that in this country there has been put forward the proposition that power shall be taken away from the courts of the United States, and that the Congress or State Legislatures shall have the right to pass a law, no matter what that law may be; no matter what right it invades; no matter if it should deny to you the exercise of your religious worship; that the courts should be utterly powerless to say that that law shall not operate; and if Congress or the Legislature chose to pass it, or to pass it again after the Court had denounced it, that you would be utterly without remedy.

"I deny that doctrine * * * There must be in this country some power to which the American citizen can appeal when these sacred rights of his are invaded."

HOLDUP STORY OF WOUNDED GIRL'S FRIENDS ACCEPTED

Companion's of 14-Year-Old Ethel Baxter Released After Being Questioned 10 Hours.

After 10 hours questioning concerning the circumstances of the shooting of 14-year-old Ethel Baxter by a highwayman on the Lemay Ferry road in St. Louis County early yesterday, the four youthful companions of the girl were released yesterday afternoon when the police and county officers were convinced that their version of the affair was true.

The girl, who was shot in the back of the head, the bullet emerging from the forehead, has not regained consciousness and physicians at the city hospital hold but slight hope for her recovery. She was rushed to the hospital at 2:30 a. m. yesterday after Patrolman Heckler of the Carondelet District had encountered the party driving into the city at 7300 South Broadway in a Ford touring car without lights. Ethel lived with her grandmother, Mrs. Florence E. Ross, at 1319 Chouteau avenue. Her parents are dead.

Story Told by Party.

According to the other members of the party, two of whom were brothers of the girl, Ethel was shot by a robber who held them up in the county when they were returning to the city from Maxwell, two miles south of the Meramec River on the Lemay Ferry road. The shot was fired, they said, when one of Ethel's brothers resisted the robber's attempt to kiss the girls after he had searched the male members of the party and found only small change.

Patrolman Heckler was standing on the corner at 7300 South Broadway when he saw the unlighted Ford containing several persons being driven rapidly northward. He hailed the machine to investigate and in the front seat found the girl crumpled with a bullet wound in her head. Beside her were Ralph Baxter, 17, of 1319 Chouteau, and Albert Glenk, 24, of 1339 South Thirteenth street. In the rear seat were William Baxter, 23, another brother who rooms at 2610 Geyer avenue, and Elsie Patton, 17, of 1330 Chouteau. They were on their way, they said, to a hospital.

Girl Taken to Hospital.

After rushing the girl to the City hospital, patrolman Heckler returned with the others to the Carondelet station, where they related the story of the shooting which they afterwards repeated in detail to the St. Louis homicide squad and two county officers.

Ethel and her brothers and the Patton girl has assembled at the home of Mrs. Ross last night, they said, when Glenk, an associate, came by in his Ford and suggested a ride. They had driven out the Lemay Ferry road to Maxville but had been delayed on their return trip by three tire punctures and a break in the car's wiring which had necessitated driving without lights.

As they were proceeding slowly between Hoffman House and Eight-mile House, they related, a man jumped on the running board and asked for a ride to the Bellefontaine car line. They had not gone far, however, when he drew a revolver and ordered Glenk to stop the car. The male members of the party were then forced to get out. After search of their pockets had yielded only 35 cents, which he spurned, the robber, according to the account, remarked:

Two Shots Fired.

The highwayman kissed Ethel, who was in the front seat, and was leaning into the rear of the car to embrace the Patton girl, when Ralph Baxter struck him on the shoulder. The robber leaped back and fired a shot into the group, and, after retreating a few steps farther, fired again. One of the bullets struck Ethel in the head.

At the home of Mrs. Ross yesterday, the grandmother said the young people had told her they were going for a ride, but she was unaware that they had not returned until Ethel failed to respond to her call yesterday morning.

Elsie Patton, whose parents live in Shannon County, Mo., and who resides with an aunt, Mrs. Carrie Patterson, at 1330 Chouteau, left home without saying where she was going, according to Mrs. Patterson. When she failed to return the aunt surmised, she had spent the night with Ethel and went to Mrs. Ross' home to look for her. It was then that Ethel's absence was discovered.

pression came. Prices fell, foreign purchases decreased.

"There came also a deflation of credit on an extended scale. On the 17th day of May, 1920, the Republican Senate adopted a resolution introduced by Senator McCormick of Illinois inquiring what steps the Federal reserve board proposed to take or to recommend to the member banks of the Federal reserve system to meet the existing inflation in currency and credit. The Republican platform adopted in the following month pledged that party to a courageous and an intelligent deflation of our overexpanded credit and currency and the Republican nominee in his speech of acceptance declared that deflation ought to have begun on the day after the armistice and pledged that earnest and consistent attack which the party platform covenants.

Result of the Policy.

"The Federal Reserve Board recommended such a policy to its members and between the 30th day of June, 1920, and the 30th day of June, 1922, a contraction of loans and discounts of over $5,500,000,000 occurred.

"Bank failures multiplied. Many farmers were driven into bankruptcy. A survey made by the Department of Agriculture shows that in 15 corn and wheat producing states, 58 per cent of al farmers, owners and tenants combined, either lost their farms outright or were spared merely through the leniency of their creditors."

After setting out other statistics showing the economic plight of the farmer the candidate continued:

"Figures such as these should tell their own story. If they are alarming to the farmer they should be even more so to the rest of the country, which is dependent upon him for its daily bread. They may well reflect upon a statement once made by W. J. Bryan that if all the cities should disappear the farms could rebuild them, but if the farms were abandoned the cities would die never to be reborn.

"In spite of the recent welcome rise in the value of certain staple crops, no man will question the statement that the situation of agriculture is desperate and full of danger to the country.

"The problem is, in its last analysis, not one of statistics, but of human lives. There is no duty which the Government can be called upon to perform more pressing or more sacred than to so organize the economic life of America that American citizens can earn on their farms a living in keeping with American needs and American traditions. The outstanding problem of the hour is to provide some means by which this can be done."

Republican Party Criticised.

Davis charged that the Republican party in its legislation had given "deliberate preference, as against the farmer, to the manufacturing industries of the country." "It is ignorant or insincere to cry out against the farm bloc in Congress as if it were a new thing," he continued. "Each succeeding Republican administration has been a Government by an industrial bloc. The granting of undue preference and subsidies to industry by Republican administrations, and the attempt of agriculture to get a fair hearing in Congress have been the main thread of domestic politics or the last generation. It explains the populist movement of the '90s. It explains the insurgent movement of 1910 and 1912 in the Republican party. It explains the wide breach in that party today.

"The unrest back of these movements will continue until the voice of the farmer is listened to just as attentively in the White House and the halls of Congress as that of the industrialist. The policy of the Democratic party is to readjust the balance and put agriculture where it belongs—on an equality with industry.

"In order to delude the farmer with a false pretense of imaginary benefits and with utter disregard of economic law, those in control of the Republican party announced, in the spring of 1921, that all his ills would be promptly cured by the enactment of a protective tariff for his benefit. They declared that high tariff rates on wheat, corn, livestock, meat products and so forth, would immediately raise the domestic price. Such a law was accordingly placed upon the statute books in May, 1921. But when wheat fell from $1.47 in May to $1.00 in December, and corn from 62 cents in May to 47 cents in October, the promised relief was seen to be a pure political fiction.

Tariff Law Assailed.

"Under cover of this pretense, however, the oppressive Fordney-McCumber bill was enacted in September, 1922. Lobbies representing greedy manufacturrs stormed the nation's capital and wrote their own excessive and extortionate rates in utter disregard of every theory, even of protective tariff taxation. No consideration was given to the new and changed financial business and economic conditions.

"This law was both a fence and an offense. It was a fence against reciprocal trade, no matter how profitable or desirable, and shattered our trade structure throughout the world. It was an offense to every consumer in the United States, and not least of all to the farmers who were left outside the scope of its pretended benefits. It might have been appropriately entitled an act to obstruct our foreign commerce, to increase the prices of what the farmer buys and to reduce the prices of what he sells.

"Thereafter, as an additional sop to the farmer, under the so-called flexible provision the duty on wheat was increased by executive order and that ungrateful commodity promptly responded by a further fall in value. Surely the day when the farmer can be lulled to rest by a nominal tariff on the commodities of which he had a surplus to sell abroad has passed forever. Indeed, light seems to be breaking in high circles on this question, for in his speech recently made at Lincoln, Neb., on behalf of the administration, the Republican nominee for the vice presidency said that 'it is an admitted fact that in the case of any agricultural commodity of which we raise a substantial surplus, the price obtainable for this surplus in the world's markets established in a general way the price level of the entire crop.'

"The scales are falling from their eyes. I commend that statement to the perusal of the Republican Congressmen and Senators who boasted, or still boast, of benefits to the farmer from a tariff duty on his wheat."

Called "Economic Blindness."

This same "economic blindness," Davis asserted, had affected the foreign policies of the Republican party. "It was only by restoring our markets that we could hope to dispose of our surplus production," he said, 'and such restoration was worth to America hardly less than to the European countries themselves. Instead of that we chose, under Republican guidance, to shut our eyes to the needs of Europe and our own best interests, to declare for a policy of isolation.

"It is a reproach to the collective wisdom of mankind that each year since 1920 there have been from one to two hundred million people in Europe underfed and undernourished, and other millions literally starving, while during the same period America's storehouses of foodstuffs and raw materials have ben vainly seeking to market at reasonable prices."

He said that he had no desire to decry the Dawes report, but that he resented "the belated attempt to capitalize its possibilities as a political asset." Referring to the speech of acceptance by Gen. Dawes Davis said: "I read that the question of the farmers' welfare is a non-partisan and economic question, and must not be and cannot be ever discussed or settled as a party question.

"The same thing might be said in the same bland terms of the tariff, of taxation, of railroads, of foreign policy and practically every other problem that effects the welfare of the American people. If we eliminate from political debate every question that is either national in its scope or economic in its character, and especially every question that is embarrassing to the party in power, we will reach that millenium when Government through political parties will cease to exist. The very purpose of political parties is to frame policies and to propose and execute them on all great questions that are national in their scope. Political parties that have ceased to have opinions or the courage to avow them have lost all reason for existence.

View of Republican Program.

"What, then, is the program which the Republican party puts forward by its accredited spokesman? It seems to have two propositions only to submit: One the reclamation which in this case means the curtailment of production, in which connection the statement is made that every reclamation project, whether by irrigation or drainage, furnishes competition for existing cultivated farms, orchards and vineyards, at a time when we are already seriously embarrassed by overproduction in many lines.' Reclamation and irrigation, therefore, must be forthwith abandoned, and multitudes of other farmers must make up their minds to quit farming or let their fields lie fallow.

"And the second proposal, in its prospect of immediate relief, is like unto the first. It has not even the merit of novelty, for it consists in remitting the consideration of the entire problem to an 'impartial, non-partisan, competent commission under economic guidance.' This commission is to 'suggest means' of protecting agriculture from inequality with other industries, and until a specific plan has emanated from such a tribunal the question cannot be properly considered or discussed.

"If such a commission is needed now, why was it not needed a year ago, and why was the suggestion of its appointment delayed until the eve of election day? The patient seems in a fair way to die before the doctors have finished their diagnosis.

Duties of Men in Office.

"I believe that it is the duty of men in office and the business of political parties to face responsibility and not to shirk it. Enough evidence has been already gathered to furnish a basis for Congressional action. If it has not, there is something lacking in the administration of the department of agriculture which exists for that purpose. What the Republican administration is seeking to evade is a decision on matters of principle, and from this no commission can furnish an escape."

Davis then gave his specific proposals for farm relief, adding that it was equally important

Illinois has been added to the group of states which John W. Davis hopes to see in the Democratic column next November. Before starting on his tour of the trans-Mississippi grain belt the Democratic standard bearer consulted many of the leaders as to conditions, which they assured him were most encouraging. Left to right those in the picture are: Edward P. Allan, Val. S. Campbell, Congressman H. T. Rainey, John W. Davis, Lincoln Dixon, V. Y. Dallman apd Bruce A. Campbell.

75,000 Welcome World Flyers in Boston Harbor

made fast. A naval launch went out to meet them.

The shores along the five-mile front was lined with thousands of spectators, many of whom hurled their hats into the air and waved American flags as one launch picked up the aviators and a second gathered luggage that they had carried 26,000 miles.

Nelson Embraced by Brother.

Gen. Patrick then introduced the flyers with the words:

"It gives me the greatest pleasure to introduce the men who made the first air flight around the world."

It was only six minutes after their arrival on the barge when they set foot upon the land of the Boston airport.

As they started to walk off the barge there was an affecting scene as Gunnar Nelson, who had flown here from Dayton, O., embraced his brother, Erik.

Start From Mere Point, Me., Delayed by Gasoline.

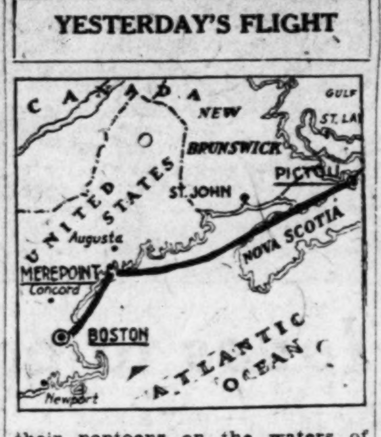
By the Associated Press.

MERE POINT, Me., Sept. 6.—The round-the-world flyers hopped off today at 12:07 p. m. (Eastern daylight saving time) for Boston, after remaining safely at anchor overnight here, where they were forced down by fog late yesterday. The weather conditions were almost perfect for the 120-mile jump to Boston.

The start from here to Boston was delayed this morning by discovery that their gasoline supply was short of the amount that Lieut. Smith felt necessary to supply the necessary margin of safety. Seventy-five gallons was sent to Brunswick, seven miles away.

The airmen slept in scattered cottages in this little summer colony, while their planes bobbed on their pontoons on the waters of Maquoit Bay on the west side of Mere Point. The sun rose in a clear sky and a light breeze rippled the ocean.

YESTERDAY'S FLIGHT



Flyers Up Early.

The fliers were up at 7 o'clock, daylight time, and took a simple breakfast with the overnight hosts. Lieut. Smith and Arnold were at the home of Nelson P. Chance of Belmont, Mass., Lieut. Nelson and Harding stayed with Capt. Solen E. Turner of New York City and Lieut. Wade was the guest of Prof. F. W. Brown of Bowdoin College.

Lieut. Smith and Arnold were ahead of their fellow fliers and went out to the Chicago, the flagship of the fleet, while the crews of the other two planes were at breakfast.

"Good People" Thanked.

Before leaving the shore in separate small rowboats, the flight commander and his associate thanked the "good people" as he put it, "who put us up overnight."

It was discovered that the water pump of the Boston II was leaking and a fresh supply of water was put aboard. The minor repairs necessary will be made at Boston.

YOUTHS' TRAIN ROBBERY HOAX RESULTS IN DEPUTY'S DEATH

"Tip" Led to Firing on Three Men Stealing Ride and Officers Were Wounded.

By the Associated Press.

HUTCHINSON, Kan., Sept. 6.—One man is dead as the result of a train robbery hoax perpetrated by two Rossville youths last Tuesday night. Ora Lewis, 34 years old, a special deputy, died at Liberal last night from wounds received when officers secreted behind a box car at Meade, Kan., opened fire on three Mexicans who were stealing a ride on the Rock Island's Golden State Limited, and who were erroneously believed to be train robbers.

The Sheriff of Meade County was "tipped off" that an attempt would be made to rob the train at Meade. He swore in a number of deputies and awaited its coming. In the confusion following the train's arrival, Lewis and L. Keeney, another deputy, were wounded. Keeney is expected to recover.

BANKRUPT AMUNDSEN'S MAIN ASSET IS DRIFTING IN ARCTIC

And It, His Ship, the Maud, Is Out of Communication With World and Value Is Not Known.

By the Associated Press.

CHRISTIANIA, Sept. 6.—Roald Amundsen, Arctic explorer, who filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, has definitely canceled his projected aerial trip to the North Pole and has requested that his estate be placed under a public receivership so that he can get his financial difficulties straightened out in full view of the public. He considers himself solvent. Very little is known of the explorer's financial affairs.

His vessel, the Mau, which is now drifting across the Polar basin, is mentioned as his main asset, but her value is unknown. She has ben out of wireless communication since early spring and it is believed it will be impossible to get in touch with her until December.

It is believed that one of the creditos is the explorer's brother, Leon, and that 10 of them are Americans. Their names will not be made public until a creditors' meeting Sept. 18.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 6.—Trial of E. L. Sanford, indicted president of the defunct Holland Banking Co. of ESpringfield, on a charge of assenting to deposits when the bank was in a failing condition, will be continued when the case is called tomorrow in the Henry County Circuit Court at Clinton, where it was taken on a change of venue, according to information received by the State Finance Department from its attorieys in Springfield. The case probably will be passed to the next term of court, it was said.

A fund of several thousand dollars is being raised in Springfield to provide special assistants for Prosecuting Attorney Harold Lincoln of Greene County in prosecuting the Holland Bank cases, it was learned. Attorneys declined to name the donors of the contributions, or the total to be raised, but admitted that depositors in the banks and other persons in Springfield were participating.

31 MEN FINED ON LIQUOR LAW CHARGES

Judge English Imposes No Jail Sentences Bceause of Crowded Docket.

The leniency of Federal Judge English Friday in assessing fines against eight confessed liquor law violators caused 31 St. Clair County saloonkeepers, arrested last spring on information furnished by paid Ku Klux Klan liquor investigators in the klan's liquor campaign, to plead guilty yesterday to similar charges before Judge English in East St. Louis. All escaped jail sentences, receiving fines ranging from $100 to $600. The total amount of fines assessed was $12,275.

Charges against all those pleading yesterday were sale and possession of intoxicating liquor and maintenance of a common nuisance. In each instance the nuisance count was dismissed because the saloons since have been padlocked by the Government for one year.

Various circumstances caused the amounts of the fines to differ. Judge English being particularly lenient with violators who had large families to support. The heaviest fines were assessed against those who told the court they had not done anything since they quit the saloon business.

The crowded condition of the docket was responsible for the leniency of Judge English, Federal Court attaches have stated. More than 600 cases, a large number of them liquor cases, are pending. Approximately 300 were made by the klan investigators. Some of the klan cases were disposed of at the May term, those being found guilty or who pleaded guilty to the charges at that time having received long jail sentences and heavy fines.

Those who pleaded guilty yesterday and the fines assessed against each were: W. J. Henderson, $500; Frank Alex, $150; Henry Zittle, $400; J. S. Ziscus, $200; James Caros, $200; Stanley Klick, $200; W. P. Hilton, $425; Raney Johnson, $200; Joe Gurcis, $300; Martin Pawlekiewiecw, $300; Herman H. Bauer, $450; R. E. Farrell, $450; George Feurer, $300; Otto Haubrich, $300; Cy Desnoir, $400; Frank Bihss, $500; John Kapustis, $500; Mrs. John Kapustis, $100; William Kapustis, $250; Patrick O'Keefe, $550; John P. Sullivan, $300; Frank Payeur, $400; Toots Joeffray, $400; George Mertz, $400; Joe Garwoda, $500; J. W. Smith, $500; Leo Lynch, $250; John Kocet, $300; Tony Smith, $500; Chester Laskowski, $400, and Louis Bukauskis, $500.

Local Postal Receipts Show Gain.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Although August, 1924, had only 26 business days, whereas the same month last year had 27, the St. Louis postal receipts for August, 1924 were $843,359.53, while in August, 1923, they were $824,876.18. The gain was $18,483.35, or 2.24 per cent. Comparative receipts from the 50 largest cities showed a decrease of $79,201.89 or .35 per cent.

Unauthorized Solicitor of Funds.

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 6.—Frank A. Harrison, regional campaign manager for the La Follette-Wheeler presidential campaign, today made public a telegram from Robert M. La Follette Jr., son of the presidential candidate, declaring Bert Martin, Denver, Colo., is soliciting funds for the campaign without authorization of the Wisconsin Senator's managers.

ARMED ROBBER TAKES $300 WEEKLY PAYROLL

The office of hte Hyde Heating & Metal Works, 4854 Page boulevard, was held up and the cashier robbed of $300, the plant's weekly payroll, at 10:40 a. m. yesterday by a well-dressed young man whose face was partly obscured by a pair of large amber colored glasses.

After obtaining the money, the robber ran out and disappeared. The police believe a companion may have been waiting nearby in an automobile, but search of the neighborhood failed to disclose a trace of the robber.

Miss Adele Honig, 20 years old, of 4446 Swan avenue, cashier and bookkeeper for the concern, was alone in the office and had just completed filling the weekly pay envelopes when the highwayman entered, flourishing a revolver.

"Hand over that money," he demanded, and Mss Honig surrendered the envelopes. When he had fled out the front door, the cashier called James T. Hyde, one of the proprietors, and several employes who were in the rear of the building, but the intruder had vanished.

M'ADOO REQUESTS SPEAKING ENGAGEMENTS FOR DAVIS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—William Gibbs McAdoo, one of the chief contenders in the New York convention for the Democratic presidental nomination, will begin a speaking campaign for John W. Davis, as soon as he lands in New York from his European visit. A request from McAdoo, received today by the Democratic National Committee asked that speaking engagements be made across the continent for him beginning immediately upon his return to this country, about Sept. 22.

At the same time the National headquarters announced that William Jennings Bryan had accepted engagements for speaking in the West and Northwest. Bryan is expected to carry the party standard into the states of Washington, Idaho, Oregon, Nevada, California, Colorado, Nebraska and New Mexico.

Other speakers soon to take the stump and for whom the committee is preparing schedules include Newton D. Baker, Gov. Alfred E. Smith, Josephus Daniels, Bainbridge Colby, E. T. Meredith and many Democratic Senators.

Clem L. Shaver, chairman of the National Committee, and campaign manager for Mr. Davis said today it was indicated by present plans that the presidential nominee would not visit California or other Pacific Coast states.

'DEMOCRATIC POMP' URGED FOR GERMANY'S PRESIDENT

Ebert Not Surrounded by Enough Gold Lace and Ceremony, His Supporters Assert.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 6.—President Ebert is not surrounded by enough gold lace and ceremony to demand the homage that is due the chief executive, in the opinion of many of his supporters, and an effort is being made to develop "democratic pomp" along the lines used in the United States and France to dignify their Presidents.

When President Ebert first occupied the imperial box at the State opera the audience did not rise and greet him. This lack of courtesy, which was attributed largely to the ignorance of the Germans as to how to treat their President, has been overcome; but President Ebert goes about in an automobile with other officials without naval and military aids or naval escort to enable the public to identify him.

Baron von Reibnitz, former Minister of Mecklenburg, in a newspaper article recently, said that the solemn manner in which the President of the United States and his Cabinet made their appearance on all public occasions always had been very impressive and he urgea the German republic to establish a bureau of ceremonies. As the Weimar Constitution gives no directions in this respect, it would be necessary to work out plans under which a cavalry escort and many uniformed aids might be utilized on state occasions.

DROP MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

Kansas City Driver Still Held for Leaving Scene of Accident.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 6.—A charge of manslaughter against Walter Martin, 17-year-old motor car driver, in connection with the death of Charles Cahill, July 15, was dismissed today by James Anderson, Assistant Prosecutor, in compliance with a suggestion made by Judge E. E. Porterfield of the Juvenile Court.

Two new accusations were filed against the youth. One charges him with careless driving and the other with leaving the scene of an accident.

2-CENT CUT IN GASOLINE PRICE

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 6.—The Standard Oil Company late today announced a 2-cent reduction in the price of gasoline at its filling stations here. The reduction probably will be placed in effect tomorrow.

The new price will be 14.9 cents, including the 1-cent tax here and and 13.9 cents in Kansas City, Kan. where gasoline tax is not yet in effect.

WILL DROP BIGAMY CHARGE AGAINST WIFE

Millard Goldsmith and New York Show Girl Compromise Their Differences.

Millard Goldsmith and his wife decided yesterday not to let a charge of bigamy disturb their friendly relations. Goldsmith, who is salesmanager for the Barnes-Crosby Co., engravers, accused Mrs. Goldsmith, who was Mrs. Bessie Harvey Weir, New York showgirl, of having married him when she knew her first husband, Berl Weir was alive.

She left for New York last spring and resisted through habeas corpus proceedings his attempt to have her brought back. Then she changed her mind and voluntarily returned to St. Louis Friday afternoon to answer the charges. She gave bond of $500 at Clayton for her appearance at a preliminary hearing at Clayton Tuesday.

Willing to Drop Charge.

Yesterday Goldsmith summoned a Post-Dispatch reporter to his wife's suite at Hotel Jefferson and gave the following statement in her presence:

"I shall dismiss the charges against Mrs. Goldsmith. I have come to the conclusion that she was sincere in believing her first husband dead when she married me. We have talked things over and have cleared up all the troubles between us.

"My wife intends to return to New York after the case here is disposed of. I shall go to Colorado for my health. I am sure that the authorities here will not press the charge when I tell them I am convinced absoluetely in her sincerity.

Woman to Continue Career.

Mrs. Weir-Goldsmith added her statement:

"Our marriage will be annulled, of course. I am going on with my career. I shall leave for New York where I have been offered contracts by Ziegfeld and Dillingham."

Neither would say whether they planned to remarry after Mrs. Goldsmith is free from her first marriage. She married Weir, a sailor, when she was 14 and he deserted her. Afterwards she heard he was dead. In 1923 she married Goldsmith after 10 days' acquaintance. She is 21 years old. He is 44.

TRAFFIC ON DELMAR TO BE BLOCKED 3 MONTHS

Pedestrians, However, May Cross River des Peres at Wabash Tracks Oct. 7.

Replying to complaints of traffic delays and dangers to pedestrians, caused by city construction work at Delmar boulevard and the Wabash tracks, L. R. Bowen, chief engineer of the city Department of Bridges and Buildings, today said pedestrian traffic over the River des Peres at that point will be resumed about Oct. 7. Vehicles, aside from street cars, which now pass over a temporary trestle built by the United Railways, will not be able to cross the river there for three or four months.

Residents and business men in that neighborhood repeatedly have requested that a temporary foot bridge be placed across the river as a matter of convenience and safety. Under present conditions a person walking on Delmar from Rosedale avenue to Hodiamont avenue, about 1000 feet, finds it necessary to detour three blocks south to Kingsbury avenue and return, or five blocks north to Olive Street road and return. To avoid this, some are paying to ride the 1000 feet on a street car, or, in spite of warnings, are walking across the street car trestle.

Says Delays are Unavoidable.

Bowen said the city had considered erection of a special foot bridge, as suggested by the Delmar-Skinker Improvement Association, but had decided it would be dangerous and would cost too much, about $1000. President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, who would have the final word in this matter, is now out of the city.

Bowen explained the traffic delays are incidental to construction of a culvert for the river, and asserted they could not be avoided. The placing of the culvert is part of the general plan to close in and straighten the River des Peres and check its rampages at flood time. The contract cost of the culvert is $150,000.

The Wabash Railroad grade crossing at Delmar boulevard is to be eliminated, also, but the date is uncertain. The city has contended for a depressed railroad crossing with pedestrian and vehicular traffic on a viaduct, while the Wabash has insisted on an elevated crossing for its trains. The dispute is now before the State Supreme Court on an appeal by the Wabash.

Part of Work Completed.

Pending a decision, the city let the contract for the culvert on its own initiative. It hopes, however, that ultimately the Wabash will share the cost on a 60—40 basis—60 per cent to be paid by the Wabash and 40 per cent by the city.

Work on the culvert has been completed partially, and has reached the stage where Delmar boulevard is blocked by a huge pile of excavated earth. Street cars are being rerouted over the completed portion, north of the boulevard and closer to the Delmar Station of the Wabash. Motor busses are detouring to the south. And business, merchants complain, is also detouring. The old bridge wasn't much to look at, but its return is eagerly awaited.

VERDICT OF ACCIDENT IN CASE OF MAN KILLED BY AUTO

Coroner's Jury Exonerates Melvin Hamble in Death of Lewis Shoenfeld, Merchant.

A Coroner's verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday in the case of Lewis Shoenfeld, 64 years old, a merchant, of 1404 Francis street, who died at city hospital Friday of skull fracture and other injuries suffered Tuesday night when struck by an automobile as he was crossing the street in front of 3503 Easton avenue.

The verdict exonerated Melvin Hamble, 2906 Gamble street, driver of the automobile. Hamble testified he was driving in the street car tracks, because other automobiles were parked along the north curb, from which Shoenfeld stepped before being hit. Hamble said he did not see Shoenfeld until after his car had struck something, when he stopped and saw the man lying in the street.

Hamble's wife, Josephine, also in the automobile, testified she saw Shoenfeld just a second before he walked in front of the moving car.

The first financial statement ued in detail ever made public arding a Municipal Theater duction was given out yester- by Guy Golterman, director of performances of "Carmen" ch came to an end last Monday ght.

The report shows that this d opera production exceeded previous records of cash ticket at the theater in Forest k, with a total of $38,224.75. ticket sales for the first seven formances amounted to $36,- The previous record for sev- performances was held by "The rry Widow," which in 1923 had icket sale of $36,007.23.

Three performances on Aug. 27, and 29, surpassed in ticket sales banner evening of the Muni- Theater Association's season, ich returned $6008 for the July production of "The Bohemian l." On the three evenings of d opera mentioned, the ticket were $6101.75, $6532.50 and 499.

Adding to the ticket sale the m of $595.88, derived from con- sions, the total receipts of the terprise are stated to be $38,- 20.63. The total expenditures are med as $38,598.09, leaving a sur- us of $222.54. This sum, accord- to Golterman, will be turned er to the city.

Attendance About 60,000.

In a letter sent yesterday to rk Commissioner Pape, Golter- n estimated the total attend- , including that in the free ts, at 60,000. "The closest scrut- ," continued Golterman, "will al absolutely nothing paid to for my personal use," and he ed:

"I could not be expected to un- rtake another season of grand ra unaided and alone. How- r, a number of influential men volunteered their support for season next year, and at the per time I shall apply to you the use of the theater for the sentation of three popular d operas within the period of weeks."

The ticket sales for the respec- performances are stated as fol- : Sunday, Aug. 24, $3348.75; nday, $3958.50; Tuesday, 99.50; Wednesday, $6101.75; rsday, $6532.50; Friday, $6499; rday, $5119, and Monday, Sept. $1355.75. The concludng per- mance was the only one dis- bed by unfavorable weather.

The income from concessions in- des $250 from program adver- ng, and commissions of $225 $120.88, respectively, on the e of librettos and the rental of hions.

Overhead Costs Large.

In discussing the financial as- t of the season, Golterman inted out that his overhead ts—such as organization ex- nse and traveling outlay for the incipals—were concentrated upon week instead of being divided r two months or more, and that orchestra was paid not accord- to the light opera scale but that grand opera, which is twice as ch.

The report shows no allotment of fit or salary to Golterman him- f; but against the expense ac- nt are charged his use of an omobile, at $260, including $110 repairs; half of three months' of an office in Aeolian Hall, w York, $345; three months' vice of a stenographer in New rk, $300; telegrams amounting $190; and a conference in Chi- o with executives of the produc- n, $90. These items total $1185.

The broad items of expense are ted as follows: Salaries of artists, nductors and stage managers, th their railroad and hotel ex- nses, $14,790.43; salaries of mu- ians and cost of hauling instru- nts, $5697; pay of stage hands, rpenters, electricians, and prop- ty department, $4276.78; adver- ing, printing and publicity, 098.58; production, costumes, enery, properties and music, 370.02; and miscellaneous, 65.28. The amount listed as iscellaneous" includes flowers the singers, which cost $196; s for extra dressing rooms, car- for Boy Scout ushers, salaries ticket sellers, and several simi- items.

In making public his salary list, lterman said he wished to ex- n that the directors and artists pted less than their customary because of their interest in the e of grand opera at the St. is Municipal Theater.

Salazar Received $2000.

Manuel Salazar, according to the tement, received $2000 for sing- seven performance of the role Don Jose. Frances Peralta re- ed $1000 or five performances the title part. Maria Luisa Es- r was paid $500 for three ap- rances as Carmen. Elda Vet- received $500 for eight per mances as Micaela. Ulysses Lap- , who had only one performance Don Jose, received $320. The ries of other singers are given follows: Mario Valle, $400; Max tsieff, $200; James Wolf, 0; Ludovico Oliviero, $150; Francesco Curci, $190; Natale Cervi, $300; Gladys Swarthout, $150 and Elizabeth Kerr, $150. These amounts also include the services of the singers at the concert given last Sunday night at the Odeon.

Ernest Knoch, for five weeks' training of the local chorus and his services as director, received $550. Isaac Van Grove's pay for similar services during two weeks was $400. Oscar Condon was paid $350 for aiding in training the chorus during four weeks. Oscar Sanne, stage director, received $250. Florence Rudolph, who danced at seven performances, was paid $200; and Giuseppe Bonfiglio, for training the ballet and dancing at every performance, received $800. The chorus and ballet served without pay.

T. Tomarchio, a tenor from Chicago, who did not appear at any performance, but was held in reserve in case Salazar might be unable to endure the strain, received $140; and eight professional choristers from the Chicago Opera Co. were paid $593.40.

For railroad transportation of principals and directors, a sum of $2054.89 is entered, and for their hotel expenses and the barbecue on Labor day at the Municipal Theater, $2612.54. Golterman also provided taxicab service for the artists and some of the chorus at a cost of $479.60. Mme. Escobar's railway fare to and from Mexico City was included in her fee of $500. The orchestra of 68 men, including five who played backstage, was paid $5697.

Stage hands received $1830.50; electricians, $1285.25, and property men, $1161.03. Advertising in the daily newspapers amounted to $2005.30. Harry R. Burke was paid $200 for publicity work. Other items under the general head of publicity and printing, such as posters, tickets, window and bus cards and photographing, bring the total in this department to $6098.58.

A. Agnini, for stage drawings and models, received $300; Joseph Adamek, who designed the sets, was paid $450; and Toomey & Volland, who built the scenery, received $1320.58. Because of the roughness of the stage, the ballet was equipped with thick-soled shoes at a cost of $125. The horses ad drivers used in the last act cost $590.

This report, which was submitted yesterday to Mayor Kiel and Park Commissioner Pape, is certified to be correct by W. L. Zepp, an auditor.

DEATH IS PENALTY FOR KILLING MUSK DEER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Musk, the most penetrating and already one of the most costly substances used in "fixing" perfumes, may soon be dearer than rare jewels because the lamas of Tsarung, in Southeast Tibet have issued an edict that hunters caught killing musk deer will have their hands cut off and nailed on the temple doors, according to a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society. The bulletin quotes Dr. Joseph Rock, explorer for the society, who recently returned from an expedition to Chinese Tibet.

"The tiny musk deer, due to the perfumers' attempts to satisfy the demands of fashion, is becoming very scarce in this mountainous district which is the world's single source of highest grade natural musk," Dr. Rock said. "Growing scarcity of the deer led the lamas to restrict hunting. The musk sack, which is about the size of a crab-apple, occurs on the belly of the male of the species. Since there are about five females to every male, many must be caught to secure a small quantity of musk. The traps either kill or fatally maim all deer caught, so that hunting reduces the number of potential reproducing members of the species very rapidly.

"The musk deer are very small, approximately the size of a goat. When a male is killed the sack is removed and in its natural state, is wrapped in tin foil and shipped in strong, silk-covered boxes. One representative of a French perfume concern has lived on the border of Tibet for 20 years for the sole purpose of buying musk from native hunters. Even at the source of supply in this remote district, musk is very costly.

Necessary for Perfumes.

"Musk is a necessary element of nearly all high-grade perfumes," continues the bulletin. "Ordinarily the layman cannot detect it because it is used as a base to carry the more perishable and less penetrating floral perfumes such as rose, lilac, violet and lily of the valley. The only other source of natural musk is the Altai Mountains in Mid-Asia, but the product from [illegible] of this range is much inferior to Tsarung musk. Since this scent has long been one of the essentials of perfume and has always been costly it was one of the first to be manufactured synthetically. But the manufactured grades now available do not measure up to the natural product and are only used in cheaper perfumes. Natural musk is said to be so penetrating and so capable of retaining its strength that an infinitesimal bit will scent a large room for more than two years.

"Despite the lamas' decree with its terrible penalty there will probably be some bootlegging in musk. Increasing scarcity of the musk deer and the edict are expected to combine, however, to send prices sky high.

"Innumerable flower scents are used by perfumers in their art, but only four animal perfumes are regularly employed. Scarcely could more diverse creatures be conceived than the four represented on the perfumer's shelves; nor more diverse habitats, nor more diverse corners of the earth as sources of supply.

Fortunes in Ambergris.

"In addition to the musk deer, there is the pot-whale of the Indian Ocean which supplies ambergris, the beaver of Canada and Siberia which supplies castor and civet cat of Abyssinia and India which supplies civet. These animals represent the mountains, the seas, the tropical jungles and Arctic swamps.

"Ambergris is to the mariner what a huge gold nugget is to a prospector. Its origin is somewhat obscure but it is a fatty substance believed to be formed in the intestines of the pot-whale. Usually it is found floating in the ocean or cast up on the shore; a piece as large as a man's fist is regarded as a great find. Many an old New England skipper dreamed of finding a piece of ambergris and retiring from his stern calling to a comfortable farm in the New England countryside, for a 'nugget' of ambergris is worth a small fortune.

"Like musk, civet and castor occur in small sacks, but in the latter cases on the bellies of the civet cat and beaver respectively. The best civet is said to come from Abyssinia and the best castor from Siberia. Civet is used more extensively than castor.

Natural Odor Offensive.

"No animal perfume is used by itself. In the natural state the overpowering, concentrated odor is disgusting to most people. Travelers who have witnessed the removal of the scent glands from captured civet cats in Abyssinia describe the atmosphere in the immediate vicinity as hard on occidental noses as the odor of skunk. Perfumers dissolved the natural substance of animal odors and dilute it hundreds of times until the scent is barely observable. This diluted substance, however, works wonders with the floral scents; it not only magnifies their natural fragrance, but also serves to make more permanent perfumes which would become weak with age.

NEGROES IN NORTH URGED TO REFRAIN FROM LUXURIES

Convention in Washington Adopts "Address to Country," Calling on Them to Be Good Citizens.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Negroes who have migrated into northern sections from the South are called upon, in an "address to the country," adopted at the concluding sessions of Lott Carey Baptist Foreign Mission convention, "to deport themselves in such a manner as not to bring reproach upon their race. It urges that they "refrain from spending their money on luxuries and pleasures, and buy homes, erect business houses and strive in every way to make good, law-abiding citizens of themselves."

The convention, which ended with a meeting attended by 600 delegates last night, expressed "regret to find that the spirit of unjust treatment which characterizes much of the South is finding its way into some of the northern communities," and appealed "to the Christian conscience of the North and West for fair play."

Membership in labor organizations was recommended for negroes, with a warning against those having "anarchistic and soviet tendencies," and enforcement of the prohibition laws was advocated.

Heiress Tires of Screen Career.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 6.—Thelma Morgan Converse, 18 years old, daughter of Harry Hay Morgan, American Consul General to Belgium, who quit society to become a motion picture actress, has abandoned her screen career, it was learned here today by the Los Angeles Examiner. The heiress, after playing in two pictures, found the films to be too much work and too little play, says the Examiner.

Ten Reasons Why Your Next Cabinet Should Be a McDougall

1 It is reinforced, inside the corners of the base, with steel arms—it can never wobble or grow loose.

2 It is finished in the purest, most lustrous washable white enamel, or rich oak, or delicately beautiful French gray.

3 It comes in a wide variety of patterns—some large, some small—each with its individual conveniences—ALL modestly priced.

4 It has the sliding, locking, non-porous Porceliron table top—won't scratch or chip; will not buckle, is wonderful upon which to roll dough, cut bread, wash dishes, ice cake.

5 It has every convenience—lowering flour bin, with sifter; racks for pots and pans, trays, drawers, hooks for bills and scissors, velvet lined cutlery drawers, food chopper block, and thirty other features, so that you wonder how they all could have been created—and each SO necessary and convenient.

6 It has more storage space than the average pantry. Deep, wide, spacious shelves.

7 It has shelves mortised into walls, for strength. All joints mortised, tenoned and glued—not merely screwed.

8 It has the Auto-Front curtain—a touch of the finger and it disappears, adding 400 cubic inches of unobstructed work table space right before you.

9 It has easy-cleaned, sun-lit base construction. All the drawers and top instantly removed for airing.

Why Not Buy A Holland Furnace In the First Place—

Avoid All the Bother of a Replacement

You will be interested in the fact that only a small proportion of our business consists of new house work.

Although we do more furnace business than all of our competitors combined in many of the cities in which we are established, and are much the World's Largest Installers of Furnaces, yet our business is largely that of replacing the thousands of cheap, inadequate jobs that are continually being put in the new houses—houses that are built by men who build them to sell instead of to live in.

You see we get the business in the end, anyway, but why go through the ordeal of installing another heating system in a house only two, four or six years after the house is built? Why not get a Holland in the first place?

That way you save fuel as well as inconvenience. You have comfort. Your home-furnishings have protection. Your house is worth more to sell or rent. And you don't go to the expense of replacement.

We make the furnace—the trained men who install it are directly and solely responsible to us for performance and we relieve you of all risk and worry.

Every day more and more people are insisting upon Holland Furnaces for their new homes. They see the folly of permitting a contractor or anyone else to put in a temporary, unsatisfactory heating system when they can have a permanent Holland system upon a definitely guaranteed basis. And people do enjoy the healthfulness of circulated air as provided by the Holland system. It is as essential to health as pure water or clean food.

Holland Service is Standard In All Branches Listed Below

For the Holland user who lives near one of the cities listed below, it is a matter of keen satisfaction that his friends and relatives in the distant cities can have the same service and that the World's Largest Installers of Furnaces will be directly and solely responsible whether in Denver or Philadelphia or Minneapolis or any of the cities listed.

The Holland costs only a trifle more than so many of the furnaces that are being put into new houses. And the difference is made up the first year. You can buy on the easy payment plan if you prefer.

We'll gladly give you exact information about a Holland System for your own home—old or new. You will not be obligated in any way.

Free Book "The Whole House Comfortable and Clean" is an attractive book—a guide you should have in furnace buying. Send the coupon to us or get in touch with the nearest Holland Branch today. No matter how many furnaces we make, their installation depends entirely upon the number of trained men available.

Patterson Wins From Frenchman

Beats Borotra in Deciding Match in Straight Sets by Scores of 6—3, 6—1, 6—3.

PLAY AMERICA IN CHALLENGE ROUND

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 6.—Australia gained the right to play the United States in the Davis Cup challenge match at Philadelphia, Sept. 11, 12 and 13, by winning one of the two singles match from France in the interzone final here today. It was Gerald Patterson, captain of the Australian team, who scored the point that gave Australia its winning margin.

Patterson defeated Jean Borotra, champion of England and France in the first match of the day on the courts of the Longwood Cricket Club, in straight sets, 6—3, 6—1, 6—3. This gave the Australians three points and assured them a place in the challenge round.

In the second match of the day, Rene Lacoste, the 20-year-old French star, was the victor over Pat O'Hara Wood, 8—10, 6—1, 6—1, 6—4. The victory gave Lacoste [illegible] over both the Australians in the singles matches.

Borotra's Service Broken.

Two service breaks marked the opening of the first set, Patterson's delivery being broken at love because of the brilliancy of his opponent's passing shots, while the Frenchman yielded after deuce had been touched four times. Games then followed service to 4-3 in Patterson's favor, but Borotra's service was broken in the eighth game, despite that a net cord shot enabled him to deuce it.

Patterson quickly ran into a lead of four-love in the second set and eventually won it at 6-1 to establish a two-set lead. Borotra was playing dispiritedly, showing evidence that the soft condition of the ground was not to his liking.

The French player lacked confidence and he was quickly routed. [illegible] at 4—3, service was the deciding factor to two-all, the "Bounding Basque" doing well to pull out the fourth game after trailing at love-30. Two service breaks then followed, but the [illegible] of Patterson to square matters at 3-all, after Borotra had led 3-2, shook the Frenchman's confidence and he was kuickly routed in the next three games. It required just 54 minutes for the Australian captain to win.

La Coste Beats Wood.

After facing set point five times in the twelfth and fourteenth games O'Hara Wood finally won the first set from Lacoste, 10—8.

La Coste squared the match by winning the second set at 6—1.

The tactics which O'Hara Wood employed so successfully against Borotra on Thursday were unavailing throughout the greater part of his match with La Coste because the Paris boy's ground strokes are stronger than those of his fellow-countryman.

O'Hara Wood won the opening game of the third set, but La Coste [illegible] a back-court struggle, took the next six in a row and led two sets to one. The stamina of the [illegible]-year-old Melbourne player apparently had been sapped by his strenuous efforts of the opening [illegible].

La Coste won the fourth set, [illegible]

The French youth ran into a lead of 4-love in the fourth set, but his service then was broken twice in succession. O'Hara Wood did not hold his own delivery in the eighth game to make the score [illegible], but succeeded in winning the ninth to make the set, 5—4 in favor of the Frenchman. By brilliant volleying O'Hara Wood was within a point of leading at 6—5, but Lacoste's stroke production was too prolific to yield the advantage. Lacoste then broke through in the twelfth game to make his singles record clear for the day.

Brooklyn's Streak Of Victories Ends; O'Neil's Hit Wins

Wild Throw by Pitcher Decatur Puts Braves' Winning Run on Second Base.

BOSTON, Sept. 6.—Brooklyn's sensational winning streak was broken this afternoon when Boston, after losing the first game, 1—0, meat Art Decatur in 10 innings, 5—4, in the final game.

The Dodgers had put across 15 straight wins and had taken 11 games this week before meeting defeat in the extra inning. High's double off Genewich in the first half of the overtime frame and Wheat's single had put Brooklyn ahead, 4—3. In the Boston half Thomas led off with a single. Decatur stopped Wilson's line drive, but when he recovered it he threw wierdly to left field and Thomas went to third and Wilson to second. Stengel's single to short center let Thomas score the tying run. McInnis was passed purposely. Tierney flied foul to Fournier, but Wilson just slid in under Taylor with the winning run on O'Neil's sacrifices to center, not a good throw by Brown.

The first game was a brilliant duel between Coney and Doak, with Boston getting two hits and Brooklyn four. The only run was in the seventh, when Brown got an infield single with one out, was forced by Stock, who scored on Griffith's triple to right.

Between games the Winthrop Lodge of Elks unveiled, with the assistance of Christy Mathewson, a memorial tablet to Norman "Tony" Boeckel, Braves' third baseman, who died as the result of an auto accident last winter.

EVANS THIRD, HELD FOURTH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—William E. Mehlhorn of St. Louis won the Western Open Golf championship at the Calumet Country Club, making a spectacular finish by scoring a record breaking 34 for the last nine holes, giving him 73 for the afternoon round and a total of 293 for the 72 holes of competition.

Al Watrous of Grand Rapids, with 301, finished in second place, eight strokes behind Mehlhorn. Chic Evans, former national amateur and open champion, gained third honors with 302, while Eddie Held of the Algonquin Golf Club landed fourth place with 303. Thus two of the first four are amateurs.

Al Espinosa, playing with Evans, scored 304 and went into a tie for fifth place with Leo Diegel and Jack Burke.

Among the first few players to finish the 72-hole grind, Jack Burke, St. Paul, had a score of 304. He acquired his 76 for the final round by holing a long spoon shot on the eighteenth for an eagle three. John Black of Wichita, bettered this final round score by two strokes which gave him a total of 307 to tie with Laurie Ayton of Chicago.

Jock Hutchison, who won the title last year at Memphis, improved his game considerably today, scoring a 75 and a 74, but owing to mediocre golf on the first two rounds, he had a total of 305.

Paddock Ties Record in 100, Establishes New Mark in 220 In Beating Murchison Twice

St. Louisan Leads for 70 Yards in Century, but Loses When Californian Spurts, Leconey Finishing Third—Illinois A. C. Wins A. A. U. Team Championship.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 6.—Charles W. Paddock was vindicated here today when he won both the 100 and the 220 yard dash events, tieing the world record in the century and establishing a new American record in the 220, which he ran in 20 4.5 seconds.

The Paddock-Murchison duel in the 100-yard dash was the piece de resistance of the National A. A. U. track and field meet being held here on Colgate Field. The great sprinters had not met on an Eastern out-door track since 1920, and in the interim Paddock had been the butt of much caustic criticism because of his reluctance to come East and prove that he was the "world's fastest human."

Pressing forward under the necessity of catching Murchison, who had shot away to his characteristic fast start, Paddock ran the 100 yards in 9 3-5 seconds to win the race. In the 220 he came from behind to tie the International Federation record of 20 4-5 seconds, a mark which has not been hitherto accepted by the American A. A. U.

The Illinois A. C. won team honors today with 43 points. The New York A. C. was second with 33, Newark A. C. third with 31, and Boston A. A. fourth with 20 points.

Joie Ray, Illinois A. C., eight times National champion in the one mile run, ran a poor sixth in the event today. Ray challenged on the third lap when he took the lead but fell back when Ray Buker set the pace. Edward Kirby made a splendid try to overtake Buker, but failed by two yards.

The Newark A. C. won the team score in the junior championship with the completion today of three events postponed from yesterday with a total of 40 points. The New York A. C. was second with 32 points and the Boston A. A. third with 28.

Sisler's Ace Trims Chicago With Ease; Thurston Batted Out

White Sox Get Nine Hits in First Game and Five in Second—Scores 6-2 and 6-2—Sisler Has a Good Day at Bat.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—Urban Shocker, iron men, tamed the White Sox today by pitching the Browns to a double victory over Evers' wards in the twin bill at Comiskey Park. Sisled's ace triumphed over Red Faber and Rip Connally in the opener, 6-2, thereby spoiling Faber's thirty sixth birthday anniversary, and after a brief rubdown came back for the second battle, winning from Hollis Thurston, Ted Blankenship and Leo Mangum, also by the count of 6-2.

In the first fracas, Shocker granted nine hits and one pass, fanning one batter. Errors committed by Gerber and McManus caused the Brownie headliner no trouble.

Five Hits in Second Game.

He worked with even greater effectiveness in the second combat, when he let down Johnny Evers' men with five wallops. The strain may have effected his flinging a trifle, for Shocker issued four bases on balls and two of the awards were mixed with a double and single in the sixth inning, when both local tallies were registered. Not a White Sox hatter fanned, however, in the nightcap.

The second battle was marked by the banishment of Kenneth Williams for protesting against a decision by Umpire Ormsby, when the former was thrown out at the plate by Hooper in the second inning, and the forced retirement of Marty McManus, who hurt his ankle when he tried to score after tearing off his third straight hit, a rousing double. He may not see action for a week.

Neither side scored during the first five innings of the initial battle. In the five innings Faber was touched for five swats, while Shocker yielded four.

Sisler Starts Rally.

In the sixth Sisler beat out a hit to Morehart and stopped at second on Williams' drive to center. McManus rammed a safety to left and Sisler registered. Then Jacobson lined to Falk. Gerber followed with a bounder to Kamm, but Eddie Collins dropped the perfect throw at second and Williams raced homeward on the error, McManus pausing at third. A double steal followed, McManus scoring when Crouse threw past third. The riot subsided with Rego lifting to Collins, and Shocker hoisting to Mostil.

The Sox got one marker in their half on Sheely's double to left, a single by Falk—his third straight hit—and Kamm's sacrifice fly to Williams. Morehart pushed a single through Sisler, only to be blotted out in a double play with Crouse, from McManus to Gerber to Sisler.

Three Runs Off Connally.

Faber stopped the enemy in the seventh while the South Siders put over another, and their last, in their half. Archdeacon, batting for Faber, walked and scored on Mostil's short double to right and a sacrifice fly by Hooper to Jacobson.

Connally pitched comically in the eighth. McManus and Jacobson bunched singles and Gerber forced Jake, grounding to Collins. Rice batted for Rego and was out, Connally to Moreheart to Sheely, while McManus scored. Shocker drew a pass and an error by Morehart spared Tobin, filling the bases. Robertson then injected a bingle to center, counting Gerber and Shocker. Kamm whipped out Sisler to close the rally.

Revenge Against Thurston.

The Browns fell upon Thurston in fierce fashion in the first inning of the second contest and dealt their former comrade a terrific mauling while partly squaring accounts for the five successive beatings he heaped upon them earlier in the campaign. Tobin, Robertson, Sisler, Williams and McManus all unbuckled singles in precisely that order, three runs counting. Evers then deemed it high time to introduce another flinger and Ted Blankenship was rushed from the bull pen. A pass to Jacobson filled the bases, but Mostil grabbed Gerber's liner and pegged to Crouse, doubling Williams at the plate, and Rego fouled to the Sox backstop, ending the inning.

Blankenship took quite a thumping in the second, two more runs crossing the plate. He opened by walking Shocker and after Tobin and Robertson had been retired, Sisler singled to left, Williams adding a swat to center that registered Shocker. McManus boomed one safety to left and Sisler tallied, but Williams was cut down, Falk to Crouse. Kenney emitted whoops of protest on Ormsby's decision and was banished, Evans supplanting him in left.

McManus Hurts Ankle.

A single by Hooper in the first and one by Falk, who succumbed in a double play in the second, constituted the swatting attack of the Hose in their first five periods. Evans socked a single to center and scored on McManus' double in the fifth. Then Jacobson skied to Mostil. Gerber sent a long fly to Hooper and McManus, trying to score, was doubled at the plate.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 6. — Two games were played today between the Cardinals and Pirates here. One was a good one, the other a farce, but the result was the same in each—the Rickeymen lost. The opener of the double bill was featured by good pitching by Johnny Stuart and Emil Yde, the sensational Buc southpaw. But errors behind the Cardinal pitcher gave the Bucs a 5—2 verdict. In the second contest, the Pirates slugged Haines and Rhem hard and were easy victors by a 12—5 score.

Hafey Misjudges Fly.

Had Johnny Stuart's support not proved sieve-like, the Cards might have taken the opener, but a misjudged drive in the first and errors in the seventh, accounted for four Pirates runs and, as the Cards could count only twice off Emil Yde, who hung up his thirteenth win of the season, the final score was 5—2.

Cuyler profited by Hafey's misjudgment and was credited with a homer in the first frame, Moore scoring ahead of him. The single run made by Pittsburg in the fourth was earned on Traynor's double and Grimm's one-bagger. In the seventh, the Bucs counted twice because Bottomley failed to hold an easy grounder sent to him by Gooch and because Hafey dropped a drive by Carey when he had it in his glove.

Yde Baffles Cards.

There was not much power to the attack of the Cardinals. In fact, for five innings, they were almost helpless before Yde. In the sixth, a pass to Toporcer, Bottomley's double and a timely wallop to left by Hafey gave the Rickeymen two. They threatened in the ninth when, with one out, Gonzales walked and Thevenow singled but Stuart and Neibergall, batting for Sherdel, lined out.

Jack Smith showed rare judgment by kicking himself out of the first game, the penalty being absence from the second also. This made Rickey send first Clough and later Sherdel, to the gardens with a southpaw operating for the Pirates. The game was played in the speedy time of an hour and 20 minutes, the weather being too cold to incline the players to do much loafing.

Second Game a Farce.

Haines started for Rickey in the second game, but that's about all he did for, after the Cardinals had slapped Meadows for a pair in the first inning on hits by Toporcer, Blades and Bottomley, Jess was kayoed when four solid swats by Moore, Carey, Cuyler and Maranville gave the home team four runs. Bell retired the side and Rhem faced the Bucs in the second, allowing a run on Bottomley's boot.

Then, the Cards drove Meadows out in the third. Toporcer singled and Blades fanned. Bottomley hit to left for a base, and after he had been forced by Hafey, Toporcer and Hafey counted on Myers' double to right. Pfeffer relieved Meadows and Clemons doubled Hi home with the tying run. Thevenow then fanned.

A pass to Maranville, a wild pitch and singles by Grimm and Schmidt manufactured a Buc run in the second half and sent them in the lead again.

A full house in the fourth with two down meant naught to the Cards as Hafey fouled out. Rhem passed Carey to start the Bucs' fourth and Max stole again. Cuyler's out moved him to third and he tallied on Wright's hit over first. Wright stole and Traynor tripled him over. Then Maranville hit a homer which scored two more Pirate runs. Grimm was good enough to fly out and Schmidt to pop to Thevenow.

Berley Pitches Well.

John Berley, rescued from Fort Smith and Spartansburg, S. C., worked three nice innings, beginning with the fifth and the Bucs couldn't count. Neither could the Cards, but then they were becoming used to that.

With one down in the Bucs' eighth, Carey singled, Cuyler hit a homer and Wright doubled off Berley. The net result was two more Pirate runs. The Cards did nothing on the ninth.

The Cards dashed for home immediately after the final game. They play the Cubs two games tomorrow in St. Louis.

Giants Break Even With Phils

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6.—The New York Giants maintained the shadow of a grip on the National League first place by winning the second game of today's doubleheader from the Phillies by the score of 16 to 14, after losing the first, 8 to 7.

Few games more weird are noted in baseball history than the doubleheader's second act. Lasting two hours and 47 minutes all told, it was an endurance race between the bats of the contending clubs and it was finally brought to a conclusion by a triple play.

Sarazen Confident He Will Retain His Professional Title

"I Am Hitting the Ball Better Than Ever," Writes Gene — Tournament Opens at French Lick Next Week.

By Gene Sarazen,
American Professional Champion.
(Copyright, 1924.)

Next week I will face the task of defending my title as American professional champion against the strongest field of players that will compete in any tournament this year, excepting the National Open. My assignment will be more severe than in medal play competition because I will have to defeat several of the game's most brilliant players in match play in order to win this title for the third successive time.

I am hopeful and I might say rather confident of accomplishing this feat, not because I have won the event the past two years, but because I know I am hitting the ball now probably better than ever before. That always inspires confidence in a player. I am anxious to win again because I feel sure I will then have established a new record in golf which is not likely to be equaled for years.

When one engages in a series of matches of 36 holes over an entire week against such stars as Walter Hagen, Jim Barnes, Jock Hutchison, Johnny Farrell, Leo Diegel, Mike Brady, Bill Mehlhorn, Bobby Cruickshank, Freddie McLeod and others, not only must a player be in fine condition, but he must be playing in top form. One bad round against any of the above named players and you are no longer a competitor in that particular tournament. Each of these players has the game, the nerve and the physical ability to win, and nothing but the very finest kind of golf will survive this test. For my own part, I think the professional championship of America is the hardest tournament of any in the world to win.

The Supreme Test.

French Lick Springs offers a wonderful test for this tournament. There is plenty of length to satisfy the long hitters and the course is remarkably well trapped. A missed shot on that layout means a certain penalty.

Mr. Thomas D. Taggart, perhaps better known as "Tom" Taggart, whom I have had the pleasure of meeting and who is the owner of French Lick, has donated $5000 for this event. The lure of a large share of this amount is sure to keep the boys stepping all the time.

Cyril Walker and Joe Kirkwood will be practically the only noted absentees. They failed to qualify in the preliminary test of the Metropolitan players at Quaker Ridge recently. Only 14 were eligible from that district. That number was insufficient when the quality of the field is considered. Walker's failure to qualify shows how hard it is to win in any kind of tournament nowadays.

Two years ago, when I won the National open championship at Skokie, some critics intimated my victory was somewhat of a fluke. Within a month I had to qualify for the professional championship. Then, in the main event, held at Oakmont that year, I met and defeated Jock Hutchison, Bobby Cruickshank and Emmet French, among others.

Even Hagen Went Down.

Then it was said the absence of Walter Hagen made my victory easier. Well, last year at Pelham I defeated Jim Barnes, Bobby Cruickshank and Hagen, respectively, in three successive days. Against both Barnes and Hagen I had to play better than par golf in the afternoon rounds to win. Whether I shall be fortunate again this year remains to be seen.

I have been asked whether match play or medal play is harder. I think that medal competition is probably more trying because you get what you earn or earn what you get, whichever you please.

Match play, though, is harder for the star, as witness the case of Bobby Jones, one of the greatest players in the world, and a golfer who has no superior in medal competition. Yet Bobby has been beaten by inferior players time and again in match play because some fellow has happened to strike a whirlwind stride just at the time he was facing the Georgian. Jones, who is an easy-going lad, is so steady he seems never to be prepared to spurt. And that is what you must do when an opponent is running wild in match play. Then is the time you must buckle down and match his game stroke for stroke. In this respect match play is harder.

Bill Johnston Overwhelmed by Vin Richards

Olympic Champion Defeats Veteran in Straight Sets, 6—0, 6—4.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 6. —The intersectional tennis battle between East and West ended in a tie today, each team winning three matches in an exhibition of brilliant tennis, featured by the triumph of Vincent Richards, the Olympic champion, over William M. Johnston, former national title holder, in straight sets.

Each side captured one doubles and two singles matches.

Richards played a dashing, aggressive game, overwhelming Johnston in the first set before the little Californian could get started, and taking the final set after a brilliant battle. Richards volleyed with superb skill and won the match almost entirely through his skill at the net.

Richards pierced his rival's service three times in the first set. Johnston rallied in the second set and they battled on even terms for eight games. "Little Bill" weakened, however, and lost his own service in the ninth game, the turning point that gave Richards his chance to clinch victory in the next game.

The last match of the series went to the West when William M. Johnston and Clarence J. Griffin defeated Watson Washburn and Karl Behr of New York in another extra set tussle by the scores of 3—6, 4—6, 6—4.

SHOCKER PITCHES AND WINS DOUBLE-HEADER FROM WHITE SOX

He turned his left ankle in the slide and was escorted from the proceedings, McMillan faring forth to play second.

With one gone in the Sox's sixth, Mostil doubled off the left field bleachers and Hooper flied to Jacobson. Shocker then walked Collins and Sheely, filling the bases, and Vangilder steamed up in the bull pen, getting ready for emergency service. Falk's single to right shoved Mostil and Collins over the plate but this outbreak ceased with Kamm forcing Falk at second.

This closed the run making on both sides. In the Brown's ninth, with Mangum flinging and one out, Tobin singled and passes to Robertson and Sisler congested the bases, but Evans was called out on strikes and Mostil grabbed a liner from McMillan.

Series Final Today.

The Browns and Sox complete their season's bookings with a single battle here tomorrow, when Vangilder and Robertson are slated to pitch. Of the 21 games played thus far, eight resulted in victories for Sisler's squad and 13 for the Pale Hose.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Ask Jim Corbett.

A BOXING critic, writing of Firpo-Wills eventualities says in part: "Wills ought to be a sure winner. He has all the advantage of speed, cleverness and experience in all departments of the game. One would pick him to cut Firpo to ribbons and then beat him helpless at his desire."

Jim Corbett is not at hand to interpolate any remarks on the subject, but if he were and he cared to be frank about it he might copper the above view, about like this:

"They used to say I was the cleverest and fastest heavyweight in the world and they picked me to dissect Fitzsimmons and then smear him around the floor, at Carson City. I picked him apart all right. Bob was bleeding and cut and badly beaten until the fourteenth round when suddenly a mule kicked me right above the stomach. That's the way it seemed. Anyway, they carried me out loser.

"I also remember a day at Coney Island, after that, when I peppered big Jim Jeffries for 22 rounds, as one might hammer a dummy. He couldn't get out of the way of my hands and he couldn't catch me with the Empire Express. I had him cut and bleeding, too. Yet, in round 23, I thought the Brooklyn Bridge fell in on me; but it was only Jeffries' left hand.

"They carried me out again, loser.

"You can pick science and skill to beat brawn and endurance, if you want to; but you can't prove your case by my record."

And there are plenty of Jim Corbetts in this respect.

After seeing the bull get up from the floor in the Dempsey fight one gathers the opinion that it will take something more than a fly swatter to keep him down.

About Monsieur Renault.

THE process of subtraction reveals that Jack Renault is about seven or eight knockdowns a weaker title candidate than Luis Angel Firpo, if you want to reason from one viewpoint.

The common denominator in this case was one Homer Smith, of Kalamazoo or elsewhere in Michigan—a six-foot, 200-pound lad with the physical machinery of a real fighther, but——

Let's draw the curtain there.

It appears that Jack Renault is being blamed because, having knocked down Homer Smith nine times in a recent fight, he failed to knock him out.

We respectfully call attention to the fact that although Luis Angel Firpo had Smith on the floor 17 TIMES, in their bout at Omaha last year, Smith lasted the 10 rounds.

However, having seen the Firpo-Smith bout we are in a position to say that if Smith conducted himself against Renault as he did against Firpo, the bout ought to be judged like a coursing event, instead of as a fight.

Mr. Homer Smith was one grand rabbit, at Omaha. All he did was run, duck, clinch and fall to the floor without being struck. Glory to no man results from scoring a knockdown against Homer Smith.

Jack Dempsey did it differently. In the first round he closed the escapes for Br'er Rabbit, socked Homer one on the whiskers and Bunny Smith folded up for the night.

Explaining clearly the difference between real and would-be champions, when considered in the light of the Renault-Smith and Firpo-Smith affairs.

Rough on Sheik Benny.

THEY call Abu-Ben Leonard the Sheik of the fight world, now. Benny is good to look upon and they term one a sheik who has youth, good looks, a romantic appearance and an entire disregard for law and conventions.

But if Benny only knew what was really meant when they termed him "Sheik," he might lift a voice in the market places protesting.

For we have it on the authority of a Moslem writer, that "sheik" originally meant merely "an old man;" later it has come to mean only a man so old and experienced as to be entitled to be considered the head of a tribe.

Benny is head of the lightweight tribe; but old?

KAIN BEATS KENRICK IN PLAY-OFF CONTEST

The Kain Council team won the championship of the Knights of Columbus League and qualified for the elimination series by defeating the Kenrick team, 5 to 4, in 11 innings at Sherman Park yesterday.

Third Baseman Rousseau of Kain scored the tieing run in the ninth inning and drove in the winning score in the eleventh inning.

Witte and Thole formed the battery for Kain while Lortz and Howard worked for Kenrick. Witte permitted 9 hits and fanned 5 batters while Lortz allowed 6 hits and struck out 4 batters. Lortz, however, was wild, issuing 9 walks which helped in his undoing.

Pricemaker Wins Handicap Race at Aurora Opening

Favorite Prince Tii Tii Is Handicapped by Short Turns at New Track.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AURORA, Ill., Sept. 6.—Making the most of a strong pull in the weights, the 3-year-old Hourless colt, Pricemaker, won the featured Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Handicap at a mile and one-sixteenth in 1:46 here this afternoon, while a crowd of 12,000 persons, mostly from Chicago, looked on. The finish was made to order for racing excitement.

Pricemaker, carrying only 99 pounds, got in front at the first turn and was in the lead all the way. Billy Star came fast through the last eighth and added to the zest of the race by threatening to catch the leader through the last sixteenth, but Pricemaker had something left.

Billy Star was much used in following the early pace and just managed to stave off the final rush of Prince Tii Tii. The latter was cut off at the eighth pole, when Pickens tried to take the rail. The short turns appeared to handicap Prince Tii Tii, which was perhaps the best horse in the race.

Tangara Wins at 20 to 1.

Running as if pounds the best, the 3-year-old Flying Squirrel colt, Doc Horn, owned by Mrs. A. F. Dayton, won the first race, the Inaugural Purse, at six furlongs in 1:14 2-5, with the favorite Alleden second and Fretwell, an outsider, third. Jockey Smith hustled Doc Horn into the lead at the break and kept his mount in front all the way. Alleden challenged resolutely in the stretch, but the weight made him hang right at the end. Fretwell came through with a rush at the finish. The winner paid 8 to 5.

Round Robin, owned by J. P. Welsh, at 3 to 1, won the final race at a mile and a sixteenth. Ten Can, 4—1, was second and Glentilt, 1—2, third.

Municipal Elimination Game Results in Victory for Commercial Team.

Tower Camp team of the Modern Woodmen, winners in the Commercial League, advanced to the second round in the elimination series by defeating the St. Louis Chapter of the De Molay League at Fairgrounds Park yetserday afternoon. The score was 4 to 1. Tower Camp will meet the Puritan Oil team of the Manufacturers' League in a second round fracas this afternoon at Fairgrounds Park.

Wielandy pitched a steady brand of ball for the Woodmen in yesterday's game and had no difficulty in subduing rival batters. He held the De Molays to six hits, two of which came in the ninth to produce the losers' lone tally. "Lofty" Schlingman was also a good pitcher most of the time, but the loose fielding of his teammates, coupled with several solid raps proved his undoing.

The Woodmen scored their first run in the second inning on Angus' double and a single to center by Wilmes. Three runs were added in the fifth. Bad fielding made G. Hatchard's pop fly good for three bases. Link then got a home run when his drive was misjudged. Morgan's single and an error was good for the third run of the inning.

Singles by R. Schaumburg and Schlingman, coupled with an infield out gave the De Molays their run.

Firpo-Wills Battle Will End Quickly, if Men Adhere to Plans

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—"I will stop Firpo with a right hand uppercut in the first round!" says Harry Wills, negro heavyweight who fights the Wild Bull at Boyle's Thirty Acres on Sept. 11.

"The first body blow I land will win the fight, which will be over quickly!" declares Firpo when asked to express himself.

If Wills and Firpo fight according to their present plans, there, the bout will not last long.

By John E. Wray,
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The Brown Panther and the Pampas Bull will tear into one another, next Tuesday night at that crazy stadium on stilts known as Rickard's Arena, at Jersey City, with a million dollars worth of personified box receipts, totalling upward of 90,000 individuals, sardined around the ring.

We would like to tear off some philosophic remarks about the decadence of the times, wherein vast numbers of persons give up large sums to see the debasing spectacle of a negro and a white gladiator fly at each other on mayhem bent; also we might emit a few deplores and a couple of "too bads" about the degeneracy of the principals—Harry Wills and Luis Angel Firpo—who take a delight in such brutal displays.

But truth compels one to state that the affair is designed and executed in no brutal spirit but one merely of big business—to make money. The matter should be viewed purely as an effort of one promoter, two fighters, and a large number of politicians to grab a large piece of change for themselves at the cost of a few thwacks on the bean or perhaps a bump or two on the self esteem.

Knockout Ends Brutality.

The day of brutality has passed out of boxing. The knockout wallop has seen to that. No more do we have 50-round horrors. A poke on the button and presto! The fighter goes to sleep, only to wake up a few seconds later with slight haziness in the belfry and a $250,000 check in his pocket.

Not brutality, bo—it's just business.

Not the least interesting feature of it all is the fact that not even a championship is involved and the fight is not to a finish or even to an official verdict—just 12 rounds, no decision.

The inter-racial feature is probably the element that is causing much of the interest. It is the first time in years that a negro fighter of merit has been given a place in the spotlight; it is the ONLY time one has been given a chance to make $250,000 in one jump.

Jack Johnson, 14 years ago, at Reno, made $66,000 by beating Jeffries; but that is only one third or less, as compared to what Wills is expected to get.

Fortune for Everyone.

A quarter of a million will be given the Panther to risk being gored by the Bull, who also expects $250,000 or so. What Tex Rickard and the politicians will get will therefore be a plenty—if the big gate proves up.

The racial feature is the one fly in the ointment to the promoters. They are uncertain what to think about it. It has been so dubious a prospect that, for several years—ever since Dempsey won the title in fact—they have been dodging the question of matching the white Dempsey and the black Wills. They compromised by using Firpo.

If there is no demonstration or hostility shown in the Wills-Firpo struggle they may give the negro a chance against Dempsey for the world's championship—a chance for which the Langfords, Jeanettes and McVeas of other days dreamed all in vain.

One may gather from the unusual incentive back of Wills—it includes financial, racial and personal prestige as consideration—that Senor Firpo is in for no very soft evening. For no fighter in centuries has had more reasons for desiring to win than Wills.

In all history only two negro heavyweights have held the world's title—Molineaux and Jack Johnson. Wills would fain join this Hall of Fame, by beating both Firpo, then Dempsey.

Wills has everything in his favor from mental attitude to physical condition and it will go hard if the possessor of a mere round-house wallop can eliminate a skillful, fast, powerful, smart, experienced man.

Firpo is not a superior fighter. Neither is he invincible. We have evidence of some good traits about him, but these do not include speed, cleverness, experience, condition or one half of the essentials required of a finished fighter.

Wills will match him in weight, beat him by six inches in reach, and is built for fast work. He has had a dozen or more years of schooling in the hard Institute of Experience, against men like Langford and MvVea. He has two hands to Firpo's one; he has fought all the best fighters except Dempsey, where Wills has beaten few worth the name; he can knock out his foes as well as Firpo. On the other hand all that Firpo has on Wills is three years in age and the knowledge that he can stand a lot of punishment.

It is in our mind that Firpo will be called upon again to display this faculty.

To one who has seen both men at work there appears to be only one chance for Firpo and that is in case Harry Willis' hands collapse. Wills' hands are under suspicion because they have been broken before. But we have the idea that when Firpo throws himself wide open after his fashion, Wills will hit only the soft places—the heart and plexus.

Dempsey, who is not a boastful man, said some months after this encounter with Firpo that the Argentine could not last one round with him if they met again. Luis is too easy and too big a mark in the body.

For that reason the guess as to whether Firpo will stay ten rounds may be forgotten. The chances are that either Firpo will batter Wills down with one of those overhand pitches, or Wills will hit Firpo amidships and sink the big vessel.

At this writing and without having seen the men, it would appear a certainty that the promoters and Jack Dempsey will have to give Wills a positive answer, next year, as to a title match.

If Wills' hands are truly bad, then something is being put over. No man not thoroughly sound should be permitted to battle for such a tremendous fortune and cost the public so much money unless he was able to give them the right kind of a run. A no-decision holding match with Wills stymieing the Argentine, would about wipe out the game in the East.

Firpo Tells of First Punch In Bout With Dempsey

Argentine Says He Tried for Champion's Jaw When Latter Missed Left Hook, but Hit Too High and Chance Was Gone.

Luis Angel Fipo's fight with Harry Wills is only four days off. With the bout so close at hand, Firpo describes, through a representative of the New York World and the Post-Dispatch, his last big fight in the United States, that with Jack Dempsey.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—I have seen so many stories, such varied explanations of what really happened in the first moment of my bout with Jack Dempsey, that I feel I ought to give my version of it. I am referring to the punch that I landed on Dempsey and which came so close to winning me that heavyweight championship.

Before I start, let it be remembered that Dempsey has always explained his actions in that first round by saying that he was hit so hard with my first punch that he didn't remember anything more until he was sitting in his corner waiting for the second round to begin. I don't remember much myself after the first few knockdowns. I thought that the first round had only gone half a minute and I berated my friend and chief second, Lavalle, for having pulled the bell when we had gone just that distance, so I thought.

My mind is perfectly clear on the subject of that first punch, however. That will always remain in my memory, for with it came my great chance—the thought of really being the heavyweight champion of the world. Dempsey, I thought, was far more anxious and nervous than I had expected. He tried to smile things off, but I knew that he was laboring under a great strain. I felt that he and not me, perhaps, might make the mistakes in the fight. At least I hoped he would and if I could, I intended to profit by them. I never feared the result. Never have been hurt in a bout. Punches have never bothered me and I like plenty of them coming my way, for they keep me busy. But this is what I started to say.

That First Punch.

Dempsey was in his corner. He looked like a young lion as he shuffled around on one foot and then the other, waiting for the word to go. His was the action, the fretting of a man who intended to tear one limb from limb. And with just such a look upon his face he came at me in that never-to-be-forgotten first round. I watched him intently as he jogged toward me. What he was going to do puzzled me. What it would be—a right to the body or a left to the head, a left to the body or a right to the head. It was a profound moment. All that I have of power and determination was alive within me, ready for my command.

Dempsey came right at me and I saw only the flash of his left arm as he let go a left hook for my head. Why he missed he probably has never known until now. I had schooled myself to avoid just such a surprise punch as Dempsey let loose. Timing his somewhat expected left hook nicely, I had stepped slightly to the right. Consequently he missed me by inches, I felt the fanning of his first as it whizzed by me, but only for a fraction of a second.

With his left move and my own halfstep to the right, I set in position to drop my right on him wherever it found a target. That target was the left side of Dempsey's head as it passed me on his miss, a bit low and a bit too close for accuracy. At any rate, the mark was there as clearly defined as a bull's-eye. It was a clean shot for his jaw and I let my right go for it with all my heart and soul behind it. It meant the world to me. I hit him, but not on the jaw.

"Then I Was on the Floor."

The blow I landed was right over his temple and he seemed to crack at the knees, if you remember. He seemed about to hit the floor with his legs tangled under him, when he reached out and grasped me about the body. All who saw the bout will remember that and how he slipped down my body until his knees almost touched the floor. They didn't reach the floor and I hadn't scored the first knockdown, as some have said.

The next thing I knew I was on the floor myself. My over-anxiety might have helped me, too, as it had Dempsey. He admits himself that it had.

He says he knows nothing of what happened in the first round and that tells the tale of how hard I hit him with that first punch and how the title would have surely come to me had I landed it three or four inches lower. The second chance to land it didn't come to me. I didn't get another good punch at his jaw during the remainder of the fight.

My chance came with that first crack at his jaw and I hit too high. That's the luck of this fighting for title and glory. My chance will come again. I came to you telling you that I was the real man of destiny. I'll live up to that in the next bout with Dempsey.

DETROIT WINS THIRD STRAIGHT GAME FROM CLEVELAND CLUB, 5-4

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 6.—Detroit made it three straight victories over Cleveland by nosing through to a 5 to 4 conquest today. Dutch Leonard, making his first appearance before Detroit fans in years, held the Indians well in hand until the eighth when he weakened, allowing four runs.

Speaker used 17 men in an attempt to grab the game.

Ty Cobb's single in the second inning was his 188th of the season in his endeavor to make this his ninth major league year in which he has crashed out 200 safe hits.

REDS WIN A WILD GAME FROM CUBS, 7-6

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 6.—A wild seesaw game wound up with the Reds downing the Cubs, 7 to 6. Errors cut a large figure in the scoring of both clubs and the performances of both teams was poor. Blake relieved Keen and was charged with the defeat. Sheehan rescued Benton in a tight pinch, and was himself saved through a great double play engineered by Walker.

TERMINAL TRAFFIC SMALLER

Business for First Eight Months of year 4 Per Cent Below 1923.

President Henry Miller reports that the traffic of the Terminal Railroad Association, for the first eight months of this year, shows a decrease of four per cent compared with the same period in 1923. The decrease is largely in iron and steel, motors, textiles and fuel. The other commodities are quite up to last year.

At present the tide of traffic eastbound is rising and exceeds that of last year, but is offset by a decrease in westbound business. Abundant crops, good prices and favorable conditions generally in the West and Southwest warrant the forecast that the volume of business handled here during the business of this year will equal, if not exceed, that of the same period in 1923, which was phenomenal in transportation.

MANAGERS FOR LA FOLLETTE AIM TO RULE CONGRESS

This, Rather Than Election of President, Is the Real Hope of Their Campaign.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—As Congressman John M. Nelson, the La Follette manager, sees it, the fight in the West at present is between La Follette and Coolidge. Nelson is at one with the Republicans in refusing to concede any material strength to Davis west of the Mississippi River. Nor does he believe that Davis' current invasion of the Middle West will work any real change in the situation.

Outwardly, at least, the La Follette people in Chicago are hardly less confident than the Republicans. At their headquarters in the Morrison Hotel there is a constant incoming stream of La Follette crusaders, bearing rosy tales of growing Progressive sentiment in various parts of the country.

Among other things, Nelson has been told in the last few days that La Follette has an excellent chance to carry California, where Rudolph Spreckles, the sugar magnate, is backing his campaign with something more than words. Emissaries from California say that the southern part of the State, in particular, is in "fine shape." Hiram Johnson is described as still resting silent in his tent.

Situation in Iowa.

The word from Iowa—and this is from a man of sound political judgment—is that La Follette would carry the State if the election could be held tomorrow. What the La Follette people fear is that during the next two months the Coolidge forces, by sounding the call of party regularity, will be able to win back a number of the disaffected farmers.

The corn is growing tall in Iowa and the price of wheat is up. The farmers are beginning to pay off their debts. These conditions are undoubtedly working for Coolidge. They give ground for Republican hopes. The La Follette people take courage from the known strength of the radical Brookhart in Iowa. They profess to believe that the Republican appeal for regularity at the polls will be ineffective.

On examination of the claims of both sides, it looks as if the result in Iowa is a toss-up between Coolidge and La Follette. Davis may be able to "sell" himself later, but at this writing he is third in the State.

Brookhart is one of the several candidates in this election who, in the expressive phrase of Congressman Nelson, are "wearing blinders." That is to say, Brookhart is looking straight ahead at his own candidacy, and neither to the right nor to the left at the national contest. He is technically regular. He tells his audiences, in effect, that he will do as much for Coolidge as Coolidge will do for him, and he also tells them that Bob La Follette deserves their gratitude for having inspired the Teapot Dome disclosures.

Adams' Tactics in Colorado.

Out in Colorado, so Nelson has been informed, Senator Adams, Democrat, a candidate for re-election, is pursuing similar tactics. Adams has a progressive streak. He was one of the principal aids of Senator Walsh in the conduct of the oil inquiry. Adams, as reported here, preserves his regularity by indorsing Davis, but lets his audiences know at the same time that "Bob La Follette a fine fellow."

Nelson, and the other spokesmen for the La Follette-Wheeler campaign, scoff at the Republican claim that Coolidge will carry Minnesota. In their opinion, the President is no better off in Minnesota than in Wisconsin. Admittedly, however, Magnus Johnson, a candidate for re-election to the Senate on the Farmer-Labor ticket, is in serious danger of defeat at the hands of his Republican opponent.

The situation in Nebraska as between Coolidge and La Follette is similar to that in Iowa. In that State also there is a radical Senator, Norris, running for re-election as a nominal Republican. Like Brookhart, he has refrained from coming out openly for La Follette. Apparently, he still has the blinders on. Of all the radical Republicans in this category, Norris is believed to be the most likely to get in the open for the Wisconsin Senator.

What Nelson Expects.

Recent reports, says Congressman Nelson, have redoubled his conviction that La Follette and Wheeler will carry both the Dakotas, Idaho and Nevada, Washington and Oregon. He believes, he says, the outlook in Ohio and Illinois bright and getting more so all the time; that La Follette will get a large German vote in St. Louis and do well throughout the State; that he will cut a big figure in New York City, and that he will roll up a popular vote of astonishing size in all sections of the country, the South included.

The key to the La Follette strategy and to the Progressive expectations is found in the effort that is being made to poll a large vote everywhere—not only in those States that La Follette has a chance to carry, but in all the States. For, when you probe beneath the ebullient surface of the La Follette claims, you do not find, in the mind of any thoughtful leader of the movement, a real belief that La Follette can win the election. You find, of course, a hope that "something will happen" to make him the winner, but no genuine expectation of such an event.

Objective of Campaign.

The real objective of the campaign is to strengthen the grip of the Progressive groups on the House and the Senate. Hence the ardent hope that La Follette will roll up an impressive popular total, such a total as will prove the existence of a widespread dissatisfaction with the economic policies of both the old parties.

Given such proof, the Progressives, under whatever names they may be called, would be vastly strengthened in Congress, even to the extent that alliances might be made whereby they would be able to organize one or both of the houses.

It would better suit the purposes of this movement for Coolidge than for Davis to be elected. In the former event there would be a clean-cut issue between Progressivism and reaction, leading in the long run to a new party alignment under genuine and not fake labels. The four years more of Coolidge in the White House would be a training period for the Progressives, during which they would fit themselves for assuming complete control of the Government. In the meantime, of course, Coolidge would be completely hamstrung.

Progressives Looking Ahead.

Such is the guiding philosophy of the La Follette movement as it is understood by its responsible leaders.

They are looking ahead four years. The election of Davis, to their minds, would becloud the issue and retard the realization of their ideal. There are even some among them who say that a four-year period of waiting is to be preferred to immediate success; that a Progressive party, by coming into power before the ripening of its plans and the full cohesion of its several parts, would incur the same risks that attended the sudden and unexpected rise of the Labor party to control in England.

If La Follette gets a smashing popular vote in the election, the immediate aim of the inner circle of his supporters will be adequately served.

REACTIONS IN MARKETS PAST WEEK

Course Called Natural After Recent Trend—Money Turns Slightly Firmer—European Buying.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Once again the markets have fallen back into a hesitant mood. The cause is not far to seek. It lies principally in the previous advances. One must remember that the summer's emphatic gains were more or less unexpected. They brought substantial profits. That the rise could go on indefinitely without interruption and that the accumulated profits would not tempt realizations was not to be expected. Now that a reaction has come, explanatory points in industry are being sought after. The passing of a dividend is given more attention than a month or two ago. Nevertheless, there is no change for the worse in industry. Moderate improvement instead is still taking place. Political uncertainties might, of course, be urged as a factor. The fact that the markets had enjoyed a big rise and that a weakening has occurred in certain of the influences that produced that rise remain the chief reasons for the recessions of the past two weeks.

Money Slightly Firmer.

"Probably the money situation is the one that gives traders the chief reason for pause. Cheap money certainly played a prominent part in the summer rise. A large part of the buying of securities came from attempts to find employment for surplus bank credit. The beginning of September brought a flurry in call money. It was sufficient to start traders wondering whether the money situation had turned. With gold imports slackening and a German loan a probability our money market might no longer receive funds from abroad, but, on the contrary, might supply funds for Europe's use. If our banks found ways of employing their credit profitably in Europe, or, for that matter, at home, they might draw down on investment accounts that were built up during the summer. In short, traders fell to wondering whether the tide had turned in the money and securities markets.

"The course of events is still too uncertain to make prophecy anything but hazardous. Probably the German loan will go through. Probably the placing of the loan will open the way for other European credits. The gold influx may well dwindle away and disappear. Domestic business may make larger demands for credit. Yet it would not do to assume the money market will tighten materially. Our credit resources are, it must be remembered, enormous. We have all the gold in the world and the Federal Reserve banks, whose loans are at a minimum, can meet huge demands. Money rates could harden moderately and still leave the charge for carrying stocks materially below the dividend yields that are available. While, therefore, it would seem imprudent to count on any further easing in money, the markets should not suffer much decrease or increases in the charge for accommodation.

"Just now the foreign situation seems to be exerting an influence rather different from that of the recent past and from that which seems likely to prevail in the fairly near future. A month or two ago a sizable flow of funds eastward across the Atlantic was set in motion. The extreme ease in the domestic money market and the more optimistic feeling about reparations led to many transfers of funds to Europe. The principal European exchanges rose. Such a movement is precisely of the sort that many expect to have follow the flotation of a German loan.

European Purchases.

"For the moment, however, there seems to be a sizable tendency for money to move in a westerly direction. Both sterling and francs have reacted fairly sharply during the past week. Taking of profits that were built up in anticipation of the reparations agreement had perhaps some influence. It is perfectly clear, however, that Europeans have been buying American raw materials. A short wheat crop in Canada makes English buyers more anxious to secure a part of our own surplus. Expectations of better things in Europe and the lower prices of cotton have stimulated foreign interest in that staple. This situation serves to draw attention to the mixed nature of the influences that will come with a European settlement. It is quite possible that some of our surplus capital will be drawn off, but it also is probable that certain of our markets will be stimulated by the event.

"Quiet short session trading on the Stock Exchange brought no perceptible change in the trend of security values, which seems to be toward lower levels. It did, however, bring a slackening in liquidation and short selling, and this together with a moderate amount of short covering here and there made the list look steadier than it did on the previous day. Nevertheless, the tone was weakish and prices were irregularly lower at the close. Bonds were inactive but the tone kept firm.

"With a government report on the cotton crop coming on Monday and a report on grain scheduled for the following day, traders in these commodities were inclined to hold off. Compared with recent wide fluctuations cotton and grains were well-nigh stationary during the greater part of the trading. Corn attracted some attention on account of the colder weather and met with fair demand. In the cotton trade the general opinion seems to be that the next estimate of the department of agriculture will vary little from the last one which placed the yield at 12,956,000 bales.

"Foreign exchanges turned steadier. Apparently demand for dollars in this market has been temporarily satisfied with the buying of the past week. Saturday usually is a quiet day in the exchange market and nothing in the news came to hand to stimulate activity one way or the other. Sterling was only ⅛ of a cent lower at $4.43½, while French francs advanced 1⅛ points to $5.23¾. Other continental rates generally were firm, though Dutch guilders continued in supply. Canadian dollars maintained parity.

"The statement of the New York Clearing House as of the close of business Sept. 6 showed the following changes: Loans, discounts, investments, decreased $20,703,000; net demand deposits, decreased $6,417,000; time deposits, decreased, $1,761,000; circulation, decreased $88,000 and excess reserves increased $49,771,590.

PORT DEMAND FOR WHEAT IS MORE THAN OFFSET BY PRESSURE OF NEW CROP

Prices Slightly Lower for Week—Corn Market Sluggish, Awaiting Weather Developments—Oats Down.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The wheat [illegible] was unsettled during the week ending Sept. 6, according to the weekly grain market review of the United States Department of Agriculture. Favorable weather since Aug. 1 increased production [illegible] wheat and threshing returns indicate a heavy yield, while reports indicate that some Canadian wheat fields will now be harvested which had been thought past [illegible]. Liberal offerings of new wheat were reported at Minneapolis, with a heavy volume of hedging sales made against country purchases. Foreign crop reports continued pessimistic and large export sales of wheat were reported. Buying against these export sales, together with the volume of business from flour mills, offset the hedging sales. Domestic mill demand was slightly more active. Terminal elevators were taking less wheat due to heavy stocks already on hand. The cash demand continued heavy for good quality wheat, but lower grades were sluggish. In spite of the heavier offerings at Minneapolis, the premiums for the top grades suffered very little, but each day a little more of the medium to lower grades was selling at the future. Northwestern mills resumed buying high protein wheat at Southwestern markets, and this high-grade wheat sold at higher premiums over futures. The export demand from Gulf ports was strong, tending to reduce the terminal congestion. Gulf bids ranged from 6c to [illegible] over Chicago September for No. 2 hard winter, basis Gulf ports. Soft winter wheat was 4c to 6c higher at St. Louis for best milling grades, but the demand was less active for ordinary to poor wheat. The demand was slower at the close of the week at Cincinnati, with elevator interests the buyers. Durum wheat was in liberal supply, with demand less active than the week before. No. 1 amber at Minneapolis sold 2c to 7c over the Duluth September, which closed Friday at $1.18¼.

Weather continued the dominating influence in a rather quiet corn market. Temperatures higher than normal were reported throughout the corn belt for the week ending Sept. 2, but the crop continued backward. The market closed slightly weaker, due to lack of support, as most traders seemed inclined to wait further developments. Receipts of corn were light and the visible supply Aug. 30, while larger than at the corresponding time last year, was only about two-thirds as large as at that time in 1922. Feeding demand is reported light, with the bulk of cash receipts going to industries.

The oats market was influenced by reports of frost damage in Canada, and good export business. Cash demand was good, and the arrivals were well absorbed. Farmers in some sections were reported to be marketing their oats sparingly, pending developments in the corn crop and the visible supply was only slightly larger than at this time last year, and lower than at this time for the years 1911 to 1915.

The rye market was strong with good export business, Germany and Scandinavian countries buying heavily. The cash market was strong at Minneapolis, and the liberal receipts were well absorbed with mills, shippers and elevator interests in the market. Spot No. 1 and No. 2 were sold at 2c to 3c over the Minneapolis September, which closed Friday at 84½c, a gain of 3¾c for the week.

Barley was higher and Minneapolis September gained 5¼c, closing Friday at [illegible]. The quality of the new crop is excellent, and fair premiums were easily secured. Maltsters, feed mixers, cereal interests and export concerns were active buyers.

The flax market was under considerable pressure of new crop offerings and Minneapolis September flax declined 5c, closing Friday at $2.20. However, the increased arrivals were easily absorbed and the cash market was firmer at the close of the week, No. 1 selling at 5c to 6c over September, while earlier in the week sales were made at 3c to 4c over.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Sept. 6.—Changes were not large on the [illegible] market at the week-end session, but wheat closed at loss and corn at slight advance. Covering of shorts helped corn. Impending Government grain report early next week was a factor in the grain trade. Red wheat encountered a poor demand in the local market Saturday and good No. 2 red declined 1c to 2c and ordinary grades 2c to 3c. The offerings, however, were pretty well cleaned up on the lower basis. An exception being a few cars of No. 2 red. Hard wheat offerings were light but prices were down ½ cent. In case of high moisture and heating grades up to 1c and 2c losses were noted. Elevators were the main buyers. Corn prices were irregular, being ½c to [illegible] higher on yellow and unchanged to ½c otherwise. Yellow offerings were [illegible] and there was a good local demand. Both the supply and demand for [illegible] classes proved light. Oats receipts were heavy and prices were unchanged to [illegible] with probably only one-third of supplies sold. No. 3 white met a limited demand at previous day's basis. Other [illegible] showed losses of ½c to 1c. The feed market was quiet but steady. Sales were reported of 1 car of soft bran [illegible] (loaded) at $26.00 local, 1 car [illegible] at $27.50 local, 3 cars same to go out, 200 sacks bran (direct by mill to go out) at $26.40, [illegible] sacks gray middlings (do) at [illegible]. Hard bran quoted to arrive at [illegible] and hard gray shorts at $30.75. There was sale of a car of [illegible] to go out at $14.00. White Hominy (sacked) was quoted $41, alfalfa No. 2 in new sacks, $23; No. 1 choice $28.50.

[illegible] at Liverpool, which market [illegible] ¼ to 2d lower, and report of [illegible] of drought in Argentine were [illegible] influences in wheat. The market [illegible] higher later and again eased. Reports on weather affected corn.

[illegible] wheat opened at $1.26½; [illegible] $1.32⅝. December corn [illegible] and May corn $1.12⅝.

[illegible] wheat receipts which were 133,775 [illegible] compared with 201,500 a week [illegible] 130,234 last year, included 63 [illegible] and 38 through. Corn receipts [illegible] 25,000 bushels, compared with [illegible] week ago and 62,867 last year, [illegible] cars local and 3 through. Oats receipts, which were 162,000 bushels, compared with 74,000 a week ago and 126,000 [illegible], included 64 cars local and 17 [illegible]. Hay receipts were 46 cars local [illegible].

[illegible] receipts of wheat were lighter [illegible] a week ago and heavier than a year [illegible], 2,631,000 bushels. Corn receipts [illegible] lighter than a week ago and [illegible] than a year ago, being 528,000 [illegible]. Oats receipts were heavier than [illegible] and heavier than a year ago, [illegible] bushels.

[illegible] shipments of wheat were heavier [illegible] week ago and heavier than a [illegible] being 2,251,000 bushels. Corn [illegible] were heavier than a week ago [illegible] a year ago, being 435,000 [illegible] shipments were heavier than [illegible] and heavier than a year ago, [illegible] bushels.

WHEAT CLOSES LOWER AND CORN HIGHER AT CHICAGO

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—A marked reduction in speculative interest was noticed in the grain trade this week. The approaching Government crop report had a tendency to cause traders to reduce their commitments and await the publishing of crop information next week. Price changes for the week for all grains were unimportant. Wheat at the close today was ¼c to ⅜c lower than the previous day and losses for the week aggregated 1¼c to 2c. There was export buying on all breaks during the week, but the fact that the locals were inclined to reduce long lines on every bulge in addition to hedging pressure prevented any sustained advances. Today the market was a quiet one and there was little feature to note. There were rallies at times, but offerings soon filled up the demand and turned prices downward again. Liverpool was weaker owing to the rains in Argentina. Export demand was lighter with sales of 300,000 bushels reported at the seaboard and 200,000 bushels at Chicago. Cash wheat in the local market was weak with contract grades off ¼@1c and the lower grades 2c to 3c lower.

Corn gained ¼@⅜c today, but for the week prices were ½c to ¾c lower. Sentiment was more divided this week. There was support on all breaks, but owing to the lack of outside trade local professionals were not disposed to add to their lines on the bulges. The cash situation continues firm and a slight advance in premiums was noted today. Country offerings are limited to a few cars and at prices 1c to 2c over the views of buyers. Shipping sales of 85,000 bushels were reported. Vessel room for 200,000 bushels of corn to Georgian Bay was chartered. Weather continues cool and frost was reported in the lowlands of Northern Illinois and parts of Missouri. This, however, failed to stimulate much buying.

Oats were ¼c to ⅜c higher today. Sentiment is more favorable to the bull sides and prices recovered rapidly later in the week. The enlarged cash demand, frost damage in Canada and increased export sale were factors in the late strength. September liquidation and flattering crop estimates caused the decline earlier in the week. Shipping sales today were 150,000 bushels and the seaboard reported 100,000 bushels worked for export.

Lard closed 5c to 10c higher, ribs 2½c to 5c higher and bellies 5c lower. Buying by packers was a factor today. The market was affected mainly by the action of corn throughout the week and losses of 35c to 55c were recorded in lard, 47½c to 50c in ribs and 15c to 25c in bellies for the week.

Boston Wool Market.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Sept. 6.—Attention of wool traders here continued today to be directed toward the Brisbane auctions where prices showed no signs of yielding. Local dealers in view of the volume of foreign buying at Brisbane are holding their finer wools for higher prices. Texas 8 months is now around $1.20 clean; Boston and 12 months 15c a pound higher. It is estimated Ohio delaines would have to sell above 80 cents a pound here to bring this grade on the same level as prices quoted in Brisbane.

Metals at St. Louis.

Lead last quoted at $7.95@8.00 per 100 lbs. in St. Louis.

Foreign Exchange

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review, says:

"The market for European exchange was governed almost wholly during the past week by the inauguration of an export movement of large volume from this country to the continent. Shipments of cotton have already been arranged for on a large scale and there are also large engagements for shipments of grain to various points, part of which is being financed through sales of sterling, but a large part is provided for by sales of commercial bills to continental points. Contracts for future delivery of cotton and grain bills have been made on London at a discount of ¼ per cent per month. The heaviest transactions of that character have been for the last half of September delivery, but these contracts extend over a considerable period in the future.

"There was a display of strength at the beginning of the week on the resumption of business after the double holiday, but from then on the supply of these commercial bills depressed the market steadily, sellers of bills accepting bids made by bankers on an orderly decline, which carried demand sterling down from above $4.49 to below $4.44. French, after an early advance to 5.42½, declined about 20 points. There was a special movement in exchange on Belgium early in the week, when it had a sharp advance to 5 cents following the successful placing of $40,000,000 6½-per-cent bonds, but this gain was lost when the rest of the market declined later in the week. Holland, which is called on to handle a large part of the continental shipments, was offered steadily and yielded from 38.64 to around 38.10.

"Danish exchange was exceptionally strong, moving up over 30 points during the week. South American exchanges, after showing strength, especially on Argentine and Uruguay, also yielded toward the end of the week.

"Other continental exchanges were designated as only nominal. Buyers were willing to pay advance in order to transmit funds to associates or affiliations in Shanghai, but bankers here were reluctant to enforce any contracts because of a conflict in progress."

"Foreign exchanges turned steadier. Apparently demand for dollars in this market has been temporarily satisfied with the buying of the past week. Saturday usually is a quiet day in the exchange market and nothing in the news came to hand to stimulate activity one way or the other. Sterling was only ⅛ of a cent lower at $4.43⅛, while French francs advanced 1¼ points to 5.23¾c. Other continental rates generally were firm, though Dutch guilders continued in supply. Canadian dollars maintained parity.

Cattle and fat lambs scored a material advance at the St. Louis National Stock Yards last week. Hogs finished slightly lower for the peroid and sheep were not essentially changed. Moderate receipts of cattle together with a healthy demand produced active and higher markets in this department virtually every day of the week. All and more of the previous week's decline was thus recovered. Both native and western steers advanced 50c and in some cases 75c in the week's market. The bulk of natives brought $8.00 to $10.00 per cwt., with choice up to $10.15, $10.75 and $11.00, the top. Western grass steers, numbering 100 cars and virtually all from Oklahoma ranged in price from $4.50 to $7.20. Light steers and heifers from native territory put on 25c and in some cases 50c. Mixed topped at $10.25 and straight heifers brought $10.00. Others sold around $9.00 and on down to $5.00 or under for plainer lots. Average trade in cows was 25c to 50c up. Beef offerings ranged from $3.75 to $7.00 late, with $4.00 to $5.00 catching the bulk. Cutters closed at $2.75 to $3.75 and canners at $2.25 to $2.75. A 50c improvement in bulls advanced bolognas to $4.00 to $4.50 for a medium to good kind and $3.50 to $4.00 for a common to medium grade. Beef animals with weight commanded a spread of $4.50 to $5.50. Stocker and feeder steers proved active and heavier the fore part of the week, but eased off slightly on the close. Prices were quotable in a range of $3.00 for a common stocker type to $7.50 for choice feeders. The bulk of sales was $4.00 to $6.00. Stock cows, heifers and bulls encountered a fair demand at firm prices. Veal calves went up $1.00, top late in the week reaching $12.00, and bulk of the desirable kinds making $11.25 to $11.50. Heavy calves and Southern canner yearlings strengthened somewhat late in the week, the latter commanding $2.75 in the Friday session.

Hog Quality Good.

Last week witnessed a slight gain in the volume of swine received at this market, receipts totaling approximately 68,736 head compared with a run of 61,653 for the previous week's offering and 85,667 for the corresponding period a year ago. Quality for the entire six days taken as a whole ruled good, arrivals including a generous proportion of the better grades of butcher hogs averaging 190 pounds or better. Comparatively few of the Southern kinds arrived, these classes when on sale meeting a very limited demand from all buyers. Prices show a lower trend compared with the previous week's close on all classes of swine. Tops for the week ranged from $9.95 for the low top to $10.30 for the high point. The highest markets held sway during the first part of the week, Tuesday featuring the high top of $10.30. From that day on markets continued to drop with closing sales showing a loss of 5c to 10c from the previous week's windup. Best butcher hogs finished for the week at a decline of 5c to 10c, sales of the offerings from 190 pounds and up in a spread of $9.85 to $9.95 largely, the latter figure representing the top for full loads. The demand all week has been with the butcher grades, these kinds when of choice quality commanding premium prices. Lighter hogs averaging from 160 to 180 pounds are also lower with declines on this class placed at 5c to 10c. Sales are generally from $9.75 to $9.85, some of the off quality kinds, however, selling under these figures. Losses in the pig classes were more severe for the week, sales ranging from 50c to 75c under the previous six-day close. The better weight kinds from 130 to 150 pounds are 25c to 50c lower at $8.50 to $9.25 with the medium weight kinds from 110 to 130 pounds generally 50c off at $7.25 to $8.50 and lighter pigs and pee wees from 110 pounds and down 50c to 75c lower at $6.50 to $7.25. Packer sows are unevenly weak to 10c lower at $8 to $8.25, with stags unchanged at $6 to $7 mainly. Prices closed on the different classes as follows: Best butchers 190 pounds and over $9.85 to $9.95, lighter grades from 160 to 180 pounds at $9.75 to $9.85 mostly. Strong weight pigs from 130 to 150 pounds at $8.50 to $9.25, medium weights 110 to 130 pounds $7.25 to $8.50, and light pigs and pee wees at $6.50 to $7.25. Packer sows quotable at $8 to $8.25 and stags at $6 to $7, according to weight and quality.

Lamb Prices Rise.

Sales the past week in the lamb division of this market showed a sharp upturn, receipts ruling moderate in volume. The total number offered for sale during the six days reached 10,438 had compared with an offering of 12,471 for the previous week and a run of 16,923 for the same six days last year. Arrivals were generally of good quality, a generous proportion of the fat native lambs being included with a few Arkansas lambs thrown in. Buyers for the packers paid up to $13.50 last week on best lambs with the top to local butchers reaching $13.75. These sales are mostly 50c higher than the previous week, spots looking higher. Closing quotations on good to choice quality lambs are from $12.75 to $13.75, medium to good quality offerings selling generally from $11.75 to $12.75. There was a wider spread in the prices of the plain to medium kinds, sales ranging from $9.50 to $11.75, depending on the weight and quality of the individuals. Buyers showed much discrimination against the plain half fat Southwest lambs, prices on some of these offerings being little better than culls. Cull lambs are quotable in a spread of $7 to $7.50 with skips steady at $3 to $5 mainly, according to weight and quality.

Mutton sheep continued in good demand last week at prices that showed practically no change from the previous six-day period. The supply of aged kinds was very light as has been the case for quite a while back. Buyers secured the big end of the choice light mutton ewes around $5 with a few of the choicest offerings noted occasionally as high as $5.50. Medium and heavy sheep sold largely around $3.50 to $4.50. Choppers and bucks are quotable at $2 to $2.50 and canners at $1 to $1.50 largely.

Horses and Mules.

Horse and mule receipts the past week embraced 1200 head, slightly better than [illegible], 600 of which were on commission. Markets were in good shape, ruling active and strong under the moderate showing. The Southern trade was especially good, buyers from that section affording ready outlet for fat Southern mares and geldings and cotton mules and feeders. Other trade involved wagon horses, Cuban riding horses, big mules and mine mules. There was a good clearance and more of the Southern classes could have been sold had they been available. Virtually all of the run was native. There will be a Western sale, however, Tuesday.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Heavy selling continued in American Woolen today, sweeping the stock downward again. At its low American Woolen was off over 20 points from where it was selling just before the directors' action was made known Thursday.

The week in the bond market closed with prices steady for investment securities but with irregularity in the more speculative descriptions. Liberties, for the most part maintained the small advance of Friday. On the week all the active issues are slightly higher and this notwithstanding the tendency toward higher rates for money. It is believed that Government purchases have been the sustaining influence. If so it is argued the Treasury Department does not expect materially lower prices for Government bonds in the immediate future.

In foreign bonds the new Belgian 6½s were again in demand today and touched their high price of a point above the offering figure. The success of this $30,000,000 foreign financing has been one of the features of the week. The bonds are now selling on a lower yield basis than the more seasoned Belgian 7½s and 8s.

The general average price of foreign bonds, however, is down on the week. French issues have all dragged heavily and French 7½s lost ground substantially. Despite the general tendency there have been points of strength in the foreign list, one of them being Sweden 6s.

Total new offerings of the week were more than $77,000,000. The largest were the Belgian 6½s already referred to, and the $26,000,000 Canadian National Railways 4s first sold on a 4.75 basis.

In Financial Field

Utah Securities Saturday was selling around its highest for the year. The last earnings statement showed that in July gross income amounted to $873,420 as against $791,335 in the month last year, while net was over $40,000 higher. For the 12 months ended July 31 net profits were $5,311,783 compared with $4,897,696 last year.

Corning crude oil has been reduced ten cents a barrel to $1.65. No change in other eastern grades is reported.

Surplus of Lehigh Valley Railroad for the quarter ended June 30 declined to $1,714,022 from $2,527,605 in the corresponding period last year.

BRITISH INDUSTRIAL AND TRADE SITUATION REVIEW

Special Wireless to New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post in weekly review today says:

"The German loan continues the center of active discussion in financial quarters, though mid-Oct. is regarded as representing an optimistic expectation as the issue date. A great amount of detail work will be required for the arrangements at each center. Discussions are likely to begin here at the end of the month.

The Industrial Position.

"Our iron and steel trade certainly is suffering through a relapse, following a temporary boom as a result of the Ruhr occupation. These industries hope to benefit from the stimulus of empire development under the extension of the Trade Facilities act, which was virtually the sole outcome of the Empire Conference, whereby three quarters interest for the first five years of loans raised here for expenditures are to be contributed by the Treasurer as grant not repayable from future profits or otherwise. The regulations have been formulated and it is hoped that this development will lead to acceleration of construction, hydroelectric and other schemes in New Zealand and elsewhere.

"The cotton trade outlook is considered distinctly brighter on the promise of larger supplies of raw material. The indications are that many orders are awaiting stabilization of the price level. Bradford Woolen trade is good though it is uncertain whether the rehabilitation of Germany will bring more advantages through the reopening of a former valuable market than disadvantages through competition. The woolen and cloth trade still is affected temporarily by French competition through the instability of the franc. Even the Nottingham lace trade previously characterized as a ruined industry is reporting improving business and American buying.

UTILITIES PROMINENT IN TRADE ON THE CURB

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—The demand that appeared on the curb exchange today was insufficient to offset selling pressure following the reactionary tendencies that developed late Friday. Business on the whole was in reduced volume after the opening and subsequent trading lacked activity of market. Nickel Plate produced only a few transactions with sales around Friday's closing figures. Price movements generally were narrow and [illegible] particularly noticeable in the [illegible]

COTTON TRADE AWAITS GOVERNMENT REPORT

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—The cotton market opened firm today at an advance of 6 to 15 points. Active positions sold about 8 to 17 points net higher in the first few minutes of further pre-Government reports covering, stimulated by relatively steady Liverpool cables. Temperatures in the South also were considered too low for the best further development of the plant, but the bulge met increased offerings around 24.65c for October, a 24.20c for December and prices eased off 8 or 10 points. Part of the selling was for Southern account, presumably hedging. The early demand was supplied by hedge selling and the market later sagged off under commission-house liquidation. October declining to 24.50c and December to 24.04c. There appeared to be a little more trade buying as December approached the 24c level, but rallies were restricted. The market closed irregular at net advances of 6 to 11 points.

FREEBORG SUSPECTS IN BELLEVILLE JAIL

James Breen and Ralph Southard Unable to Furnish Bonds of $40,000 Each.

James Breen and Ralph Southard, who are held in the St. Clair County Jail at Belleville in connection with the holdup of the First National Bank at Freeburg, Aug. 23, were arraigned yesterday before Justice of the Peace Wangelin, but waived their preliminary hearing. They were unable to furnish bonds of $40,000 each.

Breen, alias George Mason, and Southard, alias Elgin Custard, have been identified by bank employes as two of the seven robbers who escaped with $10,500. They deny any connection with the crime.

The two suspects were arrested at Jonesboro, Ark., last week and brought back yesterday. At the time of their arrest $1350 was found on Breen. The money included six new $20 notes bearing the signature of Russell Hamill and Susie Wolf, president and cashier, respectively, of the Freeburg bank. Hamill and Miss Wolf were among those held up by the robbers, who sped away in automobiles.

PUBLIC WELFARE DEPARTMENT HOLDS THIRD ANNUAL PICNIC

Nursing Bottle Contest for Men and Boxing Bouts Are Features of Outing.

The Department of Public Welfare held its third annual picnic yesterday afternoon and evening at Triangle Park, Broadway and Meramec street. There were games, athletic contests, a jazz band, dinner and dancing. Prizes were awarded for the largest family present, the employe having the longest record of service, and a nursing bottle contest for men.

A feature of the evening was a series of four boxing bouts between representatives of various city departments. Mayor Kiel delivered a talk to the gathering of about 3000 city employes.

The picnic was in a private park because park rules forbid such picnics in public parks at this time of the year.

AMERICA'S MILLION NARCOTIC ADDICTS SAID TO NEED MEDICAL HELP, NOT POLITICAL NOSTRUM

Dr. Archibald Olph, Former Congressman, Points Out Buncombe and Ballyhoo With Which Serious Subject Is Overwhelmed.

How to deal with the narcotic drug situation is one of the most urgent problems before the American people. One million men and women, according to the figures of the United States Treasury Department, are addicted to narcotics. If, unaided, they try to break off the use of the drug they suffer agonies, collapse, die. Bills are before Congress which purport to be for the relief of these sufferers. They seem to provide punishment rather than medical help.

Light is thrown on this bitterly disputed subject by Dr. Archibald Ernest Olph of 412 High street, West Hoboken, N. J., who is peculiarly well informed in all its details. He is a doctor of 16 years' practice, and recently retired from Congress, where he served as Representative of his home district. As an active practitioner of medicine as well as Congressman, Dr. Olph is familiar not only with the medical facts about narcotic addiction, to which he has given special study, but also with the political buncombe and ballyhoo with which the subject has been overwhelmed.

By WILLIAM HEMMINGWAY.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.

"WHAT is the greatest need in the narcotic situation?" Dr. Olph was asked.

"Humane and intelligent application of medical information to its problems," he replied. "Schemers and dupes of schemers are bringing measures before Congress to 'prevent' this and 'control' that branch of narcotic drug addiction. They might as well offer laws to abolish typhoid. If a man has typhoid he is sick, and what he needs most in the world is a good doctor; if a man is addicted to narcotic drugs he is quite as sick, and what he most needs in the world is a good doctor.

"But the fact that the narcotic addict is a sick man, although known to most of the doctors who have had experience with him, is bitterly disputed by a small but politically powerful minority of doctors. They cling to the old doctrine, generally believed throughout the medical profession until the discoveries of Petty, Bishop and other pioneers in medicine showed the contrary, that narcotic drug addiction is a vice, a degenerate habit, which can be cast off by will power. You might as well try to cast out typhoid or smallpox by will power. That has been proved over and over again in cases of record before scientific bodies."

"Then why isn't the truth generally acknowledged and real medical help given to the addict?" he was asked.

One of Richest Grafts.

"Because the truth will kill off one of the richest grafts in America," Dr. Olph answered. "As you probably know, new truths in medicine have never been popular. They have to fight the inertia of old, settled ideas. When Jenner advocated vaccination against smallpox they hounded him to death because he dared to raise his impious hand against a plague sent by God to punish the wicked. When Pasteur announced his discovery of the germ of rabies and of an attenuated culture of it which being injected into the bloodstream of one bitten by a mad dog would prevent his going mad, the medical profession of France did their utmost to sweep this impious pretender off the face of the earth. When after a few years they gathered at the Sorbonne to join the nation in paying highest honors to Pasteur for his discovery, the triumphant scientist came on the platform dragging his paralyzed right side after him. The persecutions of his medical brethren had brought on a stroke of hemiplegia—but at last they admitted and honored the truth.

"It is much the same with this new truth about narcotic drug addiction, with this additional incentive for denying it: The operation of quack or so-called 'cures' and 'sanitariums' for the relief of drug addicts is an industry which yields immense revenues for charlatans in various parts of the country. They administer various panaceas, urge the victim to summon up his will power, and relieve him of all the money they can squeeze out of him. These charlatans have enough money and political power to carry on campaigns before Congress, Legislatures and in the newspapers, loudly calling for 'control' when they know well that the real need is for enlightenment. But that would end their graft; so they keep up their shrieking for nothing but the light of truth.

"One of the favorite means of obscuring the facts is the raising of petty incidental points of false issues and creating a lot of talk and smoke around them. Every politician is familiar with this trick. The false issue at present being yowled about is the abolition of heroin. Last year it was 'international control' of the growth of the poppy. Both of these false issues were brought before the Congress by Representative Stephen G. Porter, having behind him apparently the same group of interests and individuals and publicity dissemination. Completely ignoring all the facts of opiate addiction and the addiction situation as widely recorded in reliable scientific and other literature, Mr. Porter now revives the old hullaballoo to 'abolish heroin' supported by such persons as Alexander Lambert and Richmond Pearson Hobson.

"These people seem to be ignorant of the fact that opium or any of its derivatives or preparations sufficiently long administered will create the physical process of addiction in any red-blooded animal. In this fact heroin does not differ from morphine, cocaine, laudanum, paregoric, or any other opiate, and singling it out for separate legislation, publicity, propaganda and buncombe, is merely a political effort to evade the real issues and facts of the narcotic situation.

"The above facts were brought out by reliable authorities at Mr. Porter's hearing last year. It is interesting to observe that almost without exception those appearing at hearings and sponsoring such legislation are either of the 'uplift' reform type of uninformed laymen or the man with the medical degree associated with medico-political administration rather than with the actual clinical problems of bedside medicine and the care of the sick.

The Charlatan's Ballyhoo.

"Evidence of protest of competent and qualified clinicians against these smoke-screens of wildcat legislation is seen in the protest of a group of Pennsylvania clinicians against the Porter promotion in the attempt to abolish heroin.

"This group, led by Hobart A. Hare, distinguished therapeutist of international reputation, state that heroin possesses particular and irreplacable therapeutic properties, and that depriving physicians of it by statute would have no effect on the amount smuggled and peddled. They added one paragraph which applies to all the recent attempts to befuddle the narcotic drug situation by silly laws and sensational uproar. They said:

"'This is not a subject to be controlled by vote. It is not even a question of what a majority may think. It is a question that involves the rights of a given number of physicians of wide experience to use a drug, the very existence of which today shows that it must have proved efficient or it would have been put in the discard long ago.'

"This refutes the action emanating from the council on health of the American Medical Association in 1920, to the effect that heroin has no peculiar therapeutic value.

"Medical organization politics and administration cannot be casually taken as any measure of the opinion of the practicing physician or scientist. And in estimating the value of certain scientific opinion or statistics or reports in publicity or before legislative hearings, or influencing administration or interpretation of laws, this is a factor

Decrease in Importation, Sale and Use of Narcotic Drugs in U. S. Indicated

AN encouraging sign in connection with the narcotic drug problem is noted in a recent report by the director of the narcotic division of the prohibition unit, department of health of the city of New York, who says that the importation, sale and use of narcotic drugs in the United States is decreasing. The importation of opium has decreased from 471,000 pounds annually for the ten-year period prior to the effective date of the Harrison narcotic law in 1915 to slightly less than 136,000 pounds in 1922, decreasing the per capita consumption thirty-six grains annually to approximately seven grains, or, in morphine, the equivalent of seven-eighths of one grain. For the six months ending December 31, 1923, the importation of opium particularly showed a decrease, while sales of the various derivatives of opium fell off fifty per cent over the previous six months. Importation of cocao leaves dropped from 626,341 pounds in 1920 to 342,260 pounds in 1923, a drop of approximately fifty per cent in three years.

The course of the globe-girdling flight by the U. S. Army aviators is indicated by the black line. The aviators have yet to complete the line of flight from Boston to Seattle, their starting point.

Chairman of Committee Which Handled Trip Writes That It Was Undertaken to Demonstrate Practicability of Aerial Transportation and Tells of Precautions Taken and Hazards Encountered.

By Robert J. Brown Jr.,
First Lieutenant Army Air Service and Chairman the World Flight Committee.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.

LESS than two centuries ago the ordinances of certain European cities prohibited street lights on the principle that darkness had been ordained by a Divine Power and must not be desecrated. Years ago in our own country severe punishment was inflicted where persons who dared to express an unusual thought were convicted of witchcraft, and at a still later date some laughed at the steamboat and others jeered at the first steam locomotive. The rapid development of the science of aeronautics has to a great extent stilled the jeers of the skeptics and now one hesitates to place limitations on the future progress in this field of endeavor. Modern science and invention have, indeed, concentrated the work of a century into a cycle of the sun.

The vision of speeding through space at the rate of over 266 miles an hour with forest, plain, sea and mountain racing by in a kaleidoscopic view on a continuous voyage through the air; out of sight of land only four times and then for less than two hours each time; covering 30,000 miles and passing over 28 nations of the globe; and making a complete circumaviation of the world in less than five days, will, in the not far distant future, become a reality.

Although continuous flying over such a long duration of miles is at present beyond the human endurance of one man, it still lies within the realm of possibility that the world can be encircled within five days, bearing in mind the fact that airplanes have already made over 266 miles an hour and have refueled in the air while in flight. It remains only for a world airway with proper servicing and maintenance facilities to be established, and relays of equipment and pilots to make possible this feat.

World Flyers Pioneer Work

Such an achievement requires exploration and pioneer work and this is being undertaken by the airplanes of the Army Air Service which are now completing an air voyage around the world and rapidly bringing to a close one of the most hazardous and thrilling exploits in history, replete with dangers and hardships never before encountered by man.

The Army Air Service has conducted an uphill fight to bring before the people of our country the importance of aviation in national defense. Although military and naval defense policies are now laid down, there is still a total lack of a policy for air defense in our country. This is to some extent apparently due to the dissemination of the responsibility for aerial defense between the Army and Navy and consequent natural inclination of these two services to think along lines in which they have been formerly trained, and overlook the importance of air power in the defense of our nation. Then there is also the natural reaction which normally occurs during retrenchment following every great war. Burdened with taxes caused by war expenditures, the citizens of the republic are quite naturally demanding that the expenses of armaments be reduced to a minimum and, consequently, our legislators, knowing this attitude, and finding few active supporters of air defense policy in the military and naval services, have taken no decided action to regulate, control or build up aeronautics either commercially or in the services. Other great nations with longer and more bitter experience in the World War are active in building up the air defense of their respective countries and in establishing a definite policy of air defense in their respective nations. Lagging behind the other great Powers of the globe, our Army Air Service finds itself today with its small annual appropriations for the procurement and operation of aircraft practically demobilized. In spite of this fact the demands for the use of army airplanes and the assistance of air service personnel in carrying out peace-time projects is daily increasing.

The army has always been a forerunner of progress; it explored our great Northwest territory; it established outposts of civilization during the settlement of our country; it guarded the trails for the covered wagon; it established railroads and built highways and assisted and protected the early settlers and pioneers during the westward growth of our nation. Following out this progressive policy, in spite of the small appropriation for Government aircraft and of the failure of commercial aeronautics to develop and support our aircraft industry, American ingenuity and invention have contrived, through the direct efforts of the Army Air Service, to place the United States foremost among the nations of the world in development and progress in the science of aviation. The Army Air Service has brought to America practically all the important aeronautical records of the world. Today this country holds 31 world records for airplane performance. Three of these 31 are held by the navy; the other 28 by the air service of the army. These include speed records for various distances, duration and distance records. The altitude record, until recently held by the army, is now held by France. The three records held by the navy are for high speed and these were until 1923 held by the army. There is no doubt that the combat airplanes developed by the United States Army are the fastest and most efficient combat airplanes of the world, but unfortunately very few of these airplanes can be purchased each year with the small amount of money made available by Congress and as a result our aircraft industry, dependent as it is for its existence on Government support, is gradually vanishing.

What Air Service Has Done

Major-General Mason M. Patrick, Chief of Air Service of the United States Army, is fully alive to the possibilities and importance of this new arm of national defense, which has developed so rapidly during the past few years. Practically all the world records held by the Army Air Service have been brought to the United States during Gen. Patrick's tenure of office. Many projects, including bombing maneuvers against battleships, co-operation with other arms, long-distance cross-country flights to Alaska and return, Porto Rico and return, a nonstop flight across the continent, a dawn-to-dusk flight from New York to San Francisco and the world flight, have been initiated. All have been successfully completed with the exception of the last named, which is now nearing its goal. Airways have been established and are being extended throughout the country over which airplanes travel on regular schedule. Gen. Patrick has stated that:

> The purposes of this flight are to demonstrate the feasibility of establishing aerial communication with all countries of the world; the practicability of travel by air through regions where surface transportation does not exist or at best is slow, tedious and uncertain; to prove the ability of modern types of aircraft to operate under all climatic conditions; to stimulate the adaption of aircraft to the needs of commerce; to bring before the people of the world the excellence of American products in the interest of our American industry; and lastly to bring to the United States the honor of being the first nation to fly around the world.

The airplanes used have passed through every known climate of the globe. They have been operating under the most trying conditions: in the torrid heat of the equator, and have successfully negotiated the frigidity of the Arctic regions. New navigation instruments are being given a practical test. Special equipment has been developed for this expedition which is proving practical. This includes earth inductor compass, Booster radiators, and pigmented airplane dope.

Practically all the aircraft of the world is today manufactured by about five nations. The flight of the United States Army airplanes around the world has passed over 28 foreign countries which are controlled by 15 separate Governments. This flight, therefore, while it creates interest in aeronautics in our own nation, is also a practical demonstration to the world of the reliability and usefulness of American airplanes. It is, furthermore, a mission of international amity.

The credit for the success of the flight must be given to the personnel who are actually accomplishing this mission of pioneering an international airway. The flying personnel selected have no superiors in the world. They have repeatedly demonstrated their ability to withstand hardships and to navigate successfully through unknown areas. Not once during the entire expedition has an airplane been forced to turn back; not once has one deviated from its course.

The success of the expedition is in part due to the completeness of the plans and preparations made for the care of the flyers and the servicing of their airplanes during their hazardous journey. Under Gen. Patrick's direction a World Flight Committee composed of officers of experience in similar expeditions of a lesser magnitude was formed and every source of information as to the best route around the world; the best time to make the flight and the best equipment to be used was exhausted.

Pathfinding Expedition

The area which afforded the greatest difficulty was that in which the flyers have recently operated, i. e., the North Atlantic Ocean near the Arctic Circle across the little known islands of Iceland and Greenland where airplanes had never before flown. Under the authority of the Secretary of War, John W. Weeks, Gen. Patrick sent a pathfinding expedition of one officer to Greenland and Iceland in the summer of 1923 to investigate the feasibility of traveling through these islands. The favorable report of this officer finally determined the route across the North Atlantic Ocean which was selected so that the length of each hop would be reduced to a minimum rather than risk the success of the expedition on one turn of the dice by attempting a nonstop flight across the Atlantic Ocean.

As the average life of one airplane would not normally permit it to make a complete circumaviation of the globe, several airplanes were started. Our experience on the Alaskan and Porto Rico flight taught that certain supplies and equipment would be needed in the Arctic region and different ones in the tropical areas through which the flight must pass.

The extreme cold of the North Pacific and Atlantic, the typhoons of China, the torrential equatorial rains, the monsoons of India, the heat of the equator, all required special attention in the shipment of supplies. Where the route skirted the Arctic Circle warm clothing for the flyers and alcohol and glycerin for the radiators was provided. In Greenland reindeer sleeping bags were ready.

To withstand the equatorial heat airplane parts shipped to depots in the Orient were given extra coats of varnish. Approximately 100 tons of supplies were shipped to various points of the globe.

Although the flight was allowed six months outside of the United States for travel, the present indications are that five and one-half months will be the approximate time required for the completion of the expedition.

The airplanes selected for the flight were manufactured by the Douglas company of Santa Monica, Cal. They are all American in design and construction and were chosen because they are capable of carrying sufficient gasoline and oil for long flights, and could be used with either pontoons for water landings or with wheels for overland flights. These airplanes are each powered with a Liberty engine of more than 400 horsepower, designed and built for the Army Air Service during the war. With the latest model of this engine the world cruisers as land planes have attained a speed of 105 miles an hour at 1650 propeller revolutions, and over 70 miles an hour while operating as seaplanes.

18 Supply and Repair Depots

Thirty-five of these engines were distributed to various points around the world so that there were actually eight complete engines available for each of the original four airplanes of the flight.

There were 18 supply and repair depots on the world flight route, approximately 1500 miles apart. At seven of these depots, major overhaul could be given the airplanes; at the others minor repairs could be made, and spares and tools carried by each airplane replenished. The distribution of engines to these depots was made on the basis of replacing each motor after it had been run for about 60 hours.

The wisdom of this distribution is evidenced by the fact that when the first new motor was needed by Maj. Martin in Alaska one was available within 500 miles. Again, when Lieut. Smith's engine failed him near Touraine in French Indo-China, one was available at the next scheduled stop and was rushed to him over night on an American destroyer. When Lieut. Nelson needed a new engine in

PAPERS are showing up the terrible results of Ku Kluxism in Illinois, where it has got possession of ministers of the gospel and the National Guards and turned the mob loose to such bloody deeds as has disgraced Williamson County, and the end is not yet.

But let us look at our own State where for the first time in Missouri's history religion has entered fearfully into the National Guards, where the Ku Klux Klan has destroyed the fine 138th Regiment of St. Louis; where the openly avowed Ku Kluxer, Heber Nations, former Labor Commissioner and brother of Gus Nations, badly defeated candidate for Attorney-General, late liquor inspector, is Brigade Adjutant under Gen. Raupp, in charge of the National Guards of Missouri. What are Gov. Hyde, commander in chief of the National Guards, and Adjutant-General Raupp thinking about in allowing such men as Nations to hold such an office in violation of the oath which he is obliged to take, to support the Consitution?

This is a serious situation that confronts our State, and pussyfooting on Ku Kluxism by any party will not satisfy the people, for it is the most vital issue in this campaign.

Where Are the Birds?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SOMETIME since I read where the Audubon Society made a request that anyone noticing the bird-life of the country should report any notable change. In a fifty-mile ride to reach the confluence of King's River and White River, in Barry County, the great depletion of bird-life was apparent. In fact, for miles upon miles not a bird could be seen of the kind which formerly frequented these woods. No robins, no jays, a few thrush, no bluebirds.

Knowing How to Read.

THE remark of the "exacting cynic," on which you commented editorially, was correct—hardly anybody knows how to read—in the sense of getting the cream of what is read. Superficial reading is like a bird's-eye view of a picturesque region that entrances you when you get a view of it close up; and to view close up what is contained in a good article one must read at a snail's pace—slowly, carefully, looking up again and again every word not clearly understood in all its shades of meaning.

Let the rapid and superficial reader follow this course for a while and he will admit that he never knew how to read. However extensive our vocabulary may be, none of us are walking dictionaries. An ordinary, simple and innocent-looking word or group of words will often open up a scene or a situation of absorbing interest. We often hear it remarked of the school child—"How well he reads"—but good reading is not going over the page without a hitch; good reading is understanding what is read; even if enunciated in the slow and halting manner of the small boy wrestling with his first lessons.

Fooling the Farmer.

THE Republican party leaders have ever presumed upon the ignorance of the masses of the people, and have specialized in their presumption upon the utter imbecility of the Republican farmers of this country. Notwithstanding the fact that the farmers of our country have been milked dry, and bled white in the last three years and a half, principally by the process of a protective tariff, the present administration is standing pat on the high tariff dogma. And thousands of lean, lank Republican farmers, with a mortgage on their farms will go to the polls this fall and vote to continue the agony. Oh ye gods! "Wisdom is approved of all her children."

How long can the farmers of this country be fed up on the silly, fatuous doctrine that they make money by selling their products at home, and buying their necessities of home manufacturers, even if they get less for their grain, and pay more for what they purchase?

This is not only the logical result of the protective tariff, but the actual condition that has maintained during the Harding and Coolidge administrations.

A bunch of gifted propagandists are now engaged in broadcasting the story that the recent advance in the price of wheat and corn is all due to the wise policies of the Republican party. The bad shortage in the wheat crop and the extremely dangerous condition of the corn crop is in nowise a factor in the better prices now prevailing.

This bunch knows that they can fool part of the people all the time.

SELAH.

COMMON-SENSE GOVERNMENT.

Chairman Butler of the Republican National Committee is reported to have informed the President the past week that the political outlook is "very encouraging." Senator Watson of Indiana, who has been stumping the West, struck a firmer note. He says the President's election is assured. Mark Sullivan, who seems to have become propagandist-in-chief for the Republican cause, is a more subtle and more persuasive performer. In his letters which the New York Herald-Tribune is syndicating Mr. Sullivan, an ostensibly impartial reporter, discovers omens favorable to Mr. Coolidge in every breeze that blows.

All such prophesying is, of course, sheer nonsense. Forecasting the result of a November election in September is a task for seers of whom none are extant. And this year even a top-notch seer would hesitate to tackle the job. The campaign has as yet hardly commenced. Mr. Coolidge has made but one formal speech—his acceptance. Mr. Davis has made three, his Labor Day address, he was careful to point out, being nonpolitical. La Follette, whose appearance at the head of a third party of consequence has complicated the situation, has just delivered his salutatory.

With the contest in its warming-up preliminaries, how palpably absurd is Senator Watson's assertion that the result is assured and how ludicrous and disillusioning is it that a journalist of Mark Sullivan's standing would presume to say that sentiment has crystallized or is crystallizing!

This much, however, may be acknowledged: The Republican strategy is excellent. The longer the campaign is in getting started the better for them. Apathy is their ablest ally. Public commotion, with its attendant curiosity and discussion, must be suppressed as far as possible. The administration record will not bear examination. Scrutiny is the last thing the Republicans desire. Best ye forget is their refrain. Mr. Coolidge's Yankee shrewdness, therefore, was in evidence when he made common sense his keynote. For common sense is eminently respectable. It has entree everywhere—as welcome in the House of Have as in the House of Want.

It seems impossible, however, that their opponents will let the Republicans get away with the common-sense formula without, at least, inquiring as to what Mr. Coolidge means by a common-sense government.

There has been sickening corruption in Washington since March 4, 1921, but Mr. Coolidge has not been disturbed by it, nor has any other Republican spokesman. Does a common-sense administration mean a repetition of Fallism, Forbesism and Daughertyism?

The present tariff law is yielding enormous profits to the special interests that wrote the bill and has made the cost of living a burdensome problem for the American people. Is that common-sense government and are we to have four more years of it if Mr. Coolidge is elected?

Labor has been told about the high wages it is receiving, but it has not been told about the kind of dollars it is being paid with. Are 60-cent dollars the currency of a common-sense government?

The farmers have been informed they must work out their own salvation, must develop unselfish and capable leaders from their own ranks who will devise sound measures of relief and will not be beguiled and misled by demagogues or visionaries who promise abundance by way of Government subsidy. Government subsidy for the farmer, it seems, is a vicious, foreign vagary, but Government subsidy for a manufacturing interest is a noble policy, strictly native, too; hatched from an American eagle's egg on the Fourth of July.

If that is common-sense government, then that's that. If it is not, then the public will want to know what common-sense government is. And there are eight weeks yet in which to wring an answer from the Republican party to the question:

What is Common-Sense Government?

THE UNBOUND PROMETHEUS.

A hundred years ago last spring the body of a young man just under 30 was washed ashore near Carrara, the Italian city whence comes the magnificent marble. Under quarantine regulations, the body was consumed to ashes on the beach. The drowned young man was an exile, socially speaking, from his native land, England. To all orthodox religionists who had heard of him his name was Anathema, though in private life he was known as Percy Bysshe Shelley.

Young Mr. Shelley had written, and published chiefly at his own expense, a considerable quantity of verse, which at the time of his premature death was known to but a comparative few. These, including Lord Byron, Leigh Hunt and other laborers at letters, looked upon Shelley as a great poet. The rest of the world that was aware of him at all regarded him as a dangerous fanatic. It is more than likely that most of those who read or heard about his demise felt like murmuring something like "good riddance."

Now there is being erected on the beach near Carrara, not far from the place of Shelley's cremation, a colossal statue of Prometheus which will be taller than the Statue of Liberty in the harbor of New York. In addition to serving as a memorial to one of the greatest of the world's poets, this Promethean figure will be a lighthouse warning ships against danger. The purest of Carrara marble goes into its making.

Shelley himself was an inveterate defender of liberty—political liberty, personal liberty, the liberty of the body, the liberty of the soul. It is a testimonial to the progress of liberal thought in the past century that this enduring effigy of the unbound Prometheus is to be reared to the memory of the author of "Prometheus Unbound" and other works of genius in verse and prose.

ROMANCE RESTORED TO THE SMITHY.

The blacksmith in the Illinois town of Fidelity proved faithful in part only to an old tradition when he added barbering, not to say bobbing, to his business as a side line. In olden times the barber was also the doctor and the dentist. He shaved or sheared you while you waited, and if you had toothache he pulled the tooth, or if his professional wisdom seemed to justify the operation he drained out a pint or so of your blood. This latter treatment, be it remembered, was surgical, not tonsorial.

Fidelity's village blacksmith has restored a portion of the old-time romance that inhered in the smithy which stood under the spreading chestnut tree. His enterprise makes a beauty parlor of the blacksmith shop. Pretty girls go thither to get bobbed, and lovelorn swains gather to gaze upon the bobbed beauties—and incidentally to get a shave. The blacksmith proves his versatility by shoeing a mule and shearing a maiden in consecutive order.

MACDONALD'S WORLD LEADERSHIP.

Ramsay MacDonald, addressing the assembly of the League of Nations, has sounded the note which, if heeded, will open a new chapter in the world's concerted endeavor for peace and which, if not heeded, foretells a resumption of the old era of fear and distrust, competitive armaments, lying diplomacy and war.

The note which MacDonald sounded is exactly the note which the "parliament of man" in and out of the League of Nations has needed. It is a frank, scholarly, dispassionate statement of facts vitalized by an earnest devotion to peace and to the emancipation of man from the yoke of carnage and distress.

The League of Nations, as has been said by distinguished friends of the allies, was the one forward step attained by the peace conference. The league has accomplished a great deal in the five years of its existence, but it has not solved as yet the kernel of the triune problem of "arbitration, security and disarmament."

Why? It is dogged by the old fear and suspicion and, as MacDonald says, by the want of definition of the word "security." It still thinks in dogmatic terms of a peace secured by armed force which can lead only to the old goal of catastrophe. MacDonald, practical student and honest man, perceives that, before the harvest of a tranquilized and disarmed world can be gathered, the soil must be prepared. There must be a consecration of leaders and peoples to the necessities of the undertaking. Governments and nations must understand before they act. Understanding can be reached only by the chastening of motives, by conference, intelligence, patience and good will. In MacDonald's words:

> We have to embody in the world confidence in order and the rectitude of law, and then the nations—with the League of Nations enjoying authority, with the League of Nations looked up to, not because its arm is great, but because its mind is calm and its nature is just—can pursue their destinies in a feeling of perfect security, none daring to make them afraid.

Such, in part, is MacDonald's answer, in behalf of Great Britain, to the French plea for a treaty of mutual assistance based on armed force. He is not insensible of the practical difficulties of his proposal. He does not lose sight of the realities in his enthusiasm for the ideal. On the contrary, he openly recognizes facts and conditions threatening to the peace of Europe and the success of the League of Nations probably more frankly than they have hitherto been stated in the councils of the league. He offers a policy which inspires hope at the same time that it dispels illusions.

MacDonald's great speech proclaims the leadership for which the world has been looking. It creates a new atmosphere, a new confidence. It mightily eclipses the opportunism of Lloyd George, the legalism of Hughes, the provincialism of Poincare. It vouchsafes a message of hope to fettered Germany and an invitation of fair dealing to outlawed Russia. It disarms the cynicism of the world and points directly to the one conceivable exit from the prison of armaments and false security which surrounds the human race.

THE TRIBUTE SPLENDID.

It is quite unnecessary to depend upon imaginative literature for inspirational episodes calculated to lift one out of the commonplaceness of the routine. In other words, and simpler, every now and then we may get a spiritual heft out of some little item in the day's news.

There is, for instance, the case of the Bavarian farmer, Herr Bauer, who enjoyed his old pipe so much that in his will he left a request that it be buried with him, together with his old pouch filled with tobacco. The widow saw to it that this was done, and upon her own initiative she put a box of matches in the casket.

You might search the written records of many generations without finding a more splendid tribute to a departed companion than was expressed by Frau Bauer in adding that little box of matches. It meant, quite of course, that she regarded the late Herr Bauer as such a good man that he was not going to turn up in the region where matches would be superfluous.

BACK TO RELIGIOUS TOLERANCE.

With one Williamson County clergyman preaching that love for the neighbor is the only solution for the present tragic condition and a number of others insisting that the Ku Klux Klan fight it out, the following letter from a citizen of Waterloo, Ill., is of interest. The writer says: "In this little town, what we call court week, Sept. 2 to 6, court lasted just exactly 1 hour and 30 minutes of the entire week, and the Judge was on his way back to East St. Louis. We have Catholics, Masons, Protestants, Knights of Columbus, etc., but in the 10 years I have lived here I never heard a religious argument in the town. Waterloo is paradise in comparison with Herrin, Ill. (The reason? We have no Glenn Young."

A Ku Klux champion, in a letter in Tuesday's Post-Dispatch, asserted that the sole purpose of the klan is to enforce prohibition; that charges of religious and racial intolerance are nothing but a "smoke screen," "thrown up by misguided newspapers to blind the public to the real and glorious work of the Ku Klux Klan."

But everyone knows that the modern klan was made possible by the propaganda work of religious periodicals such as The Menace, which for years carried on a crusade against Catholics. But for this preparatory work in building up a large body of religious prejudice, Simmons and the other founders of the revived klan would not have achieved the success they did. Religious intolerance was the original basis for the Simmons-Evans organization and is still its chief support.

Sheriff Galligan is right in charging certain pastors and churches in Williamson County with keeping the klan and antiklan strife active. If these preachers would leave the klan to its lay leaders and confine themselves to preaching human brotherhood, Herrin might soon be as peaceable as its little neighbor, Waterloo.

PANETELA.

Yes, Luella,
Things are moving
Much as some
Of us have guessed;
After all,
The League of Nations
As a steadier
Is best.
When we all
Have had our duckfits
And at last
Resort to sense,
This great concert
Of the nations
Will become
Our chief defense.

Of MacDonald;
After all
The noisy cries,
Of England
Well knows how
The matter lies.
Europe must Compose her troubles,
All at last
Controlling one,
Or the boasted Institutions
Of the mother
World are done.

Therefore,
Being obligated
To some sort
Of peace on earth,
Lo, the Premier
Discovers
That the League
Possesses worth!
That at which
We have been hooting
And at which
We all have hurled
Ridicule,
At last is greeted
As the true hope
Of the world.

So it goes,
My little girlie:
When the blood
Is boiling hot
No one knows
If any matter
Posed
Is workable
Or not.
Such things only
Are discovered
In the ultimate Discreet
After we have all
Recovered
From the momentary
Heat.

Thus it is
With this proposal:
After Wilson's
Voice is gone,
Lo, the Premier
Of England
Bids us still
To carry on.
Proving that While dreamers perish
Each one merely
For a day,
Sometimes
We have something
From them
For eternity
And aye.

(Monroe County, Mo. Appeal.)

For 30 years or more, a large snake has terrorized Macon County in the vicinity of Anabel. Last week, while a carnival company was in Macon, the snake trainer led a hunt for the reptile. The hunt continued all week, as many as 50 cars of people being engaged at one time. The snake was not seen, but evidences of his presence were found several times. Its track indicated that it was from six to eight inches in diameter and about 20 feet long. The snake trainer concluded that it was a large bull black snake. These, he said sometimes live to be 300 years old, but they are not poisonous.

Gen. Calles, the new President-elect in Mexico, has a novel idea that might be adopted by some of our other temporal rulers. He is in Europe looking over the modes and fashions in government before he takes office, and when he returns to the City of Mexico he will occupy rather more of a comparative point of view than is usual. Upon our picture page yesterday he was shown visiting President Ebert in Germany. Before he gets home he will look in upon all the moderns, and Mexico will be the beneficiary of his observations. It is doubtful if there is another such student of political science living as Gen. Calles is. Formerly a school teacher in Sonora, he was the Solon of that group which produced first Madero, then Carranza and finally Obregon. Excepting perhaps Lenin, no more moving force has appeared upon earth in our time. He has made Mexico in all respects a free country, and upon that freedom he plans to build a political and economic democracy. There has been nobody else quite like him upon this side of the sea since Thomas Jefferson.

THE LAST STAND.

Why women all want to be voting,
And thus held the suffragette joker!
On railroads of late I've been noting,
They all want to ride in the smoker.

Ere long they'll invade our sanctorum—
So near to the engine and stoker,
Our happiness just seems to bore 'em
And soon they will sit in the smoker.

Then good-bye to a pipe or cigar,
Farewell to a hand of stud poker,
When the women inhabit our car,
That haven of peace called the smoker.

They'll sit by our side, give a lecture,
Had such a wife I would croak her;
This forecast is not a conjecture,
When the women crowd into the smoker.

We'll tell 'em tobacco smoke yellows
And turns a pink skin to an ochre;
And I hope the rest of the fellows
Will point out the blight of the smoker.

Knowing that the North Atlantic section would be one of the most hazardous of the whole expedition extra supplies and a great dispersion of spare parts was made in this area. At practically every stop between England and Labrador, every conceivable item of supply that could be needed was available.

The boxes in which supplies were shipped were made of wood which could be used in repairing the airplanes, although, as one member of the committee remarked, "This precaution will be unnecessary by the time they have completed three-quarters of their route as their experiences up to that time would undoubtedly qualify any one of the members of the flight to hew an airplane out of a log."

It was humorously suggested that a few stove lids and electric fans should be included in the last division as the pilots selected are capable of flying home with no other equipment.

The Pacific flight was made during such bad weather that Lieut. Smith remarked, upon reaching Shanghai, China, after the 600-mile flight from Kagoshima, Japan, that he had just experienced the first good flying day since leaving the United States. A shorter route might have been taken to Calcutta from Hongkong, China, inland through Hanoi and Mandalay, famous in song and story, but here again safety was given precedence and a longer route along the coastline of French Indo China was chosen as it was considered preferable to risk a forced landing along the shore, even with its crocodiles, swamps and barbarians, but with a chance of rescue by passing vessels, than to risk landing in mountains and trackless jungle inhabited only by wild beasts and poisonous insects with its hopelessness of rescue before succumbing to the terrors of the jungle.

Near Akyab, Burma, the American flyers passed Maj. MacLaren, the British aviator, who was attempting to fly around the world in the opposite direction. He had met disaster there a few weeksc previous and was just preparing to continuue his voyage in another airplane. Two years ago a British airplane was forced down at Akyab, 40 miles at sea, two officers clinging to their wrecked plane for several days. The superstitious natives who inhabit the Malay peninsula in this vicinity rowed out in small boats to within speaking distance but did not dare to approach nearer for fear of being devoured by what they thought to be the devils of the deep. The aviators were finally rescued by a passing vessel. It must have been a relief to the American flyers to successfully pass this section of the route and avoid the "Jinx of Akyab."

THE SUPERANNUATE PREACHER.

From he Houston Post-Dispatch.

THE superannuate preacher is coming to be more fully appreciated by Texas Methodists. A report from Dr. Luther E. Todd of St. Louis, executive secretary of the board that is raising an endowment fund of $10,000,000 for the benefit of wornout preachers, shows that the Texas conferences are leading all others in the denomination in contributions, more than $68,000 in cash having been sent in this year, and the campaign is to run four years yet. Every conference subscribed or oversubscribed its quota, and the payments are being made on the pledges for this cause, more freely than upon the pledges to any other movement. The noble sense of gratitude to the old veterans manifested in the liberality shown in this enterprise of ministering to their necessities in their declining years comports well with the ideals for which the church stands. It may be taken as an index to the spirit of true religion that dominates Methodism in this State. The men who laid the foundations for the church in Texas wrought well—how well is reflected in the great organization that the church is today. The church is under a debt to them that is being paid by assuring them of the comforts of life as they sit in the shadows of the evening of life.

LA FOLLETTE AND LABOR.

From the Birmingham Age-Herald.

IN SENDING out his appeals for the support of various groups of organized labor, it appears that Mr. La Follette has placed the most important thing last. He should have made sure of his support before entering the lists. The success of a third party depends altogether upon widespread and insistent disapproval of the two main parties. Such disapproval has not been manifest as a general; but rather as a sporadic and indefinite symptom. The present appeal to labor bears all the marks of uneasiness on the part of Mr. La Follette and his immediate group. There is nothing definite that Mr. La Follette offers to labor which labor has not already within its grasp or which it will not obtain through present agencies and under present institutions. The soviet's rule in Russia and the consequent misery upon an entire people is a warning to the citizens of this country not to wander after strange political gods.

CALIFORNIA'S BABY CROP.

From the Philadelphia Bulletin.

CALIFORNIA, which is nothing if not practical, has issued an unofficial communication giving the value of the baby "crop" of the State in the last 12 months at $79,080,000, coming to the estimate by valuing the infants at tons weight and so many dollars per baby. Of course, the estimate is sent out from Los Angeles, that boom city of the Golden State, which loves to boast and sell town lots to Easterners. Somehow, that way of valuing babies is not agreeable. To say that a new-born baby has an economic value of $154 is carrying commercialization entirely too far. As well put a price on love. A baby is something to be coddled and cherished and set above rubies in price. A baby is an innocence come to earth and appealing to every protective instinct men and women have. A baby is not a piece of merchandise upon which to reckon profits. California might at least curb its money grabbers where babies are concerned.

in four days through rain and sand storms. Making up for time lost in the North Pacific, frequently two scheduled flights were made in one day. The flight route from India followed the Eastern shore of the Persian Gulf. Leaving Persia, a landing was made at Bagdad, Mesopotamia, known as "The Cradle of Civilization." Bagdad is one of the oldest cities in the world, existing records indicating that there has been a city in this spot for over 4000 years. Compared to it, New York and even London are as of yesterday. As the world flyers followed the old caravan route from Basra through Bagdad to Aleppo, Syria, a distance of over 800 miles in a few hours it was a decided contrast to the slow movement of the old camels, the stately "ships of the desert," which still make this journey at the rate of about 20 miles a day. The Ottoman Empire and European nations flitted by in rapid succession as the flyers followed the Franco-Rumanian airway across Europe. Upon the arrival of the American flyers in England, the world had been completely encircled in the air by Americans, the Atlantic Ocean having previously been crossed by American naval aviators in 1919.

Guided by Smoke Bombs.

Each of the airplanes carries small smoke bombs and is equipped with a drift sight. When out of sight of land the smoke bomb is dropped and after the plane has proceeded a few miles the smoke is sighted astern through a sighting tube or telescope. This telescope is connected with a pencil which traces on a horizontal piece of milk celluloid the line of flight between the smoke and the plane. If the airplane is flying perfectly straight and level, the steady movement of the telescope trained on the smoke will cause the line to be straight. The angle between this line and the fore and aft axis of the forward moving plane will be the angle of drift. Similar smoke bombs for this purpose have been located at all of the Atlantic stops.

Having determined the drift in this manner the flyers can then check their course accurately by the two compasses with which each plane is equipped, one the usual magnetic compass and the other a new type compass known as the earth inductor compass. The latter is not affected by the electrical phenomena of the Arctic regions and its use on the world flight is being given a practical test. Each compass is a check on the other.

The first landing after passing the Faroe Islands was 250 miles away. This leg of the trip was a disastrous one. On the first attempt to reach Iceland Lieuts. Smith and Wade were forced to turn back due to heavy fogs, while Nelson successfully completed the trip in about eight hours. The following day Smith overtook Nelson in spite of the fog but Wade was forced down with engine trouble midway between the Faroe Islands and Iceland. This probably could have been remedied had not a trawler in attempting to lift his airplane from the water smashed it beyond repair. Since the accident occurred through no fault of their own and after they had completed over 10,000 miles of their journey a new plane was sent to Pictou Harbor, Nova Scotia, so that Lieut. Wade and his companion could be in at the finish.

The next scheduled stop at Angmagsalik, Greenland, which was the northern-most point on the entire route, in the shadow of the Arctic Circle, had to be abandoned due to the fact that all the harbor was filled with drift ice and it was impossible for the airplanes to land here. This condition had been provided for as the airplanes were capable of making a nonstop flight to the next scheduled stop; however, an emergency station was established at Fredericksdal, Greenland, and an over water flight, one of the most hazardous of the whole expedition, was made from Reykjavik, Iceland, to Greenland for a distance of over 875 miles. An Italian aviator, Locatelli, who accompanied the Americans in an airplane of his own was forced down on this long flight 125 miles from his goal and after floating for several days in the open sea was finally picked up with his companions by an American destroyer and abandoned his airplane which could not be repaired.

Route of Eric, the Red.

Greenland is an immense unknown continent in the Arctic Ocean. So far as is known it is the coldest inhabitated place. The route of the world flyers from Iceland to Greenland across the Greenland Sea followed approximately the same trail that Eric the Red and his followers blazed 10 centuries ago when they linked the old world with the new in small open boats driven here and there at the mercy of the winds, requiring months for a single voyage—a striking contrast with the few hours' flight over the same sea by the army flyers, representing a thousand years of progress.

By a strange coincidence, Lieut. Erik Nelson, the Engineer officer of the world flight, trailed his Viking ancestors over this portion of the route.

The Americans skirted the coast of Greenland rather than attempt to fly across the hundreds of miles of great ice fields. As a precaution in case they became lost in this part of the world, the flyers carried a list of every Eskimo village or settlement on the east coast of Greenland. The whole interior of Greenland is a high plateau of ice formed by compressed snow, hundreds of feet thick, with not a living thing on it the largest single body of ice in the world. Destroyers of the United States Atlantic fleet formed a radio chain over this hazardous section and down the cost of North America as far as Boston.

Ivigtut is at the foot of the mighty snow capped Kungnat mountain, one of the highest peaks in Greenland. The landing there was in a sheltered harbor near the docks of the largest Kryolite mine in the world, which operates only a few months in the year during the summer. The rest of the time it is buried in ice and snow. By works this mine engines were using the hoist and docking facilities of the Danish company which changed at this point and the planes made ready for the last long mile.

From Greenland's icy mountains they crossed the Davis Straits to the frigid coast of Labrador, a flight over open water of 572 miles. Down the coast of Labrador they were preceded by a destroyer acting as a floating base for supplies. Landings were made at Hawkes Bay, Newfoundland, and Pictou Harbor, Nova Scotia. From this point a nonstop flight was made to Boston, the point of entry into the United States. There the schedule called for changing from pontoons to wheels for the final dash across the continent.

The aviators were relieved to again be in their own country where they knew that a request for gasoline would net gasoline and not a pot of seal blubber or a string of coral beads.

Have Steered True Course.

Linking Occident and Orient, buffeted by high winds, stung by sleet, blinded by snow storms, deluged in torrential rains, exposed to torrid equatorial heat, lashed by sand storms of the desert and again plunged into the frigidity of the Arctic circle, these intrepid airmen have steered a true course in a tractless waste—one month following caravan routes in the old world, the next trailing the Viking across the Greenland sea.

They have pioneered a route that may some day become an international airway and have demonstrated that aerial communication with all countries of the world is possible in accomplishing the flight from Seattle, Wash., to Tokio in 64 flying hours; to Shanghai, China, in 90 flying hours, and to Calcutta, India, in 150 hours; while London was reached in 230 flying hours.

It is only 72 years ago that Ezra Meeker toiled laboriously across our Western desert in his ox carts, requiring weeks to reach the Western coast; trailing him came the pony express, and later the steam engine, while within the year the dawn to dusk transcontinental flight has been accomplished. Although airplanes are still in the stage of development, they have during this stage accomplished such marvelous feats that the future bids fair to record other accomplishments now impossible to predict.

A harbinger of progress that knows no coast lines or boundaries and can reach unknown and inaccessible regions, where all other transportation is impracticable, the airplane must soon be recognized as an important factor commercially.

AMERICA'S MILLION NARCOTIC ADDICTS NEED MEDICAL HELP

which cannot be too strongly emphasized for being responsible for much of present day conditions in the throttling of medical education of medical work and of medical progress.

Buffoonery in Congress.

"Politics and medicine must either be divorced or else every doctor must pay more attention to politics and promotions in legislative and administrative activities and among his own organization officials.

"You can easily see," Dr. Olph continued, "that all the ballyhoo against heroin, the present straw man the charlatans are pounding, distracts the attention of the people from the real problem in the drug situation—namely, the need of scientific treatment of addicts and of the enlightenment of all physicians on the subject. Just as long as attention can be centered on heroin or any other sham issue, no attention will be paid to the real needs. The heroin ballyhoo today is like the agitation a year ago over the growing of poppy leaves. That was a huge farce that would have been funny if it were not for the tragedy back of it—the suffering of addicts.

"Representative Stephen G. Porter of Pittsburg, Pa., last year introduced a bill in Congress through which the United States urged the Opium Advisory Committee of the League of Nations to curb the use of narcotic drugs by limiting the production of poppies. As we are not a member of the League of Nations, the recommendation was a mere empty gesture, so far as the league was concerned. Its only practical value was as a smoke screen to hide our own real problems. All this was pointed out to Representative Porter at the sessions of his committee by doctors of high standing, but the bill was reported out just the same. Representative Dr. Lester D. Volk and I were going to expose the folly of the project on the floor of the House, but the bill was carefully kept out of sight until the last minute and then jammed through under suspension of the rules. As I said, only the tragedy underlying all this buffoonery prevents it from being a howling farce.

Medical Care for Addicts.

"There was very little or no trouble with narcotic drugs until the administration of the Harrison law was put into the hands of the prohibition enforcement department. From that moment the prohibition agents began to issue 'regulations' and 'interpretations' of the law that turned it upside down and made honest doctors subject to the whim — or worse—of every jack-in-office.

"The first thing needed now is to restore the addicted people to the care of the doctors from whom they have been driven by the 'regulations' of ignorant officials. Enforce the Harrison law with proper medical and scientific advice. Before the willful misinterpretation and distortion of the Harrison law there was practically no drug smuggling or peddling. Now the whole subject has been swallowed up in a wave of publicity and promotion which is launched for the purpose of helping charlatans by hiding the truth about addiction.

"You would not have room for all the proof in your columns, but I could give it to you, bit by bit, from the record, showing how a layman started his 'sanitarium,' then, by his own published admission, promoted a law to drive doctors away from the addicted sick in the State of New York; then added to his forces in the State and in the nation, and has helped push sensational and useless legislation and propaganda ever since.

Facts Were Presented.

"The real issues and facts as stated in all reliable, scientific and other records was clearly summarized and presented to Congress in the resolutions and speeches of Dr. Lester D. Volk. These received the unanimous indorsement in open convention of the great scientific bodies of this country, including the American Medical Association. They represent, therefore, the clearly expressed consensus of medical opinion. It is in this support of the truth as therein and elsewhere presented that I and the great body of practitioners of this country stand and demand the recognition of those truths by legislators and administrators and the press as the only remedy for the narcotic drug situation and the end to a record of quackery, charlatanism, official corruption and the smuggling and peddling traffic.

"Bureaucratic officialdom, morbid sensationalism, yellow journalism (medical and lay), broadcasting of incompetent reports, statistics and other terrorisms, all have had their day and trial.

"And conditions as were forewarned have developed to their present extent. Nothing has happened which was not specifically predicted as a result of the activities of those who have controlled things for the past four or five years."

GIRL RAISES $2 TO $20 AND IS ARRESTED

U. S. Agents Release Tearful 18-Year-Old Who Promises Not to Transgress Again.

A tearful girl sat in the office of the Secret Service Bureau, in the Federal Building, yesterday, and confessed the failure of her plans to convert $2 bills into $20 bills and pass them at such. Then Operatives Connell and Sundby told how they had been "on" to her almost from the start.

The girl, who is 18 years old, was employed last February as an assistant cashier in a downtown department store. She had her attention called to a picture frame on the wall in the cashier's office. The frame contained a counterfeit $20 bill, raised from a $2 one, and a warning to the assistant cashiers not to accept such counterfeits.

Recently the girl, who is a member of a large family in straightened circumstances, felt the need of more money and the picture of the counterfeit again came to mind. She studied it carefully and began her own counterfeiting operations.

She tore a corner containing the numerals "20" from each of the eight $20 bills and pasted the corners onto a $2 Federal Reserve note. Then she bought a bathing cap at a North St. Louis drug store, tendering the spurious $20 bill, and went away with the cap and $19.50 in change. The druggist deposited the money with his bank, the bank detected the counterfeit and notified the Secret Service Bureau, and the girl was arrested.

Explaining how futile her operations had been, the operatives told the girl that all banks are required to report the receipt of mutilated currency. Consequently, when the girl began tearing corners from $20 bills, the operatives were notified by banks which received the bills and she was watched from the third bill on.

The amateur counterfeiter was permitted to continue until she "passed" her first altered bill. When arrested she gave up six other corners which were to have been used for a second counterfeit.

Because of her age and inexperience and her family's need of her earnings, and on her promise not to tear any more bills and to forget about the framed counterfeit on the wall, the girl was released and will not be prosecuted.

BRIGHT COLORS THE VOGUE

Hats at London Shows Are Trimmed With Snake Skins.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Brighter colors are the nominant note in women's dress, as disclosed in the season's fashion shows. Both day and evening gowns and coats appear to be cut on long straight lines, giving a tubular effect, while here and there may be seen a suspicion of the new flute.

The fashion experts have been busy devising novel uses for the skins of wild beasts. Velvet hats are seen all bound around with lizard and snake skins. Sometimes velvet bows are edged with the epidermis of funny little crawling things.

THREE ARE CHARGED WITH $2389 HOLDUP

Shaves Fail to Disguise Two of Three Alleged Robbers of Bank Employes.

"Look out for two men with heavy black beards," was the order sent to policemen following the holdup Aug. 22 of employes of the Industrial Savings Trust Co., 714 Chestnut street, in which $2389 was obtained by three robbers.

Two officers at Seventh and Olive streets Thursday saw three suspicious looking men ride past in a Packard touring car. They halted the machine and arrested the men. At headquarters Friday detectives noticed that two of the men were bearded heavily, though shaven, and sent for Wallace F. Baker, 749 Leland avenue, University City, and Charles Klein, 18 years old, 4006A South Grand boulevard, the employes who had been held up.

Baker, manager of the company's automobile department, and Klein, a clerk, identified the trio as the robbers and other witnesses said they, too, remembered the "two with the black beards."

The men gave their names as Edward Taylor, 21, of 1322 North Twelfth street; John Fields, 21, of the same address, and David Klegan, 20, of 4340 De Tonty street. They were held yesterday on warrants charging highway robbery. The prisoners deny connection with the holdup.

The holdup occurred at the mouth of an alley on the south side of Chestnut street between Sixth and Seventh streets at 9:20 a. m. Baker and Klein were returning to the trust company from the National Bank of Commerce.

UPKEEP OF WILHELM'S CASTLE

French Notify Strasbourg It Is to Maintain Edifice.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 6.—The French Government has refused to supply funds for the upkeep of the castle of former Emperor William near Schlettstadt in Alsace. This landmark was presented to Emperor William in 1899 by the citizens of Schlettstadt and he restored it at his own expense.

The French Government has advised the municipal authorities at Strasbourg that they will be held responsible for maintenance of the castle as "an eternal memorial to the liberation of the country from German rule."

RUINED VILLAGE FOUND

It Was Abandoned by Inhabitants Four Centuries Ago.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 6.—The village of Weinfeld, near Coblenz, has been rediscovered after having lain in ruins for more than four centuries. In the sixteenth century the village was swept by a pestilence which killed half its inhabitants and this was followed by a disastrous fire. Rumors became current that everyone in the village would die and the inhabitants fled.

I Found the Way to Health in a Country Drug Store

Story of a Rich City Banker's Wife Who Had Been Ailing, Complaining and Doctoring for Years

"A Druggist in a Little Country Town Taught Me the Secret of Health and Strength"

"For years neither my husband nor I got any enjoyment out of life because of my ill health. I was always ailing, nervous, weak and run-down; never actually bed-ridden but life seemed just one ailment after another. Headaches one day, stomach upset the next, dizzy spells, pains in the back, colds and neuralgia. One day I would think I had heart trouble because of pains around the heart, another time I would have all the symptoms of kidney trouble with a dull aching back. My lips and cheeks were pale and sallow and I looked years older than my right age.

"One day in a little village drug store, the druggist, a kindly old man, said to me, 'You surely look all run-down and anaemic. Until you get your veins full of rich, red blood and the color back in your lips and cheeks, you'll always be doctoring for one pain and ache after another. Your blood is thin, pale and watery for lack of iron and when your blood lacks iron your food simply passes thru you without doing you any good. All your vital organs are starved for nourishment and you get these symptoms of dangerous diseases.

"'You take an old druggist's advice and get some iron into your blood. The best thing is Nuxated Iron, because it contains iron like the iron in fresh vegetables and like the iron in your blood. I have recommended it to hundreds right here in this little village and it often makes an astonishing improvement in even the worst cases.'

"I took the druggist's advice and in two weeks I felt like a different woman. Even in that short time the color of health had come back to my face, I felt and looked years younger, and the old tired-out feeling was gone. That was three years ago and I have never had a sick day since. I am surely grateful to the druggist who showed me the way back to health and strength."

This is one of thousands of typical hypothetical cases which might be written showing the results that have been achieved thru the use of Nuxated Iron which may be obtained from any druggist in this city. Be sure you get genuine Nuxated Iron which is true food iron ready for immediate absorption and assimilation by your blood, and not one of the old forms of metallic iron which many physicians say is not absorbed at all.

And now, due to our value-giving ability, you may obtain these very desirable Tires at savings which make it advisable to secure a supply. Telephone and mail orders will be accepted.

Why Cupples Tires Are "As Tough as a Rhino"

TO LAY CORNERSTONE OF JEWISH HOME

Mayor Will Speak at Ceremonies This Afternoon at New $250,000 Building.

The corner stone of the new $250,000 building of the Jewish Orthodox Old Folks' Home, Blair and Grand avenues, will be laid at 2 o'clock this afternoon. A program, including addresses, the taking of a moving picture of those present, musical selections by the Y. M. H. A. orchestra, and the serving of refreshments, has been prepared.

The home was established 16 years ago, starting with 10 inmates. This is the third addition to the original building, an old mansion. The new building will have a Turkish bath, sleeping porches, self-operating elevators, a synagogue and an auditorium. Overcrowding had made necessary the new building on the enlarged grounds, which now extend to Broadway, covering four city blocks.

The film to be taken at 3 o'clock will be shown each year on Sept. 7 in the auditorium of the home. Among those who will speak are Mayor Kiel, Dr. M. I. De Vorkin, the first president of the home; Custave Cytron, president of the home, and Samuel Epstein of Chicago, grand master of the Progressive Order of the West.

IMPROVEMENT REPORTED IN HEALTH OF BRITISH CHILDREN

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—English children, whose rosy cheeks and flaxen curls have inspired poets and painters, are to be even more beautiful in the future, it is predicted. The importance of this lies in the fact that the beauty of the future will be the beauty of better health.

England's little folks are growing steadily more robust, according to the report of the medical officer for health which says the babies are not only handsomer, but are taller, stronger, more intelligent and better developed in every way.

"Our school children are by actual measurement a half inch taller," says the report. "The next generation will be handsomer in the sense that they will be well-developed, with better teeth and eyesight and more regularity of features.

"The type of man with retreating chin and forehead will disappear. One has only to look at the keen faces of the slum dwellers to be convinced that in many cases they are more intelligent than those born higher up in the social scale."

HEART REVIVED AFTER BEAT STOPS FOR TWO MINUTES

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The Westminster Hospital is able to vouch for an operation by which a man was restored to life after his heart had stopped beating.

Although this is not the first instance of a person being restored to life by massaging the heart, the hospital authorities say that in almost all such cases the subject has died immediately after reusciation, but in the present instance the patient is looking forward to an early discharge as cured.

While he was being given an anesthetic in preparation for an operation the patient's heart unexpectedly stopped. A surgeon after resorting to the usual methods without avail, made an incision, inserted his hand and massaged the heart, with the result that a flicker of returning pulsation was perceived after a lapse of nearly two minutes.

ST. LOUIS UNIVERSITY HIGH SCHOOL OPENING

New $500,000 Institution, Gift of Mrs. Anna Backer, Assured 750 Attendance.

The new $500,000 St. Louis University High School in the George H. Backer Memorial Building, Oakland avenue, just west of Kingshighway, will be opened next Friday morning. While registration day is not until Wednesday, the institution alerady has an assured attendance of 750 boys. Of these, approximately 600 were former students of St. Louis and Lyola academies, while 150 represent new students enrolled in advance of the regular registration day. The total student capacity of the school is 1000.

This school, together with its equipment, was a gift to the University from Mrs. Anna Backer, 3758 Westminster place, in memory of her husband, George H. Backer. The building is designed in Tudor period English Gothic, and has a frontage of 180 feet on both Oakland and Berthold avenues. The length of the building is 484 feet, and the first floor contains a chapel, 70 by 124 feet, a gymnasium 70 by 110 feet, with locker rooms and showers, and a cafeteria, 40 by 120 feet, with seating accommodations for 600 persons. The building contains 29 class rooms, a reference library, and physics, biology and chemical laboratories.

Large Campus.

The school has to the west a campus large enough for three football fields, while against the south boundary wall 10 handball alleys are being constructed. With the tennis courts and golf links in Forest Park, across the street, and the gymnasium, the students will have every popular form of exercise and recreation.

The Rev. William J. Ryan, S. J., principal of the school, said the Notre Dame system of athletics would be introduced under Head Coach Thomas Boland, who will have as assistants eight members of the faculty whose athletic experience qualifies them in various branches of sport. This system groups the players according to weight, and makes the lighter boys participants in sports, according to their class rating, instead of mere spectators. It is expected that this system will result in 14 football teams and 10 basketball quintets at the school.

Faculty Members.

Members of the Society of Jesus on the faculty are: The Rev. William F. Doran, S. J., is the Superior. Other members of the Society of Jesus are the Revs. Father Ryan, Bernard A. Foote, William Frain, Albert Grueter, William Hendrix, Henry Hermans, Lawrence Leahy, James Preuss, William F. Parry and Joseph C. Reno; Messrs. Joseph Luther, James Gallagher, J. Donald Keegan, John Grace, George L. McDonald and Seth S. Walker.

It is announced that the new school will begin its sessions at 9 a. m., instead of at 8:30, as has been the custom for half a century.

VIENNA, Sept. 6.—In spite of unpropitious weather, a crowd estimated at 15,000 swarmed out to the Hohe Warte for the opening performance of the opera "Aida," which was given on an open-air stage under the direction of Pietro Mascagni.

The very fact that the performance was given in the open air seems to have gone to the heads of the Viennese critics, for they have exhausted the dictionary of adjectives in trying to describe a performance which was no better and no worse than many given in the State Opera in the winter.

The Italian soloists—seven in number — sang excellently and bravely through the cold night, while the huge ballet from the State Opera, half naked, made one fear for their health. Best of all were the tiny tots of the ballet, who appeared as black slaves; they thoroughly enjoyed themselves, although the rain threatened to wash their black off. The production of the whole opera was under the supervision of Giuseppe Cecchetti.

In the almost complete absence of police control the huge crowd behaved magnificently, and when it was all over, although it was midnight, applauded Mascagni literally to the skies.

Magnesia Best For Your Indigestion

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestants

Most people who suffer, either occasionally or chronically, from gas, sourness and indigestion, have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestents, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or two tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals, with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of mealtime, because they know this wonderful anti-acid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and without the slightest pain or discomfort. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get pure Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for stomach use.

With the Veiled Prophet's Ball Less Than Month Away, the 'Deb' Is Preparing for Her Presentation to Society, Number of Parties Being Scheduled for Clubs — Prospects Bright for Gay Winter.

THE most interesting topic in society just now is the debutante. Later, and especially in October, the bride will have her share of the spotlight, for there are numerous weddings, many of them of much importance, scheduled for late fall, but now, with the Veiled Prophet ball less than a month away, and the deb preparing to emerge from her chrysalis into a full-grown butterfly, her presentation to the social world is of paramount importance.

Earlier in the summer the prospectus for fall showed a remarkable decrease in the number of debutantes in comparison to that of last year, and while the list is still not half as long, prospects for a gay winter appear bright.

The debutantes for 1924-25, as far as are known follow: Misses Jessie Carr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peyton T. Carr; Marjorie Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alden H. Little; Olive Moffitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel L. Moffitt; Jane Whiteside, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cooper Whiteside; Virginia Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Welch Simmons; Elizabeth Bemis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Bemis; Elizabeth Dyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Dyer; Barbara Bay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mansfield C. Bay; Margaret Eakin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Eakin; Mary Louise Cotter, daughter of William Cotter; Mary Howell Betts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Frederick Betts; Helen Hussey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Hussey; Lillie Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard B. Allen; Jane Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett V. Thompson; Julia Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gwynne Evans; Mary Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alcee Stewart; Dorothy Bolin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Bolin; and Virgina Cornwall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Cornwall.

With many of the young women still at summer resorts, arrangements for many of the formal coming-out balls are still in the making. Three of them at least will be given at the St. Louis Club. Mr. and Mrs. Whiteside plan to present their daughter the night before Thanksgiving at that club; the Bemis ball is tentatively scheduled for Nov. 17, and Miss Bay will make her bow Nov. 14. Miss Cotter writes friends from Europe, where she is spending the summer, that she will make her debut at a series of dinner parties to be given at the St. Louis Country Club by her father and sister, Miss Leota Cotter. As has been announced, Miss Little will be one of the first of the debs to be presented. Her party will be given at the Country Club Nov. 7.

Mrs. Theodore G. Barstow of 5401 Cabanne avenue, has departed for Locust Valley, L. I., for a visit with friends. She will be joined by Mr. Barstow and they will attend the International polo games at Meadowbrook. Before their return they will visit Mrs. Barstow's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Leslie Behr of Lake Forest, Ill., at their summer home in Newport.

Miss Louise Bemis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Judson Bemis of Brentmoor, has returned from her summer trip. She visited her sister, Mrs. Oliver Anderson at Point-aux-Barques, Mich.; Miss Emily Shepley, daughter of Mrs. Arthur B. Shepley, at their summer home at Northeast Harbor, Me., and Miss Judith Dana, at "Danadune," Wianno, Mass. Mrs. Anderson has also returned, as has Mrs. Bemis, who has been in Tennessee.

Miss Marian Franciscus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Franciscus of 10 Lenox place, returned Tuesday from Coronado Beach, Cal., where she spent the summer with Mrs. Joseph Chambers of Ferguson. Mrs. Chambers will remain in the West for a few weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Franciscus are in New York, and are expected home this week.

The St. Louisans at Estes Park, Colo., are gradually wending their way homeward. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver F. Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Wallace, and Paul Bakewell Jr., returned Monday. Other members of the colony included Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Simmons and their daughter, Miss Dorothy, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Wight of 42 Westmoreland place, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wright and Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Walsh, and their families. Mrs. Oliver will be home soon, and the others will remain until the latter part of the month.

Interesting in the social news of the week is the engagement of Miss Frances Stevens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Felps Stevens of 5530 Cabanne avenue, and Robert W. Hoffman, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hoffman of 4011 Greer avenue. The news was told yesterday at a tea given for the prospective bride by her mother. About forty guests called. Pink and white roses and smilax decorated the receiving rooms, and the same color scheme prevailed in the dining room. Miss Stevens' sisters, Mrs. Walter Jackson Taylor and Miss Dorothy Stevens, and Misses Isabel Devoy, Margaret Crucknell and Ann Walsh served. Mr. Hoffman was educated at Washington and Illinois Universities, and is a member of Sigma Chi. The wedding will take place in November.

Miss Dorothy Louise Specht, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Specht of 5963 Cates avenue, has chosen October 6 as the date of her wedding to Hubert King Jackson. The ceremony will be performed at 8 o'clock in the evening at the Pilgrim Congregational Church, by the Rev. Russell H. Stafford. Miss Helen Specht, sister of the bride, will be maid of honor, and Mrs. C. Gordon Fennell, until recently Miss Marie Reid, Mrs. William C. Eliot and Miss Margaret Jackson, bridesmaids. Edward Jackson of New York will be his brother's best man, and George Jackson, Gerald Specht, C. Gordon Fennell, William C. Eliot and M. Lewis Hall, groomsmen.

Mrs. H. Wheeler Bond of 17 Vandeventer place, and her daughters, Miss Mary Scudder and Isabella Bond, who are occupying their cottage at Harbor Point, Mich., plan to return home about Sept. 20. They will make the trip by motor. Miss Mary Scudder Bond has been entertaining Miss Mary Scott, and now has as her guest Miss Elizabeth Grayson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Grayson.

Mrs. Leo De Smet Carton of 5370 Waterman avenue, her young son, Langdon, and her father, Richard W. Shapleigh, will be home the middle of this week from Saunderstown, R. I., where they have a summer home.

Mrs. Oscar H. Vieths of 6432 Cecil avenue, her daughter, Miss Christine, and younger members of the family will remain in the East until the middle of October. They are at present in New York City, and Mr. Vieths will depart in a few days by motor to meet them.

Miss Margaret Caradine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. After Vacation Peel Your Discolored Skin

Women returning from the seaside or country with browned, reddened or freckled skins will be wise in immediately taking up the mercolized wax treatment. Weatherbeaten skin had best come off, for no amount of "beautifying" will ever make it pretty to look at. The surest, safest, easiest way to shed the despoiled cuticle is with the treatment suggested. Put the wax on before retiring, as you would cold cream, and rinse it off next morning with warm water. Minute particles of scarf skin peel off day by day, gradually showing the healthy, youthful skin beneath. One ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is enough to make any discolored or spotted complexion clear, white and satiny soft. Its action is so gentle no harm is caused and the face shows no trace of its use.

It is in recognition of her prevention work for John W. Davis and on the floor of the National Convention as a member of the contact committee that she is being given a prominent part in the campaign.

Extradition for Alleged Robbers Asked.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 6.—The Governor's office today issued a requisition for extradition of A. L. Butler, Otis Hazel and William Rolf, now under arrest at Paducah, Ky., who are wanted in St. Louis on a charge of robbing William Eck of $11.75 and a watch on Aug. 3, last.

MISSOURIANS ACTIVE IN CAPITAL

Several Take Up Campaign War After Return From Summer Resorts.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Among those returning early from Bar Harbor this season were Mrs. John B. Henderson, widow of the late Senator from Missouri, and Miss Beatrice Henderson, her granddaughter. Miss Henderson, who is a sub-debutante, will return to Foxcroft, her school at Warrenton, Va., the first of October. Before going back to school, however, she will give a series of swimming parties for the young members of the diplomatic colony, in the out-of-doors pool at Boundary Castle, which has been a rendezvous for the younger set here this summer.

A Missouri wedding which held interest here this week was that of Miss Margaret H. Shellhorn, daughter of Mrs. Mary E. Shellhorn, to Henry J. Plagens, of Kansas City, Mo., which took place Friday night at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square. A number of entertainments were given for the bride-elect, among them a luncheon and bridge party with 30 guests, two days before the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Plagens left on a wedding trip to Kansas City where they will make their home.

Mrs. William Wolff Smith has left here for Missouri, where she will conduct two political campaign schools this month, one at Kansas City, under the auspices of the Twentieth Century Club, and the other at St. Louis, under the auspices of the Republican Women's Club of St. Louis, of which Mrs. Charles Stix is president.

Dwight W. Davis, Assistant Secretary of War, went north to meet the world flyers on their return to U. S. soil.

Mrs. Edwin S. Puller, formerly of St. Louis, has accepted the post of second vice-president of the new Democratic Club, which opened here yesterday in the mansion of Mrs. Francois Berger Moran, a collateral descendant of George Washington, who turned it over to the club for use in the campaign. On the Executive Committee of the club is Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, also of Missouri. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson has become honorary president of the club.

BURROUGHS SCHOOL GROWING

To Start Second Year Sept. 23 With Enrollment Doubled.

John Burroughs School, private country day school on the Price road, in St. Louis County, will open for its second year on Sept. 23, with an enrollment of approximately double the number of boys and girls who attended last year, it was announced yesterday. The new Industrial Arts Building, constructed during the summer, will be opened at the same time, with classes in shop work and automobile mechanics.

Charles M. Baker, formerly of Harvard Summer School, has been added to the faculty as head of the Latin department. Other members of the faculty, including Director Wilford M. Aiken, will remain the same as last year.

FUND FOR STUDENTS AID TO BE SOLICITED HERE

Association at Washington University Hope to Raise Sum for Help This Year.

A campaign by St. Louis citizens to raise a loan fund to aid worthy students in obtaining higher educational advantages will be launched the latter part of this month and continue through October and November. The fund will be secured and administered by the Washington University Scholarship and Loan Association, which was chartered for that purpose last June.

No definite goal has been set, but it is hoped that ultimately $2,000,000 will be secured.

It is expected the association will be able to raise a sufficient amount as an advance fund to provide for the entry of 20 or more students at the fall term of Washington University, and that others can be aided during the year, following the campaign.

It is known that a number of young men will not be able to enter this fall without help of this nature, due to the fact that they have been unable to find the usual summer employment, and part-time employment during the winter will not be sufficient to keep them in school.

This event has double value; it is a review of authentic styles, of new rich fabrics. It portrays Paris creations, interpreted for the larger American women; it reflects fashion's clever whims in a practical manner.

It also offers price economy. We made prices as low as we could—not as high as we might; manufacturers helped us to bring this sale about—as well as our buyer, who is always alert to the needs of the larger women. They have all been selected with a keen fashion sense for the "Gray Shop." Sizes 38½ to 56½. All new colors.

YEAR'S CAMPAIGN OF TEACHERS FOR MORE PAY IS VAIN

YEARLY SALARIES ARE $6,849,500

New Schools Will Need All the Money Available at Present, Board Members Believe.

The Board of Education at the first meeting of the new school year Tuesday night, will reject the recommendation of Superintendent of Instruction Maddox for a general increase in public high and grade school teachers' salaries, this action having been agreed upon at an executive meeting Friday evening.

Neither Supt. Maddox nor President Rosskopf of the board would discuss the matter yesterday. Supt. Maddox said it was up to Rosskopf and Rosskopf said the salary decision was still an executive secret.

2917 Teachers Affected.

It was learned, however, that had the proposed schedule of raises gone through all the 2917 teachers in the city would have been directly or indirectly affected. Supt. Maddox's idea was to raise the maximums set for the various classifications of teachers. His program called for an increase in the budget of $100,000 the first year; $300,000 the second, and $350,000 the third.

The board balked at the increase on the ground that two new high schools and three new schools for negroes would be all that the money in sight could take care of. There was some talk that the program would raise the school tax rate from 85 cents on the $100 valuation to $1. The salary figures for teachers now amount to $6,849,500 annually.

Vigorous Campaign Waged.

High school and grade teachers have made a vigorous campaign the last year for a 25 per cent increase in their salaries. About 90 per cent of the public school teachers in the city joined in demands on Supt. Maddox and the board for action. Last July it was announced the Instruction Committee of the board had prepared a report on teacher salaries here and in other cities.

Belleville Bricklayers' Strike Ended

The strike of the Belleville bricklayers, which began early last spring when employers refused to grant a demand for an increase of 25 cents per hour, has been settled by an agreement by which 12½ cents per hour increase is granted. The bricklayers will now receive $1.62½ cents per hour. The new wage scale runs to April, 1925. Building activities were handicapped during the strike.

Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Sept. 16 — Ireland's radio broadcasting station is to be opened in Belfast next month by the Duke of Abercorn, Gov. General of Northern Ireland. There are many radio enthusiasts in Ireland, but so far they have had to depend on the British and Continental stations. MAINE GOING TO POLLS TOMORROW; KLAN AN ISSUE

BIG FIGHT IS ON THE GOVERNORSHIP

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 6.—The Maine campaign for the biennial State election, which will be held Monday, has been featured by attempts on the part of the Democratic political managers to stress State questions to the exclusion of national issues, and on the part of the Republicans to do exactly the reverse.

The fight is almost wholly between the two gubernatorial candidates—State Senator Ralph O. Brewster of Portland, the Republican nominee, and William R. Pattangall of Augusta, former State Attorney-General, the Democratic selection.

In the contest for the Republican nomination Brewster had the support of the Ku Klux Klan in Maine. He won over Frank G. Farrington of Augusta, president of the State Senate, by a margin so narrow that the result was not determined until the Governor and Council had reviewed the primary ballots and thrown out several hundred on account of alleged frauds and irregularities, reversing the official result as originally declared.

Reference to the Klan.

Pattangall in his campaign speeches has charged that his opponent is the klan candidate and that the real issue is klan domination of the State. Brewster has made reference to the klan but once, and then to say that he stood squarely on the Republican State platform, which, like the Democartic platform, made no mention of the organization.

Despite Republican effort to eliminate the klan issue from the campaign, it is expected to be a factor in voting, although to what degree only the result will determine. There will be defections from both parties by reason of it, party leaders predict.

In addition to choosing a Governor, the voters will elect a United States Senator, four members of Congress, a State Auditor, a Legislature and county officers. Senator Bert M. Fernald of Poland, whose term expires next March, is a candidate to succeed himself. His Democratic opponent is Fulton J. Redman of Ellsworth, formerly a member of the State Legislature as a Republican.

The Congressional Race.

The present Republican representatives in Congress, Carroll L. Beedy of the First District, Wallace H. White Jr. of the second, John E. Nelson of the Third, and Ira G. Hersey of the Fourth, have been renominated.

The Democratic nominees are William M. Ingraham in the First, Bertrand G. McIntire in the Second, Leon O. Tebbetts in the Third and Clinton C. Stevens in the Fourth.

The second is the closest district in the tSate. A feature new to Maine was injected into the contest in the First District by Ingraham declaring for radical modifications of the Volstead law.

National speakers of note have been sent into the State by the Republican National Committee, while the Democrats have for the most part depended on home talent.

MISSOURI SOCIAL WELFARE CONFERENCE TO MEET HERE

The Missouri Conference for Social Workers will be held here Oct. 12-14. Discussions on such subjects as child welfare, marriage and the family, race relations, rural welfare, delinquency and its prevention, will form the major part of the program. Plans are under way to secure leaders of national prominence in social work to address the meetings.

"The conference," said Dr. George B. Mangold, general secretary, "promises to present the best program that it ever has offered. It is composed of socially-minded citizens throughout the State whose purpose it is to meet annually to discuss different social problems in which the people of Missouri are interested. The program this year will present two main types of lectures and addresses. The one is for the techincal expert who wants to know more about the details and methods of this work; the other, and more important, function will be to present through distinguished speakers the social problems of the day in such a way that the rank and file of our people may have a thorough understanding of their importance. There will be a number of round tables, where a general discussion of topics of interest to St. Louis and the State will take place. These will be open both to the social workers and to the visitors."

Reliable Information Concerning the Ways of the New Autumn Modes
—and Our Preparations to Offer Distinguishing Apparel as Prescribed by the Supreme Dictators of Fashion

The Costume Suit Ensemble
Is Decidedly the Idea of the Moment

These new arrivals for Autumn will be more than welcome to the woman who finds the need of ultra-smart garments. Distinctive in their smart air of completeness, they serve alike for formal and informal daytime wear.

Prices Range From $75 to $165

The demand for Fashion and practicability is easily met when one boasts an ensemble costume.

The demand for ensemble models in our Suit Department is exceeding that of all previous seasons at this early date.

High Spots From Our Collection of Coats
$45 to $295

Many new thoughts are expressed in the styling of Wraps for Fall and later. The outstanding feature is their novel cuffs. Furs are lavishly used, usually choosing the same tone as the material. Straight lines prevail—and skirts are noticeably shorter.

Frocks for Autumn
$35 to $195

Particularly smart and attractive are the models Paris has suggested—extreme straight lines with the tunic overblouse in the foreground. Materials favored are bengaline, satin, Morocco crepe and faille. Color preference leans towards black and darker shades.

Soft Fur Chokers
$25 to $125

In the Inexpensive Dress Shop

—style is by no means outdone, for it is the purpose of this department to offer smart styles at prices enabling women to have several. A visit will delight you.

$16.75 to $25

New Sport Coats

The Severely Tailored Suits of Navy Twill
$25—$35—$55

Everywhere is noticed a movement in favor of long line Tailored Suits — the new Fall styles display coats fully 42 inches long. We must warn you, however, that the Tailored Suit must be fitted perfectly before it is correct.

HUMANE METHODS IN HANDLING PRISONERS

Indications at the recent American Prison Congress, held two weeks ago at Salt Lake City, that prison officials, once considered a hard-fisted lot, are becoming more humane were reviewed yesterday upon her return from the congress by Miss Carol Bates, secretary of the Missouri Welfare League.

Miss Bates was elected to the assistant secretaryship of the association and to membership on two committees, one concerned with research.

Dr. Hastings H. Hart of the Russell Sage Foundation, well known in St. Louis for his suggestions for improvement of St. Louis corrective institutions, made a Sunday evening address on the passage from a letter of St. Paul, "Brethren, even if a man be overtaken in any trespass, ye who are spiritual, restore such a one in a spirit of gentleness; looking to thyself lest thou also be tempted."

Dr. Hart judged from his experience that in the average mind this became, "Gentlemen, if any man be caught in crime, you who are prudent, punish such a one, looking out lest you suffer loss."

He emphasized the idea of "restoring" convicts to useful lives, remarking, "It is no part of our duty to punish."

Fighting the crime wave by "counter-education" was suggested by Dr. Frank Moore, superintendent of a reformatory for young men, at Rahway, N. J., and president-elect of the association. Dr. Moore's point was, "Men are no more born with the Ten Commandments than they are born with the multiplication table."

When the task of "counter education" is left to the prison official, he said, it had to be done by personal and sympathetic contact. To achieve this in the Rahway institution he had organized an "assembly" of 20 Catholic young men, 20 Protestants and a corresponding number of Jews, so that each had in his care 10 of the 420 young men in the institution. These young fellows from the outside gave their charges a weekly lesson in morals. They developed friendships with their charges and helped to find work for them and a place to live without embarassment when discharged from the institution.

The results, Dr. Moore said, were encouraging not only in their effect upon the prisoners, but also on the prison staff. He said that in preliminary tests which were a part of the scheme, he found youths who believed it not wrongful to steal from a dishonest person or a corporation, or to keep excess change.

Both he and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant United States Attorney-General, have accepted invitations of the Missouri Welfare League to speak here.

'THE TIGER' BUSY IN HIS ADOBE HUT WRITING PHILOSOPHY

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—Former Premier Clemenceau remains completely apart from the present political developments, being profoundly engaged in writing a philosophical work, the present nature of which he declines to disclose, even to the intimate friends who occasionally visit him at his home on the Vendee coast.

The aged statesman lives in an adobe building such as is frequently found on the Texas border with Mexicans as inhabitants. It is built in the sands close to the seashore in a desolate country.

"The Tiger" has had a high wire fence erected around this place which suffices to keep out undesired visitors. Fishermen draw their boats up on the shore near by and offer him fine specimens of their catches. These he always accepts with pleasure, but he has refused every other sort of gift, with the exception of one, an automobile of expensive make.

The war-time Premier has refused all suggestions that he write a narrative of the great events through which he passed as head of the French Government.

His papers are described as in complete disorder. He has no secretary, but a chauffeur, a valet and a cook, the last mentioned being regarded as one of the best in France. These three servants are his only attendants.

He has installed a bathroom accessible only from the outside of the house, but as there is no running water it has to be carried in from a well.

Gas on Stomach Makes People Nervous

Mrs. Cook Nervous 12 Years Due to Gas

"For 12 years I suffered from gas on the stomach and was nervous and short of breath. Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) has done me more good than anything." (Signed) Lela Cook.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a complete system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacili in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It cleans out BOTH upper and lower bowel and removes foul matter which poisoned the system for months. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the intestinal canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much MORE foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach or sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long-standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. P. (Name withheld by request).

"Adlerika is the best in my entire 37 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"Cannot describe awful IMPURITIES eliminated from my system (by Adlerika). Feel better than for 20 years." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a big surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, because of its quick, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 7th and Washington, and Enderle Drug Co., and other leading druggists.

CONFESSES HE SET FIRE THAT KILLED CHILDREN

Negro Ex-Convict and Mother of Victims of Garage Blaze Held for Murder.

Mrs. Roxie Perkins, 32 years old, and Amos Lucas, 29, negroes, are under arrest charged with the murder of her two children, Augusta, 5, and Ida, 3, who were burned to death July 13 when fire destroyed the garage at 3035 (rear) Pine boulevard, above which they lived.

The murder warrants are based on a confession by Lucas a two-term ex-convict, in which he asserted that he set fire to waste paper in the garage at the request of Mrs. Perkins, who "wanted to get rid of the children," he said. She denied his story. At the time of the fire, it was reported that she was sleeping in the building and escaped with two younger children.

Lucas also has confessed 10 store burglaries, since he was arrested early Friday at 3201 Lucas avenue where detectives saw him tapping a drug store window with a hammer wrapped in cloth. He admitted that he set fire to the grocery of Philip Fisher, 3501 Chouteau avenue on Aug. 3, when he broke in and found no money. He entered this store again Aug. 8 and committed eight other burglaries in that vicinity, three at one store, he said.

Records show that he was released from the State Penitentiary March 8, after a four-year term for burglary, and previously had served 36 months at Boonville reformatory and three years in prison for grand larceny.

SAYS SHE SAW PRINCE'S GHOST

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Strange manifestations, associated by some with the unseen world, are reported from Hall place, the beautiful old house down in Kent, where tradition says the Black Prince wooed and won the "fair maid of Kent." For centuries stories have been told of the appearance from time to time of the armored ghost of the Black Prince whose visitations say the Kentish people, always are made at times when England is in peril.

Lady Limerick, who lives in the "haunted house," says she has seen the "ghost" three times, twice during the war and again recently. "It has always been the same," she says, "and resembles a youth wearing armor while a light partially shrouds the body. It only stays for a second and then disappears."

WELFARE LEAGUE WANTS PLANKS IN STATE PLATFORMS

Many letters have been mailed to candidates, State committeemen of both parties have been interviewed and representatives of the Missouri Welfare League will go to Jefferson City for platform meetings Tuesday, in an attempt to have both party platforms include the following planks:

"1. We favor the passage of needed legislation for the protection of children; the safeguarding of the family; the care of defectives; the reduction of crime; the advancement of education; the promotion of health, and the appropriation of funds sufficient to make effective the welfare laws already passed and those adopted at the coming session of the Legislature.

"2. We advocate appointments to State penal and eleemosynary boards and to administrative positions in State penal and eleemosynary institutions for ability, suitability and training."

Shrine Potentate Here Sept. 18.

James E. Chandler of Kansas City, Imperial Potentate of the [illegible] in St. Louis Sept. 18 from 7:55 a. m. till noon, on his way to Atlantic City. He will be entertained at breakfast by William J. Kennedy, potentate of Moolah Temple, and associate officials, after which he will visit the Hospital for Crippled Children, at Euclid and Clayton avenues, a Shrine institution.

ARE YOU "WHENPECKED?"

A popular magazine writer says that "Whenpecking" is the most successful system ever devised for keeping husbands from getting lazy.
The operation consists simply of the endless repetition of such queries as: When are you going to cut the grass? When are you going to clean the car? When are you going to mend the furnace? etc., etc.
Borrowing an idea from the practice of successful wives, I am going to ask this question of the public—When are you going to have me test your eyes?
Some of you may answer never, and suffer the inevitable consequences of neglected vision. Others are going to put off doing anything until serious eye trouble ensues; but men and women who appreciate the priceless value of good vision are going to take the best possible care of their eyes and will have periodic vision tests made.
Over 30,000 people during the past 20 years have found better vision, greater comfort, and better health by looking at the world through a pair of Guilbault Glasses. Join this happy multitude tomorrow. The cost is pleasingly moderate.

BUHLER OIL FOR RHEUMATISM
A remarkably new discovery of German Chemistry for the relief of Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia is astonishing the medical world. This marvelous oil seems to kill rheumatic pains just as effectively as these other German pain killers—Novocain for painless dentistry and Aspirin for headache pains.
Rheumatism, in very many cases, is due to internal abscesses, such as a blind pus pocket in a tooth which gives off poisons, and which are carried in the blood to the joints and muscles. This new German oil, when applied to the affected parts, seems to quickly penetrate and be absorbed by the body tissue. Even in the most severe and stubborn cases almost instant relief has been obtained.
Note: The oil referred to above is known in this country as Buhler Oil. At the present time the following druggists report that they have secured a limited quantity of Buhler Oil for distribution in this city. So remarkable have been the results from the use of Buhler Oil that these druggists are giving their customers a written guarantee to refund the price in full to any purchaser of Buhler Oil who fails to get immediate relief.

Warwick, Halperin, at Orpheum.

HEADLINING at the Orpheum are Robert Warwick, dramatic actor, and Nan Halperin, who has just finished a starring engagement in "Little Jessie James." Warwick appears in a playlet called "Bonds That Separate," by Alan Brooke, author of "Dollars and Sense." Miss Halperin portrays a series of song pictures, tracing a girl from childhood to a swagger sub-deb and finally a bride. Also on the bill are Olsen and Johnson, clowns, in song and piano playing; J. Francis Dooley and Corinne Sales, in a new skit called "Cut That Out;" Al Tucker and his orchestra, a novelty act named "Creations," and Barry and Lancaster. Mme. Johanna Gadski, famous Wagnerian soprano, will be featured on next week's Orpheum list.

The six-act bill at the Rialto includes Benny Rubin and May Usher, with a company, in "How It Happened;" the two Ladellas, and "Johnny's New Car." The program changes Thursday. At the Grand Opera House will be seen Walter Davison, Polly Moran, the Homer Girls and Buddy New, Mellen and Renn, Leroy and Lawrence, Bell and Eva, Clifton and Kramer, Francis and Evans, and a trio of roller skaters. The New Gayety's offering is "Step This Way," with I. B. Hamp, Fred Binder, Gertrude Beck, Hazel Alger and others. The Garrick presents "Steppin' Out," with Florence King as prima donna.

Liberty Music Hall, at Grand and Delmar, offers "The Honeymooners" for the coming week. "North of Alaska" will be the screen offering. The Honeymooners" is a musical comedy stock company. What They Are DOING IN Movie Studios

Hollywood's moviedom has a new recreation for busy movie stars. It is night golf, recently introduced by Colleen Moore and Milton Sills, two ardent golfers who, like other popular stars, are too busy during the day at this time when movie production is at its height, to devote any time to their favorite sport. The course is lighted with several arc lamps around each hole, and on the putting green.

Anna Q. Nilsson in "The Fire Patrol"—Kings.

High power electric bulbs take the place of flags on the sticks in the holes. The balls and other paraphernalia are covered with a coat of phosphorus paint.

C. Gardner Sullivan, veteran scenario writer and editor, has entered the production end of the motion picture business. His first picture, "Cheap Kisses," is now in production on the Thomas H. Ince "lot" at Culver City, Cal.

Europe continues to invade American movie ranks, Paulette du Val, a striking French beauty famous on the continent as a dancer; Mario Carillo, born in Naples, Italy; Gibson Gowland, native of England, and Etta Lee of China, all figure prominently in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions now in the making. Miss du Val plays in "He Who Gets Slapped." Carillo is in King Vidor's "One Night in Rome," the Laurette Taylor picture from the J. Hartley Manners play. Etta Lee is also in this picture. Gowland plays in Hugo Ballin's production of Arthur Stringer's "The Prairie Wife."

Lon Chaney plays a new type of role in Andreyev's "He Who Gets Slapped." As the tragic clown in this story, Chaney discards his make-up tricks and physical distortions for straight characterization. He must gain the sympathy of the motion picture audience while playing his role, so that the characters in the story, including a circus audience, must laugh at him. Norma Shearer and John Gilbert are in the cast.

Alan Hale has been added to the cast of "So This Is Marriage," and has a role that is novel in motion pictures. Hale is cast as a villain who, instead of paying any penalty for his philandering, wins the sympathy of the audience at the end of the story by inducing the young married woman whom he has ensnared to give him up for the sake of her husband and child. Eleanor Boardman and Conrad Nagel play the young married couple.

Viola Dana, whose transition from light comedy drama to the heavier medium of serious drama was an episode of recent film moment, has been signed by First National Productions to play the leading feminine role in "Pandora La Croix."

David Torrence, brother of the more famous Ernest, has been given an important character role supporting Corinne Griffith in her latest starring film, "Wilderness." Torrence will have the role of the Governor in the South Sea Island sequence of "Wilderness," the scenes of which also include locales on the Mississippi River and in Canada. Others in the cast include Holmes Herbert, Ian Keith, Maurice Cannon, Anne Schafer, Martha Mattox, Emily Fitzroy and Bruce Covington.

Twenty-three of the motion pictures which will be released by Metro-Goldwyn this year have been finished. Expectation is that the total number for the season will be between 50 and 60. This includes productions made by Cosmopolitan, as well as those made at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios for Louis B. Mayer presentation, and by independent director-producers and stars. At the present time also eight other pictures are under way, and two others soon will be. Five of the finished pictures have recently been released in large cities. They are: Rex Ingram's "The Arab," Marshall Neilan's "Tess of the d'Urbervilles," Reginald Barker's "Broken Barriers," "Bread" and "Revelation."

De Witt Jennings has just completed the part of Stuart, Chief of Detectives, in Frank Lloyd's "The Silent Watcher," featuring Glenn Hunter and Bessie Love. Jennings created the role of Inspector Burke in the original Selwyn stage productions of "Within the Law."

ANOTHER production of "Carmen," with Mme. Geraldine Farrar in the title role, is announced for the evening of Oct. 20, at the Odeon. This adaptation, which the diva terms "an operatic fantasy," is said to depart widely from tradition. Ned Wayburn, for many years associated with the Ziegfeld "Follies," has costumed principals and chorus, trained a ballet and planned the lighting effects. The settings are after designs suggested by Mme. Farrar herself, who took her ideas from famous Spanish paintings.

The former star of the Metropolitan has, with this production, realized an ambition of years to appear at the head of her own opera troupe. She will be supported by a cast of 10 principals, a corps de ballet and an orchestra of 20, under the baton, it is reported, of Carlos Peroni, who has conducted many of the San Carlo performances here.

Civic Music League Plans.

AN organization named Civic Music League has been formed for the purpose of popularizing good music, and will sponsor five concerts at the Odeon during the coming season. According to plans, there will be no ticket sale for the concerts, to which only members of the league will be admitted. The hope is to enroll a large membership at the rate of $1 each for the five concerts.

Mayor Kiel is honorary president, and F. W. A. Vesper is president. Other officers are: Thomas K. Garland, vice-president; Isaac A. Hedges, second vice-president; R. F. McNally, treasurer; and Elizabeth Cueny, secretary-manager. The Executive Board comprises W. Frank Carter, E. M. Grossman, John H. Gundlach, Adolph A. Meyer, C. F. G. Meyer and Aaron Waldheim. The new organization will absorb the Cueny Concert Subscription Series.

"Sideshow of Life", "Secrets", "Fire Patrol" Are Film Features

"Tess of the D'Urbervilles," "Thief of Bagdad," and Return Engagement of "The White Sister" Are Also on Week's Program.

"The Side-Show of Life," featuring Ernest Torrence and Anna Q. Nilsson, is shown at the Missouri Theater this week. This adaptation of William J. Locke's novel, "The Mountebank," tells of the adventures of a queer personality, Andrew Lackaday, known as Petit Patou, a clown in a small traveling circus, whose fun-making antics are brought to a close with the coming of a great war. He enlists as a private, but through merit is promoted to high rank. His valor on the field of battle attracts the attention of a titled English woman who is a nurse on the battlefield. She becomes infatuated with him, but he is unable to return her affection on account of his devotion to a girl in France, whose supposedly unswerving love for him causes him to turn down all offers of wealth and position that a marriage with the aristocratic English woman would afford him. There is a "surprise climax" leading to a happy ending. The supporting cast includes Louise La Grange and Neil Hamilton. A stage feature is Mortenson, who plays two pianos simultaneously.

"Secrets," Normal Talmadge's latest special production from the stage play of the same title, is this week's offering at the Grand Central, Lyric Skydome, West End Lyric and Capitol theaters.

An interesting feature of the picture is that it brings together once more Miss Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien, who first won the name of the screen's "perfect lover" as Norma's leading man.

Starting in England with the first glorious meetings of the young lovers, the story takes them through the years to old age, when the hand of time finds them sweethearts still.

The story, which was published in 1891, was dramatized for the stage, with Mrs. Fiske in the role of "Tess." In the screen version Blanche Sweet has the leading role. Supporting her are Conrad Nagel, Stuart Holmes, George Fawcett, Courtenay Foote and Joseph J. Dowling.

Most of the scenes are laid in the beautiful Wessex farming country, where Tess lives with her father, "Old Darbyfield," the village drunkard. The action starts when he learns that the Darbyfields are really descendants of the ancient family of D'Urberville, and he sends his pretty daughter to win the friendship of Alex. Stone, a hard-drinking and hard-riding squire who has acquired the large estate. On the program also are Fowler and Tamara, dancers; Elsa Stralia, singer, and The Ossmans, banjoists.

The Kings Theater and Garden feature is a screen melodrama, "The Fire Patrol," which is said to abound with thrills and a background of storms and lightning and fires at sea. Among the players are Anna Q. Nilsson, Madge Bellamy, Helen Jerome Eddy, Johnny Harron and Spotiswood Aitken, Charley Murray, Hank Mann, Gale Henry, Heinie Conklin and Bull Montana. The picture tells a story of the fire fighting coast ships.

"Nerves," a War Play, Gives Critic Fidgets

BY HEYWOOD BROUN.
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.

SOME day a playwright may manage to devise a scene concerning young college men and make it credible. I don't think I have ever seen that play. The first act of "Cobra" is a little more nearly right than any of the others shown around here recently, but it is not precisely on the key. John Farrar and Stephen Vincent Benet, who wrote "Nerves," are familiar with life at Yale, but once they bring it into the theater falsity crops out all over. It also seemed to me, Monday night at the Comedy Theater, that the war becomes somewhat distorted in the process of being carried indoors.

It was said when the present season began that they theater was about to catch up with the trend of the novel, and that we should have war plays done in somewhat the spirit of "Plumes" or "Three Soldiers." But "Nerves" holds to an older standard. The mood seems to me to be precisely the same as the various dramatic treatments of the conflict which we had from 1916 to 1918.

Only Second Act Interesting.

THIS fact alone would not make "Nerves" a bad play. After all, you must grant a playwright any point of view or premise which he chooses. The critic is allowed to blaze away at him only after he leaves the ground. Still, according to my emotional standards, "Nerves" is a bad play.

The second act, alone, interested me. I did not feel that it should, for here was something I had seen many times before. The great war was done in convenient miniature. Aerial warfare was pictured as a sort of Yale alumni activity. All the characters, including the heroine, came straight to the front from a delightful house party.

The orders of the high command were filtered through the current state of feeling existing between the hero and the heroine. She was attached to the Y. M. C. A., and naturally was at headquarters of the Tiger Squadron in time to emotionalize the carrying out of each patrol. And just as naturally there was the comic sergeant who could not speak French, and yet attempted to make violent love to the French girl who swept the floors.

Stage View of Yale Fun.

NOW all that is pretty implausible and much fingered material, but this portion of the play went with a great deal of gusto and sufficed to provide entertainment and promote interest. It is the opening act and the muddle-headed attitude toward the main theme which make "Nerves" insignificant.

The house party scene is much too terrible. In this act there is one of those unfortunate attempts to reproduce the hilarity of young men from Yale and young women from God knows where. One hardened playgoer left the middle of these proceedings with the announcement that he felt he must go out and get a pennant. It was not altogether easy for me to remain after the moment in which the former captain of the big Blue team slapped his roommate on the back and called him "You old horse's neck!"

The friendship of the young men was forever being set forth in playful slaps and tuggings and wilted slang. All this is pretty bad. It is not made much better by the fact that there are no less than three prosposals in the first act. It will hardly surprise the experienced theatergoer to learn that each of the young men digs his left toe into the carpet and begins with a remark about the weather. I didn't like it either when the hero and heroine came in with locked arms as he sung a baritone solo.

Acting Better Than Play.

BUT the core of the failure resides in the fundamental fallacy of the play. The story concerns the psychology of the hero. Some say he is a coward. Others say that he has nerves. If there is a distinction it is not made clear. I doubt if there actually is a distinction. Cowardice probably is not a contemptible thing, or, at any rate, it is not among the errors of the conscious mind. Fear is an ailment, precisely as indigestion is—and with just about as much moral responsibility attaching to the possessor. But the authors of "Nerve" refuse to face their problem bluntly and so get nowhere in particular. Their coward is transformed at the proper time into a hero by an act of will power, and I don't believe that, either.

In the last act there is a brief speech in which one of the chief characters speaks ill of the war and jeers at those who considered it a crusade. This seems a little belated and irrelevant, since that portion of the war which is put on the stage is wholly in the heroic and romantic mood.

The play gets better acting than it deserves. It seems to me that Humphrey Bogart gives the most effective performance. He seemed decidedly more real to me than any of the other Yale aviators. Winifred Lenihan does well as the heroine, but it is a pitifully unimportant role after Saint Joan. Edward H. Wever, in a small role, seemed to me very good, indeed, and Paul Kelly has effective scenes, although he works much too hard. Kenneth MacKenna also suffers from trying too desperately to make a feeble play take on the breath of life.

A London Importation.

IN HIS annual tour of the European playshops this summer Lee Shubert came upon one production which caused him to send a cable home. Would or would not the American public take a war play? Before he had time to receive a reply, he contracted to bring over "Havoc," by Harry Wall, with its original Haymarket cast intact. Monday night, at the Maxine Elliott Theater, a large audience saw the American presentation.

Undoubtedly here is a play bringing out the most stirring scenes of emotional conflict within earshot of machine guns yet staged in America. The story of how two British soldiers of the same company faced the fact that they loved the same girl is acted here in a fashion that must dispel all thought of the automatic unavailability of any play based on the World War.

Fine Play, Well Acted.

IN ITS faithfulness to detail in the mechanics of the front line alone "Havoc" will surely thrill. There is no glossing over of what actually took place, and woven into the tragic business of battle there runs a tale of romance tremendously interesting. It is a fine, splendidly acted play, and it ought to be a certain success.

Almost in every position its performance is given full life, and still the work of Leo G. Carroll, as commanding officer, and that of Ralph Forbes as his subordinate, probably will be best remembered. Miss Joyce Barbour as Violet Deering gives both beauty and authority to the part of the girl.

"Pigs" at Little Theater.

AT the Little Theater, also Monday night, John Golden opened his annual campaign for comedy and cleanliness with an American piece called "Pigs," by Anne Morrison and Patterson McNutt.

"Pigs," if we may be allowed a slight loan, is pigs. Two hundred and fifty of them march through the action of the play in a persistent phalanx. As a matter of fact they didn't march at all on the opening night, but through the opening acts were lying in a wagon out in the alley quite prostrate with the heat and not at all interested in the spectators between acts. Still the idea was not a bad one—giving the audience a small side show while the scenes were struck. True, it has been done already with considerable success at the Hippodrome. Also there will be difficulties when, and if, winter comes.

But to get back inside the theater. The most precocious of the Atkins in partnership with the most precocious of the Cushings evolve a huge "deal" whereby they will purchase the 250 pigs, relieve them of a touch of cholera, and sell them at a huge profit. First arises the difficulty of interesting someone with capital. This takes two acts; a scene is dedicated to curing the pigs; and another to witnessing the pig-laden ship come in.

Good Character Studies.

PACKED tightly around this framework are a series of delightfully drawn and expertly played character studies. The scene is a small town. All the way from Maude Granger's querulous grandma to Nydia Westman's pert and restless heroine the players were vividly amusing replicas of county characters.

The lines and situations, keenly concocted by the authors, were furthered by the deft direction of Frank Craven.

"The Chocolate Dandies."

A NEW negro show, "The Chocolate Dandies," was presented Monday night at the Colonial. It would be worth while if it had nothing else in it but the piano playing of Eubie Blake or the cornet jazz of Joe Smith, the wordless singing of Lew Payton, or, say, the toothless smile of some young buck in a red necktie.

But "The Chocolate Dandies" has in it much else. It has the popular Noble Sissle for one, a thrilling young woman named Valada Snow, a comely high-brown chorus, and the snappiest collection of dancing feet on Broadway. The show is as good as its famous predecessors or better.

The humor of the show seemed a bit commonplace, but perhaps it isn't; a first-night audience which sweltered to a late curtain roared and yelled in high glee. Also, the singing was rather loud and inarticulate.

Has All but Humor.

IF the girls make a show a musical comedy, and the book matters not at all, then "Top Hole" is good. This piece—with a book by Eugene Conrad, George Diel and Gladys Unger, and score and lyrics by Jay Garney and Owen Murphy—was offered Monday night at the Fulton.

Twelve hard-working pretty chorus girls, "friends of Peggy and Marcia," manage to dance and sing rather less like the usual thing. Wondrous to tell, the voices are not even the least bit cracked. But enough of dubious praise.

We herald a new song hit, "When You're in Love," the theme song of the show. The rest of the music is snappy, but unobtrusive. Nothing to remember afterward, but a splendid vehicle for some strenuous high-kicking by Nina Penn.

AND now for the book and the cast. We hate to come to it, for harsh words must follow. The authors one week end, we surmise, ran through several four-year-old college magazines, culling the wise cracks about marriage and "picking up the ball before it stops rolling" type of golf jokes. On this basis they elected their hero, a rich man's son with a genius for golf, and wove the plot around his general inability to do anything but get 250 yards distance—no mean achievement.

Ernest Glendinning does what he can with the part, his broad shoulders being very effective in sport clothes. He sang well and danced nimbly. Nina Penn won the audience in the opening chorus with her enthusiasm and smile. The leading feminine role, with Clare Stratton, was sustained, but not exceptional. Charles Brown has the part of a silly-ass Englishman which damns him immediately, and to add to the international character of accents there is Ann Milburn as Maureen, with an Irish brouge that would break the heart of de Valera.

Ganz Sails Saturday.

DIRECTOR GANZ will sail next Saturday for America on the French liner Lafayette, arriving on Sept. 20. After a few days in New York he plans to come to St. Louis for conferences regarding aspects of the season, after which he will return to New York for a brief stay. Orchestral rehearsals will begin on Oct. 27. The orchestra will make eight phonograph records between Nov. 1 and 4.

It is announced that there will be 10 children's concerts this year—five under the direction of the School Board, and five under the supervision of a special committee of the Symphony Society, with Mrs. Charles M. Rice as chairman. The School Board concerts will be played on dates to be announced later, at the Cleveland, Soldan and Central high schools. The other concerts will be given at the Odeon on five Thursday afternoons—Nov. 20, Dec. 11, Jan. 15 and Feb. 5 and 26.

September 9, 1924.

FIVE paintings by Ernest Lawson comprise one of the most interesting group of pictures in St. Louis at present. They are the property of the Newhouse Galleries, newly appointed Midwest distributer's of this great American landscapist's paintings. They embrace the early, middle and later periods of his work. Preceding commentators have pointed out the "American-ness" of Lawson's work, with regard to subject matter. They might have carried it even further, into the characteristically clear-eyed, honest, straightforward manner of discernment and expression.

Two of the five pictures at the Newhouse Gallery are unaffected, spontaneous expressions of delight, inspired by sudden bursts of outdoor beauty, typical of Lawson's early work when his senses were fascinated by individual bits of beauty here and there, fragments of the unified whole which later came to please him in his maturity. One of these, gay in its perception and pronunciation of the brilliance of subject, presents a wholly unexpected compositional arrangement.

Acquaintance with examples of Lawson's early work, and with the word of his authorities, relieves the shock of the peculiar "lay-out." Without warning, the artist was apt to plunge hastily into the swift recording of a portion of a landscape which especially appealed to his fancy. Today these separate bits are constituent parts of his mature compositions.

"In the Valley," one of the five Lawsons, is another compositional and tonal etude. It differs in sentiment from the ecstatic expression just described, being quiet and gray-green, and is premeditated rather than spontaneous. Tone qualities undulate rhythmically, soothingly, and finally form the extremely difficult "V"-shaped sky and diamond-shaped foreground, without imposing unpleasant and incongruous angles upon the spectator.

A third picture, larger in size and later in period, beautifully illustrates the growing tendency of Lawson's inspection of his own reactions to nature's beauty. The title is "A Windy Day," and the color seems whipped upon his canvas by the very air that animates the clouds, the trees and the grasses that he paints. Its sky is similar to that in his "Windy Day," to be included in the Museum's American Show next week, which picture was illustrated in a recent number of the "Studio."

A gift that few humans possess is the ability of honest, unexaggerated introspection. The term, generally a misnomer because of the conceit of the majority of its users, is here employed to designate the viewpoint from which Lawson paints. His pictures bespeak no vanity in the fact that the artist has not been watching Nature, but what Nature does to him. Without the customary slabs of boring analysis, perpetrated by the shallow, self-styled "introspectionist," Lawson transmits to his canvas the varying moods that cross his consciousness as inspired by Nature's changes of light, color, movement, etc.

Lawson's paintings are as indicative of his personal feelings as his facial expressions, the carriage of his shoulders, the tilt of his head, the buoyancy of his step. In the big, magnificent "Road by the Palisades," in Gallery 2 of the City Atr Museum, where the picture is owned, one can fairly see the painter's pleasure in the clear, keen snap of a crisp autumn morning. The clarity of his colors, fitted together like some marvelous mosaic, is like the sparkle of the eye upon receiving a great pleasure. The big gushes of paint are not mere ostentations, but signify the luxury, the extravagance, of nature, and the feeling of plentitude enjoyed by man.

The surface qualities of Lawson's paintings vary. In his earlier works, such as those just described belonging to the Newhouse Gallery, his paint is modeled and moulded and held together on the topmost surface, although the depths vary. Fred Price's levity in the "International Studio," concerning the implements Lawson employs in gaining his present surfaces, is especially enjoyable after a wholesome study of one of his later pictures. The spade and shovel, or even the trowel, saw and hatchet of Price's facetiousness, are entirely forgivable when one sees the miraculous scintillation and vibration that result.

ARTHUR KOCIAN has recently returned from Taos, N. M., where he visited Oscar Berninghaus and made additional friends and acquaintances among the painters of that colony. A bundle of snap-shots, taken aound the studios of the artists, testify to the pleasure of his trip and to the authenticity of the sources of inspiration of that colony—adobe walls, Indian ponies, Mission architecture, sage and cactus, the Indian pueblo and even the red men themselves. So when Ufer paints "My Backyard," and consequently depicts a 50-mile expanse of sky and mountain, he may not be accused of exaggeration. And Berninghaus' well-known horse, tied before an adobe wall, is not just a habit of fancy.

More formal photographs of the various painters in their studios, presented and autographed by the artists, are of special interest to Missourians who are becoming acquainted with the work of these men through their decorations for the State Capitol at Jefferson City. A portion of these photographs will be published shortly.

A SPECIAL exhibition of Chinese album paintings and fan designs is now installed in cases in Gallery 32 of the City Art Museum. Thirteen paintings are shown, most of them having been executed in the Sung Dynasty (960-1279), and the rest belonging to the Yuan Dynasty (1280-1368.)

Chinese paintings, differing from those of any other country, have a unique apeal confined almost solely to that line, color being found profusely in the ceramics and textiles of the country. Chinese writing, the actual chirography, is the first evidence of the native love of line. The characters are not "written" in our sense of the word, but "drawn"—the fragility or the intensity of the line, its grace, plasticity and continuity signifying the thought of its author. Thus, the same character drawn by two individuals might have entirely separate meanings. Chinese painting, another form of expression, is based similarly upon line, with the additional attribute of arrangement, design and composition. Absence of heightened color, or the use of monochrome, serves to magify the value of the black line, and to enhance the subtleties of its shading and gradations into soft grays.

Trophy Cups and Medals Offered for Best Aquatic Specimens.

The third annual fish exhibition by the Aquarium Society of St. Louis will be held at the Missouri Botanical (Shaw's) Garden Sept. 11 to 14, inclusive.

Plans this year are for the award of trophy cups for the largest and best collections of fishes and the most artistically designed aquarium. Silver medals will be awarded for the best groups of peacock fish, shuounkin, swordtails and callico fish. Several out-of-town exhibits have been assured.

The society this year plans to have at least 75 different varieties of tropical fish, and about 10 varieties of goldfish, on exhibition, in addition to snails, newts, aquatic plants and other forms of marine life that flourish in home quariums. The entries will be arranged so as to afford the public opportunity to study the habits of the fish, their nesting methods and care of their young. Members of the society will explain features of the exhibits.

Among interesting species to be seen will be the bubble-nest builders, which deposit their eggs in nests made of bubbles, on the water's surface and the mouth-breeders, which protect their young by carrying them in their mouths for 10 days after the eggs are hatched.

The exhibition will be open from 2 to 7 p. m. Thursday and from 11 a. m. to 7 p. m. the remaining days.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE WEEK AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Any of these books will be sent by parcel post to card-holders, on receipt of postage, in order of application.

CARGO HANDLING AT PORTS, by B. Cunningham.—The subtitle of this work describes it as a survey of the various systems of cargo handling in vogue, with a consideration of their respective merits, and in his preface Dr. Cunningham explains that he has dealt with the subject primarily from the point of view of an engineer. In a space of under 200 pages the book gives a well-balanced and critical treatment of its special subject that is not to be found elsewhere in technical literature.

SOME CONTEMPORARY ARTISTS, by F. Rutter.—Criticism of the work of 14 British artists of the New English Art Club.

HIGHER CRITICISM AND THE NEW THEOLOGY, by R. A. Torrey.—The author is dean of the Los Angeles Bible Institute. Papers included in this compilation are by Dr. R. A. Torrey, M. K. Kyle, archeologist, and president of Xenia Theological Seminary, St. Louis; James M. Gray, dean of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago; W. G. Moorehead, former president of Xenia Theological Seminary; Canon Dyson Hague, Toronto; James Orr, Glasgow, and others. Written from the orthodox viewpoint on fundamental doctrines of the Christian faith.

WIRING FOR LIGHT AND POWER, by T. Croft.—In the fourth edition of this widely used text, which is a complete explanation of the National Electric code, a revision has been made to conform with the 1923 edition of the code. By means of clear cut drawings, descriptions and elaborations the meaning of the code is clearly explained and there is little excuse for improper installations if this text is carefully followed.

PRINCIPLES OF ELECTROPLATING AND ELECTROFORMING, by W. Blum.—This book is one for which the electroplating industries have been waiting. It is the result of the collaboration between a chemist and a practical plater, both of whom are nationally known.

FORMER BEER GARDEN REVIVAL MEETING SITE

Time and prohibition laws have effected singular changes, but never, perhaps, have brought about a more extreme one than that of converting Klausman's Cave, 8600 South Broadway, at one time Carondelet's most popular beer garden and dance resort, into the site of a revival meeting conducted nightly by the Rev. C. W. Davis, a Presbyterian evangelist.

Twenty years ago Klausman's Cave, night after night, provided entertainment, big nickel beers and often much roughhouse. Dishes cooked in German style satisfied the appetite. Picnics of turnvereins, labor organizations and schools were held there throughout the summer. It was the home of the "dollar affair," the price of admission entitling one to all he could drink. A large cave underneath the garden, from which the place derived its name, was used for storage of beer and wines.

Hymns Replace Cup Song.

But where once rang out a popular German cup song:

"Ist das nicht eine Schnitzelbank,
Ja, das ist eine Schnitzelbank . . ."

Now hymns are sung; or children chant in college-yell style a verse which the Rev. Mr. Davis has taught them:

"Say, my chum, have you seen
St. John's Gospel, 3:16;
But first the Thessalonians, 5:22,
Will tell you exactly what to do?"

Behind a signboard, facing on Broadway, the Rev. Mr. Davis leads his meeting nightly, except Sunday, the audience seated on rough, pine boards. Electric lights are strung on wires from tree to tree. An old man, seated on an empty beer case, plays a small organ, the shrill tones of which rise with the voices of the singers and mingle over Broadway with strains of jazz music coming from the dance floor at Mannion's Park, across the street.

Average Attendance Small.

"After the first few nights," said the Rev. Mr. Davis, "the average attendance has been about 50 persons, many of whom are children. I am trying to teach plain, practical Christianity and a commonsense definition of the Bible. I dislike emotionalism in this work."

The evangelist asks for no offering from his hearers and is giving his services voluntarily this summer, while awaiting a call which he hopes to get for a pastorate at De Soto, where he is preaching on Sundays. Mrs. Davis takes charge of the meeting for children on Sunday mornings.

Asked how he happened to locate at Klausman's Cave, the Rev. Mr. Davis replied that at the time he had not known of its past history, but having discovered that there were no Protestant churches south of Loughborough avenue and about 10 blocks west of the river, this locality offered a good field for work.

Minister Lives in Tent.

After a number of years of social and religious work on the Canadian frontier and in remote hilly sections of North Carolina, the Rev. Mr. Davis came to St. Louis last April. He became an ordained minister after having been graduated when 24 years old from Chicago Theological Seminary. He is the father of three boys and five girls, ranging in ages from 10 months to 18 years, the oldest of whom is a nurse. The family is living in a tent at Klausman's Cave, where the meetings are held.

"I hope to be able to start a movement that will establish a church in this locality," the evangelist said. "Mr. C. S. Loftin, the present owner of this place and who was a successful candidate for nomination for Governor in the recent primary election, has offered to give about one-half of the assessed value of a lot on Broadway between Rupprect and Egan avenues if the other half can be raised. The nightly meetings, however, will be continued until the end of September."

METHODS OF WOMEN LENDERS OF LIVERPOOL ARE EXPOSED

Threats of Usurers Said to Have Driven Some Workmen's Wives to Suicide.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Women money lenders who loan shillings to the wives of laborers at a penny weekly for each shilling, which is 433 1-3 per cent interest, are likely to have their excessively profitable financial activities curtailed when Parliament reassembles.

A committee of Liverpool women has exposed the methods of these lenders, who work in the poorest districts supply pittances to workmen's wives during momentary distress and then, by threats, intimidation and even blackmail, forcing their debters to filch from their meager housekeeping funds a penny weekly for each shilling borrowed.

Many homes have been broken up and suicides caused, it is said, by the money lenders' threats to expose their debtors, who will generally do almost anything to keep their husbands from finding out that they have borrowed. Of the 1380 registered money lenders in Liverpool more than 1100 are women.

A law will be passed regulating the money lenders' activities but the social workers do not expect that the evil will be entirely eliminated, for the secrecy with which the petty loans are negotiated is a protection to the lenders.

Additional returns from the carnival recently given at 5793 Westminster place for the benefit of the Post-Dispatch Free Ice Fund amount to $50, making the total sum earned by the affair $250. This is nearly three times the amount earned by any other single benefit affair this season and sets the high mark for the summer. The carnival was sponsored by a girls' organization, the Giheens, which include Misses Ruth Rosenthal, Lucille Lesser, Jane Gogel, Marie Werner, Nadyne Gogel, Blanche Markus, Edith Gogel and Catherine Ebert. Miss Pauline Frank, 5793 Westminster place, and her brother, Chester Frank, managed the affair and aided in the sale of tickets.

Seven children gave an entertainment Thursday night, Aug. 28, at the residence of Ruth Donnell, 55 Joy avenue, Webster Groves, and earned $31 for the Ice Fund. The playlet, "Sleeping Beauty," and vaudeville acts were given by the following children: Ruth Donnell, Ruth Beal, Edmonia Beal, Katherine Drescher, Jane Booth, Frances Beal and John Donnell. The children sold homemade doughnuts and soda following the performance.

One of the most successful shows of the summer was given at 3011 Union boulevard, Aug. 29, under the direction of Virginia Burke, Virginia and Anna Hamm and Olive Mae Burke. It netted $24 for the babies' fund. Harry Hamm and Loretta Burke assisted the workers with the erection of their stage, members of the Union Boulevard Business Association made donations, flowers were provided by the Violet Shoppe, and the Larimore Ice Cream Co. supplied ice cream which the children sold.

A check for $17.25 came from the children of Sarah street, Maplewood, who gave a show and refreshment sale to aid the babies, clearing that sum. Those who took part were: Malba Bohlman, Patricia Cleghorn, Coleta Foan, Harold Bohlman, Theodore Bohlman, Bobby Durney, Kenneth Durney, Joseph Durney, Albert Williams, James Foan, Jimmie Carr, Clarence Crieder, Pat Cleghorn and Billie Ray Stoeppelman.

A show given at 1330 North Euclid earned $11.76. It was in charge of the following workers: Jeannette Cohen, Fannie Gellman, Mary Keefe, Henrietta Cohen, Hilda Trattner, Ruth Trattner, Gertrude Gellman, Leona Handelman, Eleanor and Bernice Benjamin, Frank Gellman, Emmitt Keefe, Clarence Benjamin, Melborne Branden and Ralph Branden.

Violet Brinkop, Catherine Cowbey, May Guidry, Mildred Reis and Marie Cowbey conducted a one-day lemonade stand at 4060 Wyoming street and earned $6.30, which they donated to the Ice Fund.

Three girls managed a lemonade stand in the 5600 block of Waterman avenue recently and added $3.50 to the fund. The girls' names follow: Jeane Kaufman, Jane Tuholske and Anna Mae Aronberg.

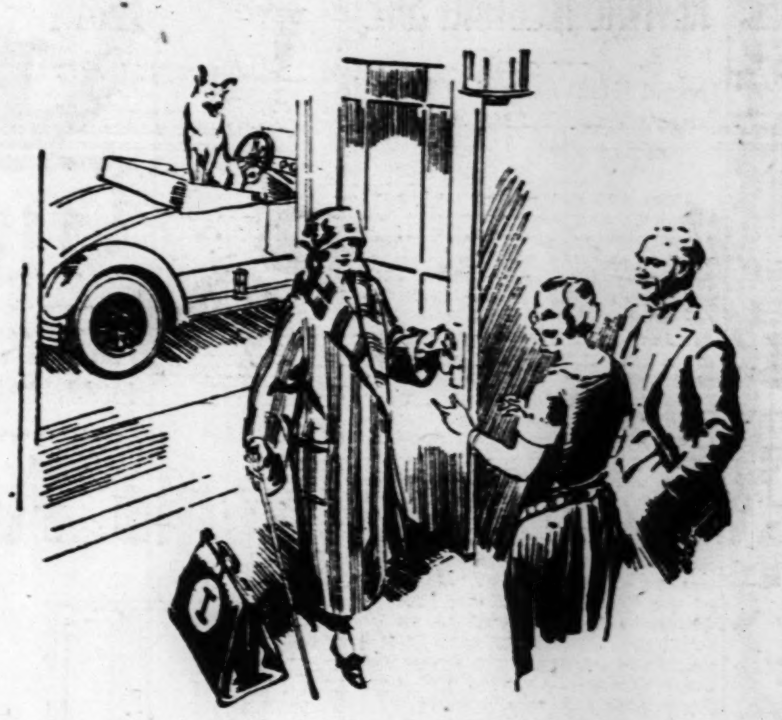
Two dollars and ten cents, the proceeds of a show at 5302 Union boulevard, was sent to the fund by the following: Mary Jane Kirby, the Kirby twins, Lawrence Smith and Dorothy Smith.

Four cash donations were received last week. Wallace Rindskopf Jr. sent $3; $2.80 came with the good wishes of the Ellcee Junior Shop, 404 De Baliviere avenue; Mary Virginia Covington, 1115 Bayard street, treasurer of the King's Daughters' Club, sent $1, and $1 was received "In loving memory of Mr. and Mrs. H. W."



A Car for Every Home

Some authorities declare that the day is now here when every family can own a car—and appearances point that way.

4,000,000 new cars was the output in 1923—made and sold.

That in itself is remarkable. But important also is the fact that it creates the used car market, which, because of its policy and practice of reconditioning and satisfactorily demonstrating, is a great factor in the automobile industry and is creating opportunity to purchase a serviceable car at an extremely moderate price.

A car may be the means by which a man develops his business, or increases his value to the firm which employs him. But it is more. It is a real contribution to the development of the home. Every member of the family enjoys it and gets the benefit of the fresh air, the relaxation, and the educational opportunities it offers.

Measured by the service it renders, a car is an economy.

The initial cost can be whatever a man can afford; but the model he wants, in good repair and capable of almost unlimited service, is available at special prices in the classified "Automobiles" columns of the Post-Dispatch.

The cars here have seen service, but a demonstration will prove their service-giving qualities—and the statement that every family who reads the Post-Dispatch can own a car now.

Make a list of those that interest you, and ask for a try-out.

LOYALTY

Twin to GRATITUDE, one of man's greatest attributes, is LOYALTY.

When either real or imaginary woes beset us, then comes to our aid that most loyal of humans, MOTHER.

When either age, misfortune, possibly want overtakes us, and MOTHER has gone to her last, long sleep, then it is our friends prove they ARE friends by their LOYALTY.

Gratitude Is a Debt; Loyalty Its Payment.

ILLITERACY AS ACCIDENT CAUSE IS BEING STUDIED

Refusal of Licenses to Connecticut Drivers Emphasizes Inquiry as Basis for Report to Hoover.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Additional emphasis is given, by the fact that in the last six months many Connecticut applicants were denied drivers' licenses because they were unable to read, to the inquiry by the Conference on Street and Highway Safety into the extent to which traffic accidents and violations involve illiterates and foreign born because of inability to read warning or direction signs.

The Connecticut Motor Vehicle Commission in six months has refused to grant licenses to 1380 applicants. The examination on which the refusals were predicted included consideration of the applicant's mentality, an actual driving test under observation, condition of the car, how the driver would proceed down hill to prevent skidding, an examination on the motor vehicle law, including technical question on the right of way and passing trolley cars, and so on.

Report to Hoover.

Report on the inquiry being conducted by the Conference on Street and Highway Safety has just been made to Secretary of Commerce Hoover, under whose direction a nation-wide study of traffic accident causes is being carried on. One of the organization co-operating with the conference, the Delaware Safety Council, at Wilmington, has asked the magistrates and clerks of city courts to help get facts about the type of traffic violator who is being brought up for traffic offenses. When enough replies have been received to give a fair representation, an analysis will be attempted to determine whether the information can be used to help the conference develop recommendations for remedial action.

The report which these officials have been asked to fill out indicates the name and address of the violator, business, age, color, sex, education, and whether married or single. If foreign born, it will show the nationality, length of residence in the United States, whether naturalized, whether able to speak, read and write English.

Other reports to the conference have indicated the need for teaching English to the foreign born, to the extent, at least, of reading the words on warning and directional signs, and to comprehend the meaning of such signs.

Connecticut is paying close attention to this need in its Americanization work conducted by the State Department of Education, according to a report by Commissioner of Education Meredith of that State. Not only is emphasis laid on this in night and other special schools, but special efforts are made to reach newcomers to America who are unable to attend Americanization schools regularly, in order that this danger may be averted.

SIX MORE 'SILENT COPS' TO BE ERECTED AT CORNERS IN ST. LOUIS

ST. LOUIS motorists presently will have six more silent traffic policemen to rule their driving—or to contend with—according to the circumstances. One of the "silent cops" will be placed at West Pine boulevard and Taylor avenue, and the others at Maple and Belt avenues, Nebraska avenue and Osage street, Texas avenue and Arsenal street, Maple and Goodfellow avenues, and Seventh boulevard and Sidney street.

SAN FRANCISCO OFFICE FOR VICTORY HIGHWAY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 6. The Victory Highway, which is the one transcontinental route which seeks to direct traffic through St. Louis, has established Western headquarters in San Francisco, in the offices of the National Automobile Clb.

Ben Blow, general manager of the Victory Highway Association, left here for Topeka, Kan., to check road conditions in the Western states. Before leaving, he expressed himself as enthusiastic over the possibilities of co-operation with the National Automobile Club in developing transcontinental travel.

"The co-operation offered to our organization by the National Automobile Club," eclared Blow, "is just what we have been hoping for in San Francisco and supplies our office with a much-needed California terminal through which we can direct California-bound tourists and homeseekers. Everyone in our information bureaus will direct travel to our Western headquarters for information about California; not only road information, but also in relation to agricultural and commercial possibilities."

Coincident with the announcement of the establishment of a Western headquarters for the Victory Highway Association, was the announcement of the offer of a prize of $500 by Harvey M. Toy, chairman of the California State Highway Commission, for the best sketch or model to be submitted by a California sculptor for a supplementary bronze group to mark the terminus of the Victory Highway.

The terminal market for the Victory Highway, which runs between New York and San Francisco, will include a bronze American eagle with a wing spread of 20 to 25 feet and the supplementary bronze group designed by a California sculptor will include a soldier, a sailor and a Red Cross nurse, life-size, in bronze.

Another Auto Speedway.

A $300,000 automobile speedway is planned at Rochester, N. Y. If built, it will be a mile circuit, and 250-mile races will be featured, as at Altoona and Kansas City.

ROAD FROM CAIRO TO POPLAR BLUFF NEARLY FINISHED

Good All-Weather Highway by Sept. 20 Promised—Only a Little Concrete to Be Completed.

The all-weather Poplar Bluff-Cairo-St. Louis-Chicago route and the Poplar Bluff-Cape Girardeau road are now only a matter of days. The highway, in fact, now is open for use, but some construction work still necessitates use of a detour between Poplar Bluff and Dexter.

The concrete road from Poplar Bluff to Fisk, a distance of about 10 miles, has been thrown open to traffic, except for about 2000 feet at the edge of East Poplar Bluff, which is being graveled while other streets care for the traffic. This means doing away with the detour between Fisk and Poplar Bluff. The concrete is still under construction for about three miles eastward from the St. Francis River at Fisk, but its opening for use by Sept. 20 is promised. In the meantime there is a good detour.

An Important Highway.

Completion of the work from Poplar Bluff to Cairo will open one of the important highways of Missouri. It will open a gateway into Southern Missouri and the Ozark region to motorists from Southern Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee. Already it is being used by hundreds of tourists.

There already is a good road from Cape Girardeau to connect with the Poplar Bluff-Cairo highway at Sikeston.

The road from the Bird's Point ferry through Charleston to Sikeston has been good for some time. The route from Cape Girardeau through Sikeston and Dexter to Poplar Bluff was logged carefully recently by Matt F. Morse, general manager, and George Drummond, head of the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Missouri. Of course, opening of the concrete from Poplar Bluff to Fisk makes some of the logging out of date.

Report on Route.

However, here is Drummond's report on the route:

"Leaving Cape Girardeau, we went south on No. 9 over good gravel through Benton and Morley to Sikeston (37 miles from 'The Cape'). At Sikeston we turned right on No. 16, and had good gravel through Morehouse and Dexter to a point 14 miles west of Dexter, where the new concrete begins. We could follow the concrete only half a mile, then had a dirt detour for four miles that is good when dry.

"Then we drove on concrete again for two miles through Fisk to Ash Hill. Half a mile west of Ash Hill and 84 miles from Cape Girardeau, we found a dirt detour virtually into Poplar Bluff. This

WEDNESDAY will see parking barred on parts of three more streets in downtown St. Louis. Car owners who leave their machines on Third street, between Washington avenue and Spruce street, or on Locust or Pine street, between Third and Fourth streets, will be out of luck.

The rule prohibiting parking on these three streets has been adopted by the traffic council.

THIRTY-SIX STATES HAVE GASOLINE TAX

Collection Cost Small and Evasions Too Few to Be Worth Considering.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Thirty-six states have enacted gasoline tax legislation similar to that which will go before the voters of Missouri at the coming election. Michigan and Minnesota will vote on a gasoline tax law in November. The District of Columbia already has such a law.

The Republican State convention of Michigan, with one dissenting vote, inserted a gasoline tax plank in its platform. It is regarded as practically certain that both Michigan and Minnesota will enact this type of legislation.

In all these states but five, the laws provide for collecting the tax from the retailer, similar to the bill passed by the Wisconsin Legislature and vetoed by Gov. Blaine.

The cost of collection throughout the country averages less than 1 per cent because the machinery already is set up for levying and collecting the tax. Indiana in 1923 collected $4,600,000 at a cost of $6400.

On the matter of evasion, every state reports that it is so small that it is not worth considering.

TIRE BURSTING CONTEST FOR FRENCH DRIVERS PLANNED

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—"Owing to the bursting of a tire," is the stock formula with which French reporters explain automobile accidents. Expert motorists maintain that this is hardly ever the cause of a smash except in the cases of neophytes or exceptionally nervous drivers. Accidents, they declare, are due to imprudence rather than to defects in the machines.

To prove this point, the sporting paper, L'Auto, is organizing a tire-bursting test, in which drivers will go at high speed over a rough road littered with glass, their machines equipped with ragged old tires. The purpose is to determine exactly what happens when a tire blows out with a skillful driver at the wheel of the car.

AUTO ENGINEERS SEEKING WAYS TO CUT CAR WEIGHT

By a Special Correspondent.
(Copyright, 1924.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 6. — The changes now taking place in the engineering, factory and mechanical practices of the automobile industry are directed toward achieving a car complete in each detail which shall be more economical to run. Great as are the changes made in automobiles in the last 20 years, responsible engineers connected with the industry do not hesitate to predict greater changes pending.

The fight to cut down weight is still going forward. The Ford Motor Co., which has been using pistons and cast iron weighing four pounds each, is installing in its engines steel pistons weighing only two and a half pounds. Many of the patented alloys of steel and other metals are being subjected to tests. New uses for aluminum and vanadium are being sought in a score of experimental plants.

New Lightweight Car.

It has been a maxim in the automobile industry that making automobiles over a certain weight meant added cost at the rate of $1 for every additional pound put into them. Whether the ratio has changed in recent days or not, weight, or elimination of it, still is a prime consideration.

A car invented in the East, which has a wheel base of only 65 inches and weighs less than 1000 pounds, is receiving a lot of quiet attention from prominent engineers. The engine is placed near the rear axle and some who have viewed it declare it a kind of cross between a motor cycle and a Ford. Others see in it a possible solution of traffic congestion in the cities.

They point out that its short wheel base would add materially to road capacity for vehicles, that it would occupy much less parking space than the ordinary car and hat it could readily be maneuvered in heavy traffic.

Congestion Affects Sales.

Some manufacturers freely admit that the congestion of traffic has had a material effect on their sales of passenger automobiles. Many business men say they have become accustomed to riding on buses instead of driving their own cars from their homes to their offices. Owners who have given up their cars and rely entirely on commercial vehicles are extremely rare, but abandonment of the daily drive to their offices by a large number of owners has had a tendency to prolong the lives of the old cars and postpone purchases of new models longer than in the past.

$24,000,000 DOUBLE-DECK STREET TO BREAK TRAFFIC CONGESTION IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—As a result of work which has just been started the business complexion of a section of one of the greatest business centers of the country will be altered. The success or the failure of this experiment will affect practically every congested city in the United States, altering the trend of traffic, the location of industries and property values.

The experiment involves the double-decking of South Water street in Chicago, for 50 years the terminal and market for all fruit, poultry and dairy products which have come to this city for distribution. The problem to be solved grows out of traffic congestion, due to speeding up of business through use of motor vehicles. That same problem exists in practically every business center today.

$24,000,000 to Be Spent.

South Water street, one of the most colorful and antiquated marts of the country, has been on its last legs for years. The problem has been to make it grow new legs. Engineers hope that this problem will be solved by an innovation—the first double-decked boulevard ever laid out in America—the cost of which will be approximately $24,000,000.

About Oct. 1, workers will commence to wreck the first section of this market district which has become almost impassable as a thoroughfare and in which hundreds of dealers do about $500,000,000 worth of business annually. Out of the wreckage will emerge a boulevard built on a new principle to meet modern traffic problems. Its top deck will be a broad highway for fast, light passenger automobiles and foot passengers. Its lower deck will consist of three roadways for trucks and horse-drawn vehicular traffic.

Expect to Raze Whole Section.

On the upper deck, thousands of cars, now practically blocked by piled produce and chaotic truck and wagon traffic, will have a highway 80 feet wide giving easy access to the southwest side of the city. Below, beside the three roadways, will be eight-foot loading platforms abutting the traffic coming in from Lake Michigan. This thoroughfare will extend for more than a mile from Michigan avenue, the city's main north-and-south traffic artery, to Market street. Government investigators expect that the change will save $5,000,000 annually by eliminating congestion.

The entire district, now dilapidated and composed largely of fire traps, it is expected, will be razed and replaced by a modern business section. The new roadway will have its upper deck on the same level as Michigan avenue, while the lower deck will consist of a vehicular subway below street level. In other words, Water street will grow its new legs downward instead of adopting stilts. Ramps will connect the lower and upper decks and three large ventilating plants will clear the lower levels of dangerous gases.

Funds for Work Available.

Funds to complete the project were voted last June. About $10,000,000 will be spent at once by the city and the remainder of the needed funds will be supplied by assessments on property owners along the street. Court proceedings for condemnation of the buildings and property involved have virtually been completed.

Heavy losses have resulted from congestion in the business districts of great cities and even of the smaller centers of trade. Efforts to relieve this have been devoted largely to development of boulevard systems, but while this method has taken care of light automobile traffic to some extent the heavy truck traffic has been neglected.

The new vehicular tunnel under the Hudson River at New York, developments in Pittsburg involving a street car subway, and the start of work on a Philadelphia subway are counted on to aid traffic to some extent in those cities. But the Water street development in Chicago is being watched even more closely in view of the direct effect it is expected to have on business and industry.

With the building of the new boulevard, Chicago produce dealers will have to seek new quarters. They plan a new market center nearer to adequate railroad facilities and the development of this center will have a direct bearing on the entire trend of business as well as on property values. Anticipation of similar changes in their own localities has caused engineers, property owners, business men and municipal authorities to watch this development with the keenest attention.

MANY MOTORISTS VIOLATE LAW WITH HEADLIGHT BULBS

Most Cars Limited to Use of 21 - Candle Power Lights—Colored Running Board Lights Illegal.

Many St. Louis motorists are heaping up future trouble for themselves by using illegal bulbs in their headlights and colored running board lights, Joseph Burns, city headlight inspector, warns.

"The State motor vehicle law," says Burns, "permits use of bulbs of 32 and 36 candle power behind only two makes of lenses. Possibly one car in 500 has either of these two lenses. Virtually all other cars are in Class C, having lenses behind which bulbs of only 21 candle-power are legal.

"Some motorists are removing the original 21-candle-power bulbs and replacing them with 32-candle-power lights, and a number of them are doing this after their headlights have been tested and sealed with the inspector's seal. This little trick is likely to earn them fines as high as $100 and costs.

"The law also states specifically that 'no searchlight or spotlight shall be equipped with a bulb stronger than 21-candle-power.

"Colored lights on the running board are plainly illegal. As to this the law says: 'No vehicle shall display or project to the front or sides any other than white light, or such shades as are commonly known and recognized as white, and no vehicle shall display at the back, or project toward the rear, any other than a red light.' * * *"

Burns tests headlights in the basement of City Hall, on the driveway from Clark avenue, between Twelfth and Mourteenth streets.

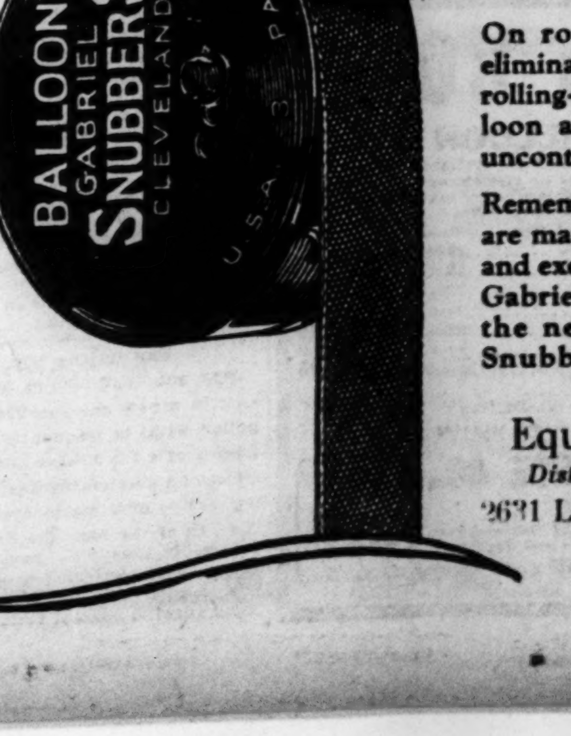
Gabriel Snubbers
Assure Free Spring Play Essential with Balloon Tires



These new Gabriel Snubbers provide a degree, a flexibility and a certainty of control surpassing anything which even Gabriel has done.

These new Gabriels do not compress or bind the car springs. Regardless of the load in the car, they allow the tires full and unrestricted play to absorb the small irregularities on apparently smooth roads.

On rough roads, they entirely eliminate all galloping, pitching or rolling—so disagreeable when balloon and low-pressure tires are uncontrolled.

Remember this—that these results are made possible only by the new and exclusive features developed by Gabriel, and used exclusively in the new Gabriel Balloon-Type Snubbers.

OZARK TRAIL TO ALBUQUERQUE IS REPORTED GOOD

Judge Sam Hodgdon of Clayton, Henry Schulz of Webster Groves, Lewis Wallwebber of Kirkwood and Sam Hodgdon Jr. have just returned from a motor trip over the Ozark Trail from St. Louis to Duncan, Ok., where the annual convention of the Ozark Trail Association was held and Judge Hodgdon was elected its president and Schulz vice president for Missouri.

At the convention it was decided that the Ozark Trail should be extended from ocean to ocean, and that the officers should publish a folder describing the trail and its attractions and containing complete maps on each state traversed.

Judge Hodgdon reports that the trail is in good, travelable condition all the way from St. Louis to its present western terminus at Albuquerpe, N. M., where it runs into the Santa Fe Trail. "In fact," he said, "I found it so good that I would not hesitate to recommend it to anyone."

Route of Ozark Trail.

The Ozark Trail leaves St. Louis over Manchester road, then swings into Big Bend road and Lockwood avenue through Maplewood, Webster Groves and Glendale to Kirkwood, where it follows the Sugar Creek road to Valley Park and then the Antire road to Pacific, continuing to Catawissa and at Robertsville picking up State highway No. 12 through St. Clair, Bourbon and Cuba to Rolla. At present the Sugar Creek road section is not being traveled, the Daugherty Ferry road being used instead from Kirkwood to Valley Park. From Rolla the trail swings south on No. 7 through Licking and Houston to Cabool, then west again on No. 16 through Seymour to Springfield and thence through Sarcoxie and Mount Vernon to Joplin and south on No. 1 to Neosho, or via Republic and Monett over No. 16 to Neosho. As has been told in the Automobile Section, this route from St. Louis to Neosho is in good condition though hardly, to be attempted in wet weather.

"The trail is two-way from Neosho," said Judge Hodgdon. "We went via Seneca, Mo., and Miami, Vinita, Tulsa, Chandler, Oklahoma City and Chickasha to Duncan, where we held the convention. From Duncan, the trail goes west to Lawton, Ok., then to Amarillo, Tex.; Clovis, N. M., and Roswell to Albuquerque.

Reports Roads Good.

"We found concrete and gravel virtually all the way from Neosho to Oklahoma City. Then to Duncan we had 30 per cent concrete, about 20 per cent gravel and the rest dirt road, in good condition, except about 20 miles in Grady County, Ok. Delegates from Texas and New Mexico reported that the trail was good from Duncan to Albuquerque, much of it being a sandy clay that needs only grading and smoothing to be fine.

"We returned on another branch of the Ozark trail—through Sulphur, Okmulgee, Shawness, Muskogee and Talequah, Ok.; Rogers, Ark.; Seligman, Mo.; Aurora and Republic to Springfield. This was mostly good gravel, with considerable concrete, with only five miles of bad road, in Grady County, Ok. Good evidence of the condition of the roads is the fact that I drove 1450 miles on the trip and it cost me only $3.50 to put my car in perfect shape again. Much of the construction and relocation work along the trail is a credit to the engineers in Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

"The Ozark Trail has many attractions. Among them is the Government reservation of 880 acres at Sulphur, Ok., where there are all kinds of sulphur waters, baths and springs. There there is the 1000-acre Medicine Park Government reservation and the game preserve near Tulia, Tex. A side trip from Roswell, N. M., takes me to Carlsbad Cave, one of the largest, if not the largest, cave in the world. Also easily accessible from Roswell is the wonderful Lincoln Park, in the Davis Mountain and Big Bend country of Texas, which is said to rival even Glacier Park for scenery."

Judge Hodgdon said that the Ozark Trail Association has grown until it now has 15,000 members. It was founded 23 years ago by Col. W. W. Harvey of Monte Ne, Ark.

Hodgdon and his companions took advantage of the opportunity to advocate a favorable vote on the proposition for a gasoline tax to insure maintenance of Missouri's State highways, holding meetings at Houston and Neosho.

First Stock Car Built in U. S. With Supercharger

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 6.—The first stock automobile with a supercharger built for the market in this country is the Balboa, a "straight eight" which is being exhibited in this city. The supercharger, which was a feature of the car which won the last Indianapolis 500-mile race, is supposed to increase an engine's power as much as 30 per cent.

Several noted automotive engineers have expressed the opinion that it is only a question of time when a number of stock cars will have superchargers as standard engine equipment, thus greatly facilitating the development of really small bore, economical motors.

Small but Powerful Engine.

This new car is guaranteed to do 25 to 30 miles to the gallon of gasoline, yet to develop 112 horse power. The engine is the smallest "straight eight" made in this country for other than racing purposes. The bore is only 2¾ inches and the stroke only 3¾ inches. The piston displacement is 183 cubic inches, about that of a Ford. The cam shaft is of the overhead type.

The engine of this car is thus described by W. H. Radford, chief engineer of the company introducing it:

"The older types of automobile engines have a maximum speed of from 1000 to 1250 RPM; modern engines from 1800 to 3000 RPM; racing cars 4000 to 5000 RPM.

"For years automotive engineers in the United States and abroad, have realized that with the increase in the speed of engines, the problem of getting a full charge of gasoline and air into the cylinders, was the limitation to the power which should be developed from a small-bore, small-stroke economical engine.

"With the downward, or suction, stroke of the piston in the Balboa car's engine the mixture is drawn through the intake valve in precisely the same manner as in any other engine, the supercharging feature being incorporated in the following manner:

By the addition of auxiliary valves, pure air at atmospheric pressure is admitted under the piston. On its downward stroke this air is compressed under the piston in a special pocket in the crankcase, to a pressure of about twenty-eight pounds.

Just before the piston begins its upward, or compression stroke, the auxiliary valve rotates, and permits the air to by-pass on top of the piston, with the result that when the piston begins its upward, or compression, stroke it starts up with about fifteen pounds pressure, instead of a three-pound vacuum, as in the ordinary motor.

On the upward stroke of the piston, air is again admitted underneath the piston and when the piston comes down on its explosion stroke, this air is again compressed underneath the piston with the result that the downward thrust and weight of the reciprocating parts is buffeted by an elastic air cushion in precisely the same manner as the air check on a door."

detour went through swampy country, often was too narrow for passing another car, and would be impassable when wet. When dry it was not bad. (As told above, the concrete is now open to traffic along the stretch where this detour was necessary.)

Other Poplar Bluff Roads.

Four miles of gravel road from Highway No. 23, six miles south of Poplar Bluff, to the Ripley County line, are under construction. The road is an all-weather highway. Another stretch of four miles in Ripley County will be completed soon, furnishing the connecting link in the Cairo-Spjringfield (Mo.) highway, which is good as it now stands at all times of the year.

State Highway No. 23 is completed from Poplar Bluff to the Arkansas State line, 18 miles south. From the Arkansas line through Corning and Knobel, to Newport the road is good in dry weather, but virtually impassable in the wet winter months. Little is being done on the roads in Northern Arkansas.

The Poplar Bluff-Jefferson City highway, running northwest from Poplar Bluff, is completed for six miles out of this city, but will not be ready for use before early spring. This road in Carter County is under construction.

The route from Poplar Bluff through Doniphan, Alton and through to Springfield is by far the most desirable road through the Southern Missouri Ozarks.

The Poplar Bluff-St. Louis highway, No. 23, is under construction in Wayne County, but the detour is a good all-weather road. The four miles not under construction may not be completed before early spring unless weather conditions are unusually favorable in the next three or four months.

Car Buying Tip.

Pep, snap and pickup, as discovered in a new car you are not familiar with, is frequently but a matter of a too limber accelerator. Unless an accelerator has a checking device or a stationary rest for the ball of the foot, the driver will invariably give the engine more gas than it needs. You could get the same results by operating the hand throttle control recklessly.

FIVE TAXES ON MOTORING ARE IMPOSED IN ARKANSAS

TAXING of motorists, according to the American Automobile Association, has reached the peak in Arkansas, where they must pay five kinds of local taxes to operate cars. In addition to a personal property tax, the Arkansas car owner must pay a tax of 4 cents a gallon of gasoline, 12½ cents the horsepower on his engine, 55 cents the 100 pounds weight of his car and a tax of 10 cents a gallon on oil.

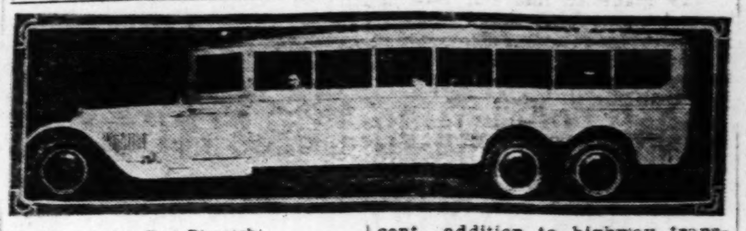
A new six-cylinder car, the Standish, is being made at Framingham, Mass. It is in the $2000 class.

Six-Wheeled Motor Coach Backed by Charles M. Schwab



Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6.—A six-wheel motor coach of revolutionary design, with power applied to four rear wheels which are assembled as a unit, is the most recent addition to highway transportation facilities.

The new coach is the result of five years of experimental work, and in a number of respects is a distinct departure from all previous types of motor buses and trucks. Reduction of road impact to one-fourth that of solid tired, four-wheel vehicles of the same capacity, a degree of comfort and safety heretofore impossible in motor buses, greater speed and longer life, are among the advantages claimed. In tests made by the United States Bureau of Roads, it was shown that the six-wheel truck, carrying a load of nearly nine tons, hit the road a blow of only 7000 pounds after passing over an obstruction, while a four-wheel solid tired vehicle carrying a load of only five tons hit the road with a force of 29,000 pounds.

Pneumatic tires 32 by 6 inches in size are used on all six wheels, and the height of the floor is only 21 inches from the ground.

In a test, one of the six-wheel, five-ton trucks, loaded to capacity, crossed the continent from Los Angeles to New York in six days and 15 hours running other motor truck of any has even approached this

Registration Records Show Moon Dominance in Motor-Wise Markets

Moon reached ninth in the retail sales of motor cars in St. Louis during the month of June. All of the other companies that led Moon had cars to sell at less than Moon's prices... The following tabulation is from the registration—as compiled by the Missouri Motor List Co., Jefferson City, Mo.

MOON	47	Packard	12	Auburn	3
Jewett	42	Cadillac	8	Durant	3

CHICAGO—In this great motor-wise market Moon is not only in a leading sales position but according to the Chicago Tribune recent advertisement, Moon made an increase of 187% over the previous year, which was also a banner year for Moon. The Moon increase was greater than any other company, excepting one which had cars to sell at a lower price.

CALIFORNIA—In this great automobile state in the first six months of 1924 according to "Motor Registration News" Moon made 114% increase over the same period in 1923. Only one other automobile led the Moon increase, and this car is priced very much lower than the Moon.

MINNEAPOLIS—According to the Minnesota Motor List Company registration reports on Hennepin County [which includes Minneapolis] during the month of June only nine companies registered more cars than Moon, and every one of these companies had cars to sell at less than the list price of the Moon.

Moon Factory Sales have multiplied 14 times in four years, and Moon has passed 25 prominent motor car manufacturers in volume of sales during this time.

General Popular Approval of Moon Motor Cars is a direct result of the sound Moon factory policy and the true value of its product.

John Smith and His Car

by FREDERICK RUSSELL

SO THIS IS AMERICA!

AFTER covering the first 75 miles of our trip Smith decided that it would be a good idea to stop awhile. In addition, he proceeded to kill two birds with one stone by buying some gas and a quart of oil.

"A fine place to rest!" I complained. "A garage for scenery, fumes of gasoline for ozone, the roaring of a motor-truck engine for the music of nature! We should have rested back in that beautiful historic village we just raced through."

"Those places don't interest me," Smith confessed. "I want action."

"Then you have been missing a lot of what you like," I replied. "One town we passed through manufactures more paper than any other place in the country. Another boasts of the greatest cement factory in the world. I think you could save a lot of hotel bills by these. One can learn a lot from seeing the towns at close range."

Read the Sign Posts.

"That's all right for sightseers," Smith said. "Touring is different."

"When you have finished this trip you will be convinced that the real pleasure and experience in touring is sightseeing. If your idea is merely to burn the road you could save a lot of hotel bills by traveling 1000 miles on a speedway."

By this time Smith had finished buying his supplies and was ready to proceed again.

"Wait a minute," I said. "When you decided to stop here you picked out about as uninteresting a place as any, but have you noticed the sign posts at the cross road over there?"

"Aren't we on the right road?"

"Of course, we are," I replied. "But when I travel I always read all the sign posts just to see where the other roads lead to. It gives me a better idea of the layout of the country, all of which may be a big help to me some day if I happen to lose my way. The sign over there points the way to All Inn, one of the greatest resorts in this part of the country. Ever been there?"

"No."

"Well, now you can say you've been near it."

Whereupon Smith complained that I was harping on nature. He said that being born and bred in the country, he wouldn't walk around the corner to see a prize Guernsey cow, much less take his eyes off the roadway to watch a tractor at work in the fields. If he was going to develop his power of observation he wanted to practice on practical things. I therefore made the bargain with him that every time I saw anything worth looking at I would stop, and if he didn't agree that it was worth stopping for I would buy him a gallon of gas.

About two miles further on I stopped and pointed to a quarry.

"That's where we get our best granite," I said. "You have probably seen many larger quarries, but you have never before seen one where they find such fine quality. Did you ever notice how they cut it?"

Interesting After All.

Smith watched the men working and then as he cranked up his motor again replied: "The next time you buy gas remember that I owe you a gallon!"

About a mile beyond this we turned into the main street of a small but rather attractive town. I drove slowly in order to give Smith a chance to look about. When we reached the highway again I asked him what he had seen of interest.

"Nothing," was his reply. "A historic church, a new movie house, a couple of 'chickens' and a peach of a good looking car standing in front of a garage. But nothing of importance."

"If you had been wearing your observation glasses," I argued, "you would have noticed the large number of cars standing in front of the bank. If you had observed the people around them you would have realized that those cars belong to farmers. You have perhaps heard a lot about motorizing the farmer, but there were the facts back in that town if you had wanted to see them. One of the stores had a clever window display. The street lamps had flowers on them. I saw some very oddly dressed people, too. They probably belong to some religious cult."

Smith looked at me inquiringly.

"Are you by any chance inferring that I owe you another gallon of gas?" he asked, at length.

"I think you're going to buy my gas for the whole trip," I laughed.

"If you keep on showing me interesting things I'll not begrudge it," he confessed. "Why, man, this is America! I never thought of it before. I am seeing the country, meeting its people and learning its ways."

Next Week—THE FIRST DETOUR

sponsibility of the violator, the question will show whether he owns real estate or other property or has a bank account, and whether he carries automobile insurance against fire, theft, property damage, or collision.

Inquiries will show the financial interest of the violator in the machine he was driving. Questions will show whether the automobile was his employer's, his own, or one hired or borrowed; as well as the make and type of car. In case the car is owned by the violator, the year of make is shown, whether it was bought new or second-hand, the length of ownership, whether it was bought on a cash basis, by installments, or by exchange; and an estimate of its present value.

In another direction, efforts will be made to find out how much driving experience the violator has had. The questions asked will show how long he has driven any car, and how long the present car, whether he drives for sole employment, for casual employment, for business and pleasure, or for pleasure only. The record will also show the nature of the violator's license, whether he is a professional chauffeur or private driver, and the State where the license was obtained.

Record to Be Complete.

To determine further what the violator's experience has been, he will be asked whether he was ever arrested before, whether convicted or sued in a civil action, and whether he was ever run into by others. The record will also show whether the mechanical condition of the car is maintained at a garage, by the owner, or others, and whether the violator has ever worked in a garage.

The final questions are intended to show whether the violator appears to be familiar with right of way rules and reckless driving laws.

At several meetings of committees studying various phases of the traffic accident problem, discussions have revealed the opinion of some of the members that the ease with which possession of an automobile may be had for small sums of money has led to a big increase in the number of drivers, and that in many transactions of this sort too little attention has been paid to the ability of the purchaser to drive. Specific cases of sums as small as a few dollars were given by members of committees, whose organizations had sought old cars for safety demonstration purposes.

Questionnaires sent out by the committee on satistics to chambers of commerce and other organizations in several hundred communities are being answered and show a wide range in practice as to the collection and reporting of accident statistics.

In one case, the Mayor of a Southern city reported that his city had made no effort to keep a record of their traffic accidents, but he added:

"I have sent instructions to the members of the police force to make such reports to me in the future, and will keep such a record from now on."

Excels in Strength and Performance

In its admiration of the good Maxwell's ability to outperform anything at anywhere near the price, the American public should remember—

1st.—That no other car in America, regardless of price, excels Maxwell strength and staunchness in proportion to weight and power.

2nd.—That at all vital points, metals and construction are the same as in cars that cost three to four times as much.

3rd.—That in its manufacture, no measures are too costly to protect the owner fully, in person and in pocket.

Those are the precise reasons why the good Maxwell—now under the supervision of Chrysler engineers—stands up and delivers its splendid service at such amazingly low cost.

Takes City Agency for Hup.

THE Wilson Motor Car Co. has taken the city agency in St. Louis for the Hup, which is distributed in this district by the Weber Implement & Automobile Co. All the Hup models will be shown by the Wilson company, of which H. Claude Merry is sales manager. As has been told, the Hup four line is to be augmented soon after the first of the year by a "straight eight."

Attend Cadillac Convention.

J. James MacGregor and Charles L. Laud of the Cadillac Automobile Co. of St. Louis were in Detroit last week attending the annual convention of Cadillac distributors. The convention was the more interesting because it was 10 years ago that the first V-type eight-cylinder car introduced in this country was made by the Cadillac factory. Virtually all the distributers at the convention have been with the Cadillac company since it introduced the V-type eight, and a number have been 15 and even 20 years with the company.

New Auto Finishing Method.

The Mueck Auto Body Co. has adopted a new method, known as the Mueco method, for refinishing automobiles and trucks in about half the usual time. C. W. Happel, secretary and treasurer, and George Buerke, superintendent, of the Mueck company, recently returned fro mthe East where they investigated various automobile finishing methods.

New Coach Body for Fords.

A new coach body for Fords, the "Ritzie," is being made for the Champion Body Co. by the Moon Bros. Manufacturing Co. It has stream line effect, special hood and radiator and ample room for four passengers.

Sets Kansas City-Denver Record.

A stock Flint six "55" touring car has just been driven from Kansas City to Denver, a distance of 665 miles, in 15 hours and 55 minutes over the Midland Trail. It is said to have beaten the former record by two hours and 35 minutes, the time being kept by representatives of the Kansas City and Denver Automobile Clubs.

Sales Forces Hear Address.

A joint meeting of the sales forces of the Beck & Corbitt Iron Co. and the Fred Campbell Auto Supply Co. was held at a dinner at the Claridge Hotel last Friday to hear an address on "Better Selling" by Carl Palmen, treasurer of the Parker Waterman Manufacturing Co., of Los Angeles. Robert E. Lee manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, and of the Automotive Accessories Association, presided. Palmen delivered a message of better methods, of better loyalty and better salesmanship. The heads of the two firms and about 48 salesmen were present.

Car Finished in White Duco.

What is said to be the first Duco job in white seen in St. Louis is on a special six Stutz shown by the Wilson Motor Car Co. The car is trimmed in black and the wheels are in the same color.

Fahrenkrog Home Again.

H. F. Fahrenkrog of the Kardell Motor Car Co., a member of the Board of Education, has returned from a vacation trip which took him to the Reo factory at Lansing, Mich., several of the lake cities and Pittsburg.

Shows First of New Models.

The Benjamin Motor Co. has received a carload of new Velie coach sedans, 1925 models, the first shown in St. Louis. They were sold at once and a new shipment is on the way from the factory.

Backs From Cadillac Plant.

Charles L. Lowd, general manager, and J. James MacGregor, president of the Cadillac Automobile Co. of St. Louis, have just come back from a trip to the factory where they attended the annual Cadillac convention. They are very optimistic about business this fall, as are all Cadillac officials. H. H. Rice, president of the company, told Lowd and MacGregor that he felt business would be unusually good this fall, basing his opinion on discussions with prominent financiers and manufacturers of automobiles and other articles with whom he conferred on a recent Eastern trip.

New British Speed Record.

Five-Day Week at Ford Plant.

It is stated in Detroit that the five-day week is now in effect at the Ford Motor Co. plant at Highland and that all Ford production plans are based on it. A present production capacity of 8900 cars daily is to be expanded to 10,000 a day. Differences in pay between the old schedule and the five-day week schedule are said to be negligible.

Matheson Oakland Sales Chief.

In addition to his duties as assistant president of General Motors, Charles W. Matheson has been appointed vice president and director of sales of the Oakland Motor Car Co., a division of General Motors. For 10 years previous to his recent appointment by General Motors, Matheson was with Dodge Brothers as sales executive, serving as general sales manager and vice president in charge of sales.

New Excuse for Fatal Speeding.

That his goggles had been so gummed by his dog licking them that he could not see clearly, was the excuse given by Matt Kolar of North Puyallup, Wash., who drove at high speed past a watchman who was holding up a warning disc and shouting that a train was coming. The train hit the rear of Kolar's car, knocked it against the watchman and smashed his shanty. Kolar was slightly hurt. The watchman died. State officials are trying to find a way to punish Kolar adequately.

Tire Dealers' Convention.

The fifth annual convention of the National Tire Dealers' Association will be held in Akron, Nov. 18, 19 and 20. The organization is composed of retail tire merchants from all parts of the United States. Akron was awarded the convention because it is the largest rubber manufacturing center in the world. In Akron, 60 per cent of the crude rubber imported into the United States is consumed. Twenty manufacturing companies have a capacity of 100,000 tires per day.

What Are They All Saying About "One-Shot"?

NOTABLE among the new features of the 1925 Cleveland Six is the "One-Shot" Lubrication System which eliminates all greasing of the chassis by hand. No other automotive improvement of the year is the subject of so much discussion.

Owners now are often being stopped and asked, "Is it as marvelous as I have heard? Show me how it works!"

Step on the Plunger—And Oil the Entire Car

To lubricate all moving chassis parts, you merely step on a plunger. You do not leave the driver's seat. You never have to use a grease gun or an oil can.

With this exclusive, patented feature, you are saved the frequent inconvenience of leaving your car for several hours for a thorough greasing.

The danger of neglected chassis lubrication will never bother you again.

Your car is always free from squeaks and rattles. For "One-Shot" can be used whether the car is standing still or moving. See this famous feature of the newest, finest Cleveland Six!

Mileage Motor—Four-Wheel Brakes—Balloon Tires

Then after you have seen how "One-Shot" works—get behind the wheel and test the Mileage Motor.

Its phenomenal hill-climbing power, flashing pick-up, and speed of over 60 miles an hour, make it probably the most efficient power plant in use today.

Study the entire car and you will sense the reason for its popularity:—

Bodies that are roomy and aristocratic in appearance; genuine super-size balloon tires as standard equipment; four-wheel brakes as optional equipment at a slight extra cost; and rugged, long-life construction throughout.

So fine a car was never obtainable at so low a price. Arrange today to drive yourself! Touring car, $1095; Five-passenger sedan, $1395; f. o. b. Cleveland.

TOWN ORDINANCE TAXING AUTOS IS OPPOSED IN OHIO

State Motorists' Association Leads Fight to Have Ordinance Declared to Be Unconstitutional.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 6.—A case of interest to all motorists, in view of the increasing tendency to tax them, is being fought in Ohio as a result of the town of Cambridge, in Guernsey County, enacting an ordinance imposing a municipal license tax on automobile owners in addition to other taxes.

The fight against the ordinance is being led by the Ohio State Automobile Association, which is preparing to file a brief in State Supreme Court attacking the constitutionality of the ordinance. Fred H. Caley, president of the association, says if the ordinance is declared constitutional, it will not be long before the practice spreads throughout the State and cities in other states may take it up.

The Cambridge ordinance provides that all resident owners of motor vehicles and all nonresidents, except farmers and gardeners, who deliver commodities in motor vehicles within the city, must take out city licenses and pay fees equal to one-fourth of the State license fees.

The funds collected from the tax are to be used for employing traffic policemen and road maintenance.

A Cambridge garage owner enjoined the ordinance, and brought suit in Common Pleas Court. The case next went to the Court of Appeals and this court in turn certified its record to the Supreme Court.

The lower court upheld the ordinance, but the city lost in the Court of Appeals.

The State Auto Association will raise the question whether, in assuming to tax motor vehicles, the State has impliedly prohibited municipalities from levying any additional tax.

The association holds there is no reason why one man, because he owns an automobile, should be assessed more heavily than another to maintain the streets of Cambridge and its police force, especially as to protection and the benefits of transportation are enjoyed equally by all. He said such an ordinance was another attempt to saddle the motor vehicle with excessive, discriminatory taxation.

New Building of the Tate Motor Co. Now Is Completely in Service

The new salesroom and service station building of the Tate Motor Co., Inc., at 3001 Washington boulevard. The company occupied the structure, which has every equipment for rapid servicing of Dodge cars, on July 20. Now the entire building is in use, from the auto laundries to the thoroughly equipped shop and storage quarters on the roof. It was built only after careful study convinced Frank R. Tate, president of the company, that the site was the most central that could be found for the convenience of Dodge car owners in this district.

THE SUNDAY MOTORIST

UNIFORMITY IN MOODS.

TRAFFIC officers are being criticised for their frequent variation in temperament and moods. A driver will run slowly at one crossing for fear of getting bawled out by the man who gives pedestrians a chance first, while, if he doesn't speed up at the next crossing, he is quite certain to be asked, "Hey, where'd you learn to drive?" The situation is perplexing to the conscientious driver, and many persons have been led to offer suggestions for remedies. The best of these have been sifted down by this department and found to be along the same general lines of thought, as follows:

"Moods should not be tolerated. The traffic system should be standardized to such a point that the same piece of carelessness would meet with the same degree of rebuke at any intersection. There should be such uniformity in regulations and in the enforcement of such regulations that a careless driver would be taken to task in the same terms one day as another.

"As matters stand, automobilists often find that they 'get away' with bold infractions of the law just because the officer happens to be too warm at the moment to bother with enforcement. Sometimes the corner is too chilly to have an argument with the offender. Other times the officer is inclined to take it out on some innocent motorist who happens to follow some one who talked back to the officer and got away with it.

"With a little standardization, it seems, all this annoyance could be obviated to the satisfaction of the Police Department and local motorists alike. Under the present system motorists are somewhat justified in suspecting that it often is a question of how the cop feels, and this frequently leads to the mistaken notion that he always is to blame for misjudging the situation.

"It is a bad thing to have the motoring public suspect that every reprimand is merely the result of an officer's being 'grouchy.'"

THE OLD MECHANIC SAYS:

Do you know how to handle tools, what tools you ought to have in the kit and when to us 'em?

I've just removed a bolt from the transmission cover plate of a chap's car. He got too strong with a socket wrench and sheared off the head of the bolt. That's an old mistake. Greenhorns who use these wrenches always seem to forget that they get extra leverage with 'em that can cause a lot of destruction.

The big screwdriver is important, but the short handle ones are handiest. Also, you ought to have one of the midget screwdrivers for repairin' the wirin' of light sockets. You'd give anything to have one of these little fellers if the tail light wire should break off near the socket.

A hammer is better for testin' out spark plugs than a screwdriver. Hammers have wooden handles that save you a shock, whereas some of the best screwdrivers have steel running up to form part of the handle. If you've got an all-wood handle on the screwdriver so much the better. Then you can short one spark plug with the screwdriver and one with the hammer. That makes it easier to find out which plug ain't firin'.

Try to have as many sizes of open-end wrenches as you can carry, but don't fail to have one with a V-shape jaw. They will fit over a nut in a crude sort of way, but sometimes if the nut ain't too tight they'll help out if you can't find the exact size of regular wrench.

For your valve tappets have thin wrenches and the strongest you can buy. Keep these together, so that when you want to take a click out of the motor you don't have to experiment with different sizes.

Have pliers, of course, but my experience is that the less you use 'em the better. Don't hack at your car.

AID TO CAR SELECTION.

Are you interested in the Swift Six, the Fast Four or the Easy Eight? Has it resolved itself into a matter of mechanical choice? Well, then, there is a way to solve your problem. Obtain an instruction book for each car and study it carefully. There you will find the uncolored facts bearing upon such matters as desngn, care, adjustment and trouble shooting. You'll know these cars before you actually acquire one of them. What could be more profitable?

LESSONS FROM ACCIDENTS.

A recent skidding accident offers the average motorist a valuable hint on brake adjustment. The driver in the case had always taken great pains to see that his service brake would lock both rear wheels simultaneously as a means of skid prevention. But he never thought to make a similar test of the emergency brake, or to see that when using both brakes at once the wheels would be stopped equally.

There came a time when it was necessary to stop abruptly. The streets were wet. He reached for the emergency brake and unconsciously applied it more vigorously than he did the foot brake, because he had been trained to apply the latter gingerly in wet weather so as not to lock the wheels. Not being accustomed to using the emergency he pulled it so far back as to apply too much braking force to the wheels. Because the lever caught on one of the notches it required a second or two too many to release the brake again. To make matters worse, the emergency brake was so badly adjusted that it locked but one wheel.

The result was that the car was thrown into a skid before he had time to know what had happened. If both brakes had been properly adjusted and he had known better than to misuse the emergency, the collision might have been averted.

DIFFERENCE IN MOTORS.

Just because your new car is a six like its predecessor, or a four or an eight, and of the same valve type, there is no reason to suppose that it requires the same treatment. From an engineering standpoint it may be very different.

The use of pistons with aluminum skirts of the constant clearance type, for instance, makes it practical to operate on a lighter grade of engine oil than is customary in cases where cast iron pistons are used. In one type of six-cylinder engine the oil pump is unusually high above the level of the crankcase oil so that in cold weather an oil of too heavy a nature will not properly prime the pump. The bearings may suffer as a consequence.

Between motors of exactly the same type there is often a difference in the valve stem clearance due to the variation in valve metals and the consequence variation in expansion. Vibration results in other important variations.

A motorist must understand the particular make of engine under the hood of his car for best results, even though he thinks it is just like 25 or 30 other makes.

U. S. AND NEW JERSEY BUILDING $4,000,000 BRIDGE ACROSS A BAY

CASISSONS are being sunk for the $4,000,000 highway bridge to be built across Raritan Bay, N. J., by the New Jersey Highway Department and the Federal Bureau of Public Roads. A solid foundation will not be reached before a depth of at least 115 feet. The bridge will be a mile long, and will be high enough to reduce the necessity for opening the draw bridge which will be a feautre. The bridge will be built of concrete with floor of asphalt blocks 2⅛ inches thick.

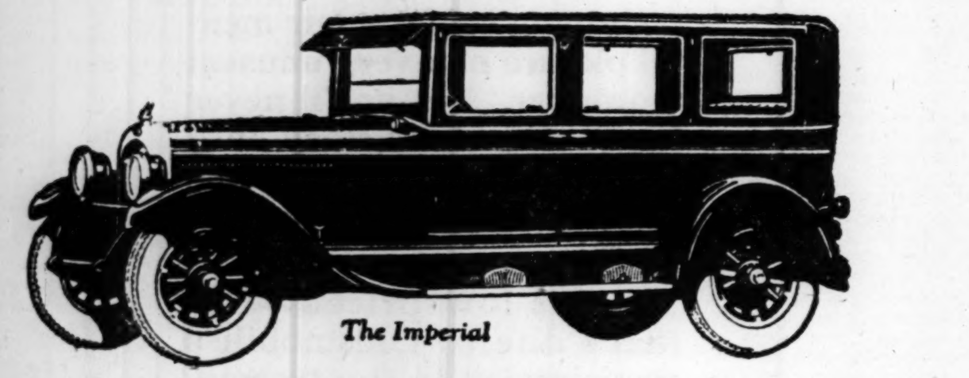
Tubular Axles Best Fitted For Four-Wheel Brakes



The Imperial

A new type of combustion chamber that burns all the gas and a new way of distributing the gas equally to all cylinders are two reasons why the Chrysler Six, with an engine only 3-inch bore by 4¾-inch stroke delivers 68 horsepower, top speed better than 70 miles an hour with gasoline economy safely 20 miles to the gallon. When you take your demonstration the performance will speak for itself. But don't forget to ask about the oil-filter that automatically cleanses all the crankcase oil every 25 miles and the air-cleaner which passes none but clean air through the carburetor into the cylinders, two big economy factors that add to the life of the car and cut maintenance costs. Note, too, the special six-ply high-speed balloon tires on all models.

The Chrysler Six
Pronounced as though spelled, Cry-sler

Chrysler engineers have done more than apply four-wheel brakes. They have designed the car to meet the torsional strain of front wheel brakes. That is one of the reasons why the front axle is of tubular design. In comparison with the conventional practice it shows these advantages: Twisting strains, 138% stronger; horizontal strains, 5 times stronger; up and down strains, 400% stronger; rigidity 34% greater.

The braking equipment is the Chrysler-Lockheed development of the hydraulic principle, guaranteeing automatic and permanent equalization. These four-wheel brakes and the Chrysler practice of mounting rear springs at right angles to the rear axle and close to and parallel to the wheels account in large measure for the superior driving and riding qualities of the car. There is no disturbing side-sway under any conditions and you can take a turn at 50 miles an hour without danger or discomfort. Book yourself for a ride and be sure to have these superiorities demonstrated.

We are pleased to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Chrysler's attractive plan.

SENDING THROUGH TRAFFIC AROUND CITIES ADVOCATED

Motor Tourists Who Are Not Interested in Making Stop-Overs Described as Traffic Liability.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Provision of around-the-city routes for the motor tourist who is not interested in making a stopover and thus is a liability to the community, is advocated as a civic necessity by Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Motor Co., writing in the September issue of American Motorist, official publication of the American Automobile Association.

Macauley, speaking as a member of the Traffic Planning and Safety Committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, says that because the modern tourist knows where he is going and travels on a schedule which calls for a stop at noon and another at night, he is not necessarily a potential customer in every community he traverses. Heavy through traffic, he argues, has not been an asset to those merchants and business interests which has insisted on leading it by their doors.

Little Co-Operation by Cities.

"The laying out of America's state and Federal highways, now rapidly progressing, has a vital influence on city traffic congestion, on the convenience of tourist travel, on freight transport costs and on local business," Macauley explains. "Proper location of through routes can geratly aid solution of municipal problems in which all motorists are greatly concerned. Civic bodies now deplore that five years ago they demanded interurban traffic through their business centers."

The article stresses the importance of interlocking the arterial road system, as now being laid out, with the routing of through motor travel. It is pointed out that with the corollation of State systems into an inter-State system of national benefit State and Federal road, officials have been engaged in laying out roads to carry over 80 per cent of the highway traffic of the nation, but that despite the vision behind this great national movement very little active co-operation is being had from American cities.

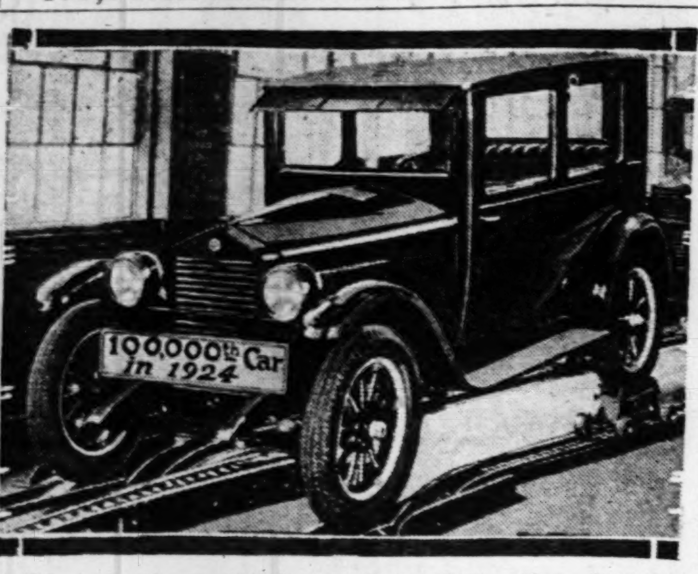
Would Aid Traffic Officials.

"Left alone," says Macauley, "the majority of our State highway departments, with the aid and co-operation of the Federal Government, with a State and national viewpoint on the traffic situation, can lay out a system of arterial highways which, in addition to serving interurban traffic most efficiently, will go far toward relieving many of the ills from which the majority of cities suffer.

"Our cities have just begun to wake up to the fact that it is not an advantage, but a decided disadvantage, to debouch into the malestrom of their downtown traffic the through travel which has no desire whatever to be tangled up in city congestion, hampered and delayed by its necessary regulations and led by devious windings through main streets of business blocks where it does not wish to stop. Through traffic and intracity traffic, far as possible, should be absolutely separated. It is odd that this apparently simple truth is only now beginning to be appreciated by the business and civic authorities of the average American community."

Macauley says a main route that leads straight through the business and shopping section of a city is as undesirable as a main line of a railroad that cuts through the heart of a community. Cities that are well planned allow the through railroad traffic to pass by without business interruption, the article shows, yet allow for convenience of entrance into the business section if the steam road traveler desires to stop over."

100,000th Hudson-Essex Car in 1924



The 100,000th car made in 1924 by the Hudson-Essex factory as it was leaving the assembly line. It was an Essex coach. Essex sales are expected to double those of the four-cylinder model in 1923, and Hudson sales are running 35 per cent ahead of Hudson sales last year.

REO BUS COMES FROM MICHIGAN

Driven From Lansing Factory to St. Louis Easily in Two Days.

A Reo street car type bus, with seats for 21 passengers, was driven through last week from Lansing, Mich., to St. Louis. It was one of a caravan of 11 Reo busses which left the Reo factory Aug. 29 for Chicago. Eight were of the sedan type, similar to the one which has just completed a transcontinental run from New York to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

At Chicago the caravan broke up. Two busses went to Denver. One went to Duluth, Minn. The rest went to St. Louis, Chicago, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Peoria and Decatur, Ill. The busses left Lansing Friday morning, and at 5 p. m. the following day one of them arrived at the Kardell Motor Car Co., St. Louis distributer.

The 20-passenger Reo sedan bus, which left New York July 23, arrived in San Francisco Aug. 25 and at Los Angeles Aug. 28. When it reached San Francisco the bus had gone 5677 miles, passed through 15 states, crossed most of the important mountain ranges of the continent, and encountered all sorts of weather and road conditions. The fact that it was able to make this journey with all parts in excellent condition is believed to be ample proof that bus transportation is feasible any place in the United States.

The bus crew consisted of J. C. Brandmore, C. E. Griffith and Dave F. Fassett, the latter a veteran of two previous transcontinental trips in Reo cars, the first in 1905, when the worst of today's roads would have been considered boulevards.

The trip was designed by the Reo factory as a pioneering work to get data upon which to base a plan for transcontinental motor bus sightseeing travel and has created interest throughout the country.

Handling the busy as easily as a touring car, Fassett declares he had no trouble whatever on his trip and that his longest day's travel—168 miles in Yellowstone Park—could have been made the average had not his schedule called for slower time.

SAYS 400,000 U. S. CARS WILL GO ABROAD IN 1924

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept 6. — "To supply her increasing needs for economical individual transportation, Europe will buy more American cars and trucks this year than ever before," says Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, who has returned from a two months survey of the European automobile field.

"In every country visited," he says, "I found a greater appreciation of the utility of the motor vehicle, and a recognition of the need for fewer barriers to the efficient use of these time-saving transport machines, such as high duties, excessive taxation of cars and gasoline, rules against parking cars, the belief that every car must have a chauffeur, and the old idea that motor cars are for pleasure only.

"More than 400,000 American cars and trucks will go to 114 foreign countries in 1924. Hundreds of dealers will attend the automobile shows in Paris, Berlin, Amsterdam, Brussels and London this fall to contract for American cars."

To Discuss Oil Dilution.

Millions of dollars in lubricating oil will be saved if crank case dilution can be prevented, it is asserted in a statement accompanying an announcement that oil experts from many centers will gather at a symposium of the petroleum division of the American Chemical Society at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 8 to 13.

HOW 'BALLOONS' ABSORB SHOCKS

Low Pressure Tires Declared to Have Proved Their Value Thoroughly.

"Balloon tires have thoroughly proved themselves. They are now adaptable to any and all kinds of cars, no matter how large or small or heavy or light. All of them ride very much more comfortably on balloons. And the cost of applying them is so small that any motorist can afford them."

Jesse P. Johnston, of the Johnston Bros. Tire and Service Co. was emphatic in declaring that, entirely outside his interest as a tire dealer, his personal experiments with the low pressure tires had converted him to balloons. His assertions were backed up by those of other tire experts.

Absorb Road Shocks.

"Just to show what balloons mean," Johnston continued, "there is a certain well known stretch of road that is really rough. I went over that the other day with my balloon-tired car at 55 miles an hour. A friend who was following me in a car that needs take dust from no machine was unable to follow me. He had high pressure tires, and he couldn't run within 20 miles an hour as fast as I could. Such speed with his hard tires would have racked his car and slammed him and his passengers around so they couldn't stand it.

"Balloon tires absorb fully 75 per cent of the road shocks. I have proved this myself and a number of friends whom I have had ride with me will back me up.

"We purposely chose round streets for our rides, so that without warning we would come upon bumpy stretches and sudden turns. Many of my guests handled the car themselves. At first they would put on the brakes and slow down to take these bumps and turns. It was force of habit from driving with high pressure tires.

"But at length each driver realized that this was unnecessary. We would take the rough stretches without slackening speed, make sudden turns without cutting down the throttle. There was no perceptible change in driving smoothness, and practically no skidding on the curves.

Smooth Out Rough Places.

"The way to appreciate balloons is to drive on them yourself. When you are at the wheel you can better feel how these tires smooth out the uneven stretches. You can feel the new ease of steering and brake control. You have better command of your car than you ever had before.

"Balloons make it possible to keep a higher average speed without slowing up for bumps and road depressions. Driving is safer, too. The extreme cushioning qualities of these tires protect your car against depreciation from pounding of the road. Wear and tear on motor and gears and bearing are reduced. Squeaks and rattles are minimized. Crystallization of chassis parts is slowed down. The car lasts longer and gives greater service."

Weekly Collection Planned.

Auto dealers in Philadelphia are considering collecting installments weekly, instead of monthly, the idea being "get your money while they have it." If the week collection plan is adopted, it will be taking a leaf from the experience of a few truck dealers and automobile financing companies, as 75 to 80 per cent of the passenger cars sold in the Philadelphia territory are time transaction, delays in payments constitute a serious drawback.

CHEVROLET ADDS DE LUXE MODELS

Three new de luxe models have just been introduced by the Chevrolet Motor Co. They are the de luxe sedan, touring and coupe. Much attention has been given to beautifying the appearance of the new models, and among other innovations is the use of Duco finish.

For several months past there has been a consistent and steadily growing demand for Chevrolet cars with special fittings. As quickly as this trend appeared, factory officials started to work on the de luxe models. The de luxe sedan has a double Duco finish in blue, with a contrasting red trim. This is further set off by nickeled radiator, head and cowl lights and aluminum kick plates. This, as are the other two de luxe models, is equipped with disc wheels, front and rear double-bar bumpers, and motor meter.

The de luxe touring also is finished in a deep slate color which harmonizes with the upholstery of a shade lighter tone.

ROY COFFEEN HAS BECOME WARD MOTOR CO. MANAGER

Roy Coffeen, who has been acting as factory supervisor for the Maxwell-Chrysler factory in this district, has become general manager of the Ward Motor Co., Inc., distributer of Chrysler and Maxwell cars.

Coffeen has been in the automotive business since 1906, when he was assistant manager of the John Deere Plow Co. branch at Omaha, with the branch's auto business as his special care. Then he spent several years with the Willys-Overland organization at Toledo, assisting in establishing factory branches, and for four years was manager of the Willys-Overland branch at Cleveland.

For the last year and a half he has been supervisor for the Maxwell-Chrysler factory of a district that includes Missouri, Arkansas, Mississippi, Kentucky and part of Southern Illinois.

THIS is what properly adjusted Rusco-lined two-wheel brakes will do. The police stop-test standard is 20 feet, going at 15 miles an hour. Rusco-lined brakes do it in 8 feet. This has again been recently proved by a leading car manufacturer who standardizes on Rusco Lining.

Why Rusco commands the car

THE brake lining insures the brake. The quality of Asbestos that makes the lining insures the lining's braking surface. Canadian Crysotile Asbestos only goes into Rusco. It is "all-wool" and no shoddy. Only the giant looms, patented, built and used exclusively by the Russell Co., are powerful enough to weave this mineral-metal fabric. This weave makes long wear doubly sure.

Standard for Packard

IS THERE a company more careful in its selection of equipment than the Packard Company? Rusco out-tests all the standards set for a super-quality lining. Yet Rusco Crysotile Asbestos lining costs no more than the shoddy kind. Careful buying helps to make sure your safety. Insist that the repair man or dealer give you Rusco.

Your repair man pays more for RUSCO than any other brake lining —but he doesn't charge you more!

IN GIVING you Rusco—the finest quality brake lining it is possible for the repair man to obtain—he accepts a less profit than if he sold you any other brand.

If he recommended and sold you a cheaper grade it would cost you the same, but he would make three times as much profit.

You can depend upon such a man. It takes time and money to reline your brakes. It isn't a job you want done every day. When your brakes do need relining, be sure to get the benefit of Rusco superiority and the conscientious service of a repair man who is willing to take less profit in order to give you a better job.

DE FOREST AWARDED ARMSTRONG RIGHTS

After years of bitter fighting, Dr. Lee DeForest, inventor of the Audion tube, which makes possible radio broadcasting and receiving, wireless telephony and the talking motion pictures known as the Phonofilm, won a notable victory in the United States District Court.

By an order of the court, priority of invention was awarded to Dr. Lee DeForest, on the feed-back circuit and oscillating audion, thereby establishing for all time the claim of Dr. DeForest as their inventor. The two patents issued to DeForest cover completely the subject matter of the patent issued in 1915 to Major Edwin H. Armstrong.

The issuance of the patents to the DeForest corporation is the first direct result of the decision rendered by the District Court in Washington on May 5, which declared that Dr. Lee DeForest was the real inventor of the feed-back circuit and oscillating audion, and not Armstrong. This decision was the culmination of years of litigation in which DeForest, Armstrong, Dr. Irving Langmuir and Dr. A. Meissner claimed credit for the invention. Despite the claims of the others, a patent was issued to Armstrong in 1915. The patent was later disposed of to the Westinghouse Electric Co., which has since been manufacturing the appliances under its protection.

Despite this fact, DeForest continued his fight. The first victory came to him in May, 1924, when the District Court in Washington handed down a decision declaring that DeForest and not Armstrong or the other claimints, was the inventor. Reviewing the case in detail, the court held that DeForest's invention dated from August, 1912, antedating the claims of the others by almost a year. Following this decision, the court recently ordered those patents issued to the DeForest corporation, which controls DeForest's invention on the feed-back circuit and the oscillating audion.

No sooner were the patents issued to DeForest than announcement was made that suit would be entered in the Philadelphia district court, through Darby & Darby, attorneys for Dr. DeForest, against the Westinghouse Electric Co., for annulment of the Armstrong patents, and to restrain the company from manufacturing the apparatus in the future.

Many millions of dollars are involved by the issuance of these patents to DeForest. It means that in the future, the feed back circuit and the oscillating audion, manufactured under the Armstrong patent by the Westinghouse company, can no longer be made by that concern, but will be manufactured by the DeForest Radio Telephone & Telegraph Co. and its licencees, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Some idea of the magnitude of this outcome may be gathered when it is taken into consideration that the apparatus covered by the patents just issued to DeForest are indispensable to all radio sets, and all wireless broadcasting transmitter sets. It also covers all super-hetrodyne and neutrodyne sets.

In a statement recently issued by Dr. DeForest, who has won such a signal victory, said:

"Purely aside from any financial return that may accrue from the issuance of these patents to me, I am most highly gratified for sentimental reasons. For almost a dozen years I have claimed to be the inventor of the feed-back circuit and the oscillating audion. It was a bitter blow, indeed, to me to see patents for them granted to another claimant. But never once did I doubt but that justice would eventually be given me. That day is now here. My claims have been proven by the last courts, and I am now in possession of the patents which were withheld from me for so long. It is a splendid victory and I am very happy at the outcome."

RADIO HASTENS RECOVERY OF SANATORIUM CONVALESCENTS

Physicians and patients are agreed that radio broadcasting is doing much to relieve the monotonous hours of sanatorium treatment and by so doing, is to some extent, aiding treatment. Recent letters received by WGY from the Central Maine Sanatorium at Fairfield, Me., and the Pine Crest Sanatorium at Salisbury Center, N. Y., indicate that both of these institutions have gone to considerable expense to provide radio reception for all the patients.

The operator at the Central Maine Sanatorium reports that 126 head sets are connected to a central receiving set, enabling all the patients, even in isolated buildings, to hear broadcast programs. Over 2000 feet of wire were required to make the installation. By means of a switchboard the operator may switch off or on any building he desires. In addition there is a microphone by means of which a member of the hospital staff may address all the patients at one time.

Hoover Advocates Linking Of Broadcasting Stations

Expresses Belief That Entire Country Should Be Covered by a Network of Radio Stations Interconnected by Land Lines.

At the national radio conference which has been called by Secretary Hoover to meet in Washington, Sept. 30, to consider problems which have arisen as a result of the tremendous expansion of the art, every group in the radio field will be represented and it is promised that all persons or organizations having suggestions to make or views to express upon any feature of radio activity will have a full opportunity to be heard.

The secretary announced that every group represented in the radio field will be asked to name representatives who will constitute the formal advisory committee of the conference. As at present planned, the groups to be represented will be the Listeners, Marine Service, Broadcasting (one from each of the nine inspection districts), Engineering, Trans-oceanic Communication, Wire Interconnections, Manufacturers, Amateurs, Point-to-Point Communication and Government departments. Public hearings will be held by this committee on the various suggestions and recommendations made to the conference.

Some of the matters suggested for consideration are not within the regulatory control of the secretary. As to such matters, any conclusions reached by the conference can become effective only by voluntary adoption by the interests affected. As to the features falling iwthin the powers of the Secretary, the recommendations of the conference will be advisory to the Department of Commerce.

Secretary Hoover regards the problem of inter-connection of broadcasting stations as the most important one to be considered by the conference.

"We must have more systematic and better organized connection of broadcasting stations throughout the country," said he. "There should be a method whereby all sections of the country may be enabled to listen-in on national events. At present, some parts of the country do not participate in such occasions largely due to the expense involved in the hooking-up of the stations by land wires.

"There can be no doubt that the real public service comes from the local broadcasting station. Those who have large multi-tube sets may get stations other than local ones, but it is uncertain. The majority of listeners-in have small sets and it should be possible for them to listen-in on national events broadcast from the local station. To my mind, that is the most important function of radio."

If the conference succeeds in accomplishing an arrangement whereby all parts of the country may be hooked up for national events, every fan in the country probably will be able to listen in on the inaugural address of the next President on March 4. Army and navy experts are also working out a scheme to broadcast the sessions of Congress, which, if successful, would permit voters all over the nation to keep close track of what their representatives in Washington are doing in their behalf.

Government experts admit that the conference faces no mean task in arranging for a nation-wide interconnection of broadcasting stations. At present the only practical way of doing this is through land wires. The principal obstacle is the matter of expense. The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. controls practically all of the land wires and the equipment necessary for interconnection. Officials of the telephone company assert that their charge is justified by the expense involved on their part.

However this may be, there can be no doubt that there will be a thorough discussion of the matter at the conference and the telephone organization will be asked if a nation-wide interconnection of stations cannot be accomplished at a smaller expense.

While at some future time it may be possible for stations to pick up the programs of others and rebroadcast them, Secretary Hoover says this matter is yet in the theoretical stage and cannot be depended on for general use.

While one or two of the suggestions proposed by Secretary Hoover for consideration by the conference possess controversial features, he believes they may be worked out to the satisfaction of all concerned.

For instance, the proposal for a limitation of power is in direct contrast to the decision of the Atlantic City conference in regard to a chain of super-power broadcasting stations to blanket the country. At the present time, the maximum power that can be used is 1000 watts. At the present time, some 12 stations are equipped with this amount of power. Some authorities believe that if several times this amount of power were used, it would cause the signals to come in stronger and clearer and with lessened interference. However, when such transquitters are in operation, it is practically impossible to tune in any other station in the vicinity.

Measures to reduce interference which are to be considered by the conference are also all-important, from the point of view of fans, at least. In this connection the revision of present frequency or wave lengths will be helpful. In addition, fans along the Atlantic Coast complain that they are bothered considerably by code which is used by ships. It is believed that if the wave lengths for ships and those used by broadcasting stations may be more widely separated, code interference will be greatly lessened.

The co-operation of all those attending the conference will be sought in eliminating interference from electrical devices other than radio ertansmitting stations. This interference can mbe produced by an elevator, a power line, an electric sign, or a number of other causes.

If the conference recommends the use of high frequencies or short wave lengths for broadcasting stations, it will be a big step forward in the art, experts believe. It is claimed that less interference is experienced on short wave lengths and that more stations can be put on them. Most of the short wave lengths are now occupied by amateurs. It is considered possible that the amateurs may be transferred to the higher wave lengths and the short ones assigned to broadcasting stations.

Other problems which the conference will consider are: revision and reallocation of broadcasting frequency or wave lenghs: uses of shore waves; reclassification of wave lengths; taking many broadcasting stations on one circuit; limitation of power; division of time; zoning of broadcasting stations; means for distinguishing the identity of American amateur calls from those of foreign amateurs; relations between Government and commercial services and "such otser topics as may be proposed by the conference."

The conference will also discuss contemplated legislation and possibly make recommendations as to the kind of radio law which should be enacted at the next session of Congress. It is not believed that the conference will in any way obviate the necessity for a new radio law broadening the powers of the Secretary of Commerce in regulating the art.

The duration of the conference will depend entirely on the conference itself, Mr. Hoover said. It may last one week, two weeks or even a month. The deciding factor will be the length of time required to reach decisions on the many pressing problems.

INTERESTING HOOK-UP FOR EXPERIMENTATION

Receiver With Two Controls Has 20-Mile Range Without Aerial Connection.

The tuning coil for this circuit (L-1) consists of 60 turns of No. 22 double cotton-covered wire wound on a 3-inch tube, with a tap taken off at the thirtieth turn. The tap is connected directly to the ground connection. A .0005 mfd. variable condenser (C-1) is connected across the ends of the tuning coil (L-1). Be sure that the stationary plates of the variable condenser are connected to the side of the tuning coil that is brought to the grid condenser (C-2). The grid condenser should have a capacity of .0005 mfd. with a grid-leak shunted across it. The variometer (V) is connected in series with one side of the telephones and the plate of the tube. Bring the positive side of the "B" battery directly to the other side of the telephones. A .001 mfd. fixed condenser is connected from the variometer side of the telephones to the negative side of the "B" battery to serve as a by-pass condenser. The filament lighting circuit is connected in the conventional manner.

With this circuit there are just two tuning controls, the variable condenser and the plate variometer. The tube should be preferably a 201-A type. A 22½-volt "B" battery will work satisfactorily.

This circuit is only recommended for use within 20 miles of a broadcasting station, but it will give the experimenter something for study.

ELABORATE PREPARATIONS FOR NEW YORK RADIO SHOW

Jobbers and Dealers' Bureau Will Assist Visiting Buyers and Maintain Information Booth.

The first Radio World's Fair, to be held in New York City, Sept. 22 to 28, is rapidly assuming an international importance which promises to make it an epochal event in the history of radio.

The coming fair will probably be the direct cause of quickly establishing the radio business on a financial basis similar to that now enjoyed by the automobile industry. A "Jobbers and Dealers' Bureau," employing a special staff of registration and information experts, has been established for the sole purpose of looking after the interests of the visiting wholesale buyers. The new department will greatly expedite business transactions between manufactuers and merchants. By arranging interviews in advance through the bureau it will be possible for one buyer to completely cover the huge exposition in five days.

The bureau will also act as a general information depot for all who attend, and arrangements have been made whereby New York hotel accommodations can be booked through the bureau.

Two hours per day—from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m.—will be set aside for the exclusive transaction of business between exhibitors and dealers. The exposition will be opened to the public at 1 p. m. each day.

While sitting up late at night trying to tune in DX, other members of the family will not have their sleep disturbed because of the light if an automobile dash lamp is placed on the panel. This lamp can be connected directly to the "A" battery with a switch in series with it. This lamp should be mounted so that it will throw a light on the tuning dials. When late tuning is to be done, the switch is turned on and the major tuning controls will be in the light so that the dial settings can be followed. It will then be unnecessary to have any other light burning.

ENTIRE U. S. TO HEAR DEFENSE DAY PROGRAM

Seventeen Broadcasters Will Carry Speeches to Listeners on Both Coasts.

At least 17 broadcasting stations and perhaps a few more will be hooked up into a national net at 9:15 p. m., Eastern Standard time, on Defense day, Sept. 12, for the transmission of speeches by Secretary of War Weeks, Gen. Pershing and Gen. J. J. Carty, of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Practically the entire nation will be able to listen in.

A little over a year ago Gen. Carty conducted what was termed the national roll call of telephone centers and broadcasters which included the greatest number of radio and telephone stations ever linked into a national net. The plans for Sept. 12 will probably surpass this achievement, and, of course, are official, carried out with the definite purpose of a communication defense test. The national broadcasting will be made possible through the co-operation of 17 stations hooked up by long-distance wires and placed at the disposal of the War Department for the evening.

The stations to broadcast include those used during the political conventions and the notification ceremonies, together with WOAW, Omaha; WFAA, Dallas, and KGO, Oakland, the last three bringing in the Western states and the Pacific coast, never before coupled with the East in regular broadcasts.

The stations officially announced as co-operating by the War Department are: WNAC, Boston; WJAR, Providence; WEAF, New York; WGY, Schenectady; WGR, Buffalo; KDKA, Pittsburg; WOO, Philadelphia; WSB, Atlanta; WCAP, Washington; WLW, Cincinnati; WGN, Chicago; KSD, St. Louis; WDAF, Kansas City; WLAG, Minneapolis; WOAW, Omaha, WFAA, Dallas, and KGO, Oakland.

Stations in Cleveland, Hastings, and one in the Northwest may also be hooked in before Defense day, it is understood.

In announcing the broadcasting plans the War Department stated:

"This is the first attempt at such extensive broadcasting, enabling one persons to address the nation at large. The usefulness of such facilities in times of national emergency cannot be overestimated and the test of their value is considered a very important element of the plans for Defense test day."

RADIO IS CHANGING CAMPAIGN METHODS

Average Citizen Acquiring New Insight Into Politics as Result of Broadcasting.

Radio has established more political precedents this year than any other year since it came into general use. This is the first presidential year in which it has functioned to any extent, and already it has become a major factor in American politics.

For the first time in history, the proceedings of the nominating conventions of both the leading political parties and the speeches of acceptance by the presidential candidates have been broadcast. The Democratic candidate for President learned of his nomination over the radio, and the Republican candidate by the same means learned who his opponent would be.

Whether radio "elects the next President," as some enthusiasts have predicted, or not, it is already a tremendously important factor in the campaign. This is obvious from the fact that there are probably not less than 3,000,000 receiving sets in use in the United States today and the radio audience has been estimated at 20,000,000 listeners.

Broadcasting of the nominating conventions gave the average citizen a new insight into national politics, personalities and issues. It not only let him know what was going on, but made him feel as if he were actually present; in fact, he was—all but his eyes.

During the campaign, citizens want to hear again the persons with whom they came to feel well acquainted during the conventions. Candidates of importance, especially those running for President, Vice President, Senator, and Governor, are sure every time they speak of reaching larger audiences than they possibly could have before the era of radio broadcasting.

It seems especially wise for the presidential candidates to conserve their energy and health by using the radio as much as possible instead of taking the traditional "swing around the circle," involving thousands of miles of hot and dusty travel, and even then not reaching people as they can now, on the air.

The present political campaign is bringing changes in the style of campaign speeches. Speakers have to boil their speeches down to a reasonable length, and must rely on what they say before the microphone instead of what they do on the platform to hold attention. The spread-eagle, bombastic oratory of the old-style, ranting, arm-swinging, perspiring campaign orator is giving way to logical, sensible and persuasive talks, given clearly and distinctly.

On the whole, radio's entry into the political arena is a cause for congratulation. It is a wholesome force, bringing the people closer to their government, and the government closer to the people.

Radiograms.

Believing that the high-power station will be obsolete in two or three years, Australia is planning to build beam radio stations.

The largest frame wireless aerial, eight feet high, with 1536 feet of wire, has been mounted on Bush Terminal Buildings in London.

Express trains in Germany are to be equipped with combination radio and wireless telephones, enabling the sending of wireless messages, telephoning and the giving of radio concerts while trains are speeding on their way. The wireless telephones will be connected with regular telephone systems at receiving stations. For radio messages special compartments will be built in the trains, and transmission stations erected at principal railway depots.

Label the Leads.

Mistakes in making connections which often result in the burning out of tubes is a failing common to radio beginners. A good idea, and one that will prove a reminder in making connections, is to have the leads from the "A" batteries and "B" batteries tagged with little tags marked with the voltage and polarity for each lead.

Radio Protection
The National Board of Fire Underwriters insists that your radio set be protected by an approved lightning arrester.
It is significant that principal railway signal, police and fire alarm systems have for 16 years depended upon the

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

All queries must be accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

Q. I am about to construct a radio receiving set but am undecided as to the best method to follow. Should I use condensers for tuning wherever possible, and will it simplify tuning and give louder signals? R. T.

A. Theoretically, the best practice would be to use condensers

Q. (1) When should 22½-volt and 45-volt plate or "B" batteries be discarded for new ones? (2) Can a light socket plug be depended upon to give as good results as an outdoor antenna? (3) Are vernier controls necessary on the rheostats and tuning controls of a neutrodyne receiver? A. F.

A. (1) The 22½-volt battery should be replaced when it drops to 17 volts and the 45-volt battery when its voltage drops below 37. (2) There are many factors affecting the efficiency of an electric light socket plug aerial, and its success depends entirely upon the way the electric wires are strung as well as where they are strung. Wiring placed in metal conduit is shielded so that its efficiency is low, so far as a collector of radio waves is concerned. Wiring located near to steel buildings or in buildings having a steel framework is also unsatisfactory, for the steel absorbs more energy than the wires possibly can. However, out in the open and in the suburbs it sometimes happens that just as good results are obtained with a light plug "antenna" as with an outdoor aerial. There is only one sure way of determining whether or not this device will give the desired results and that is by giving it a thorough trial. (3) The filament voltage of a neutrodyne receiver is not critical and vernier rheostats are, therefore, unnecessary with this type of circuit. Regeneration is not present in a neutrodyne and for this reason vernier adjustment of the tuning dials is not required.

Q. Will "S" tubes work with a 50, 100 or 250 watt transmitter? S. G.

A. An "S" tube will work with a 50-watt set, but it is doubtful whether or not they would stand up under the strain imposed by the larger sets. It would be advisable to use a motor generator or some means of chemical rectification.

Q. What types of tubes may be used in a power amplifier? H. M. R.

A. Any of the following types of tubes will work in a power amplifier: 201-A, 301-A, 202, 302, 216-A and the DV-2.

Q. Is it customary for tubes to last only about three or four months? That has been my experience. I had to replace all the tubes in my receiver quite recently. I make a practice of burning the filaments as low as good volume will permit but it seems to me that they should last longer than four months. M. O'B.

A. The average life of a tube is 1000 hours but, of course, there are exceptions. In both cases the life is longer, but in others it is shorter than 1000 hours. It is possible that you may have had tubes which were unusually short-lived.

Q. How do crystals compare with a 201--A tube as a detector? I have been told that a fixed crystal will give good results with three stages of radio frequency and that an adjustable crystal should be used with one or two stages. Which is correct? E. B.

A. A crystal detector will give the best results when three stages of radio frequency amplification are employed. There is practically no difference in the results obtained with a 'fixed" and an adjustable crystal detector where the minerals in each case are equally sensitive. It is largely a matter of personal opinion. The writer greatly prefers a detector which is adjustable. A crystal detector in combination with radio frequency amplification is desirable because it is more quiet in operation than a tube detector. Otherwise, there is no comparison between a tube and crystal. The tube is by far the more sensitive.

SPORT ANNOUNCING NOT AN EASY JOB

Plans are already being laid for the broadcasting of the world's baseball series. Preliminary reports have indicated that the audience of fans that will "attend" the contests by radio will be greater by many millions this year than ever before, and broadcasters are determined to make a corresponding advance in the quality of their service.

Inquiries made by the Radio Apparatus Section of the A. M. E. S. (Associated Manufacturers of Electrical Supplies) show that only "star reporters of the air" will be chosen to describe the banner sporting event of the year. "Exceptional qualifications and a highly specialized technique, experience has shown, are required for the reporting of baseball games, and capable studio announcers have frequently found themselves at a loss when confronted with the problems of the diamond.

"Few people realize the extent to which practice has developed the technique of describing a world's series baseball game to the radio audience," says one air reporter of national reputation. "The announcer must report the moves in the game the instant they occur, whereas the newspaper man writes his description after the play is completed.

"The crowd in the stands is constantly competing with the radio reporter for the microphone, which means that if, in his anxiety to give a full description of everything that goes on, his report is not completed simultaneously with the completion of the play, the spectators will break in with cheers or booing. The radio audience, ignorant as yet as to whether a hit has been made or a man put out, will be confused by the clamor from the field. The effect is like applause in the wrong place at a theater or during a speech.

Discussing this same point, another popular air reporter says that the announcer, in his efforts to keep ahead of the crowd, develops a sort of sixth sense. He judges from the characteristic movements of the umpire whether a given pitch will be called a ball or a strike and is able to put it into words. Sometimes he makes a mistake, and then he must correct himself with some jesting remark, usually at the expense of the umpire.

"The method of the air reporter is to tell every move in the game in brief, staccato phrases," continued the announcer. "The expert newspaper writer endeavors in his description to paint a picture of a play; the radio man by giving the moves in consecutive order leaves the picture to the imagination of his audience.

"But these are the mere mechanics of radio reporting. There is art as well as skill in it. The crowd at the field supplies the dramatic background for the spoken description of the plays. There are times when the yells from the spectators will add the vital 'punch' to the words of the announcer; at other times they may be meaningless or confusing. When to give the crowd the microphone and when to keep it out are things which every good reporter knows instinctively.

"Most important, however, is the ability of the announcer to imagine himself one of the radio listeners and to describe the game as the far-off baseball fan would see it were he at the field."

TURNERS BUY CAMP SITE ON BOURBOISE

A site, comprising 33 acres, on the banks of the Bourboise River, four and a half miles west of Union, Mo., has been purchased for the proposed summer camp of the St. Louis Turners. Last week the ground was transferred by the Bank of Union to the executive board of the St. Louis district of the American Turnerbund, and a campaign is now under way for $15,000 to put the camp in order for occupancy in the spring of 1925. Improvement work is expected to begin tomorrow.

The site includes a section of the river, known locally as the "old swimming hole," which is said to have been a popular resort of German immigrants in the region as early as 1843. This swimming hole, it is related, proved a decisive factor in the selection of the spot, after the committee had been for four years in quest of a desirable site. It is located in a bend of the river, where a bathing beach will be maintained.

On the hills 180 feet above and overlooking the river, an eight-room farm house will be converted into an administration building, and a large granary into a gymnasium and sleeping quarters. Adjoining these, a dance pavilion will be erected. Grounds for baseball, tennis, volley ball, basket ball and other sports will be skirted by cottages to be rented to visitors. Until the cottages can be erected, tents are to be provided upon elevated flooring. Plans for the improvements provide for preservation of the woodlands.

The site is accessible from St. Louis by the Manchester road and the Rock Island Railroad, which has agreed to build a siding a mile from the location, to provide for excursion trains.

CONCESSIONS ON LANGUAGE

Poles Recognize Minority Tongues in Court and Schools.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

WARSAW, Aug. 20.—Poland has adopted a measure calculated to appease the language aspirations of the people on its Eastern borders. Polish is to be the official tongue, but the languages of the Ukranians in the Southeast, the White Ruthenians in the North, and the Lithuanians in two districts are given definite recognition in court and in Government offices.

If the parents of 40 children in a school want the youngsters taught in an admitted language, it shall be done, with Polish as an additional language if 25 parents request it. In the high schools tuition will be in two languages, Polish and the local tongue. Thus have the minorities been recognized. The measure is regarded as most liberal, and it probably will be followed by others along the same lines.

Col. Hughes' Fine Kentucky Estate Is Left to "Aunt Ellen" Davis

Negress, Her Son, and a Negro Stableman Inherit Bulk of the Horseman's $500,000 Property

His White Heirs and His Wealthy Neighbors Are Offended by What They Consider an Insult—Two Nearest Relatives Have Brought Suit to Break the Will—Case Has Aroused Much Bitterness in Aristocratic Sections of Lexington—Unusual Life Story of a Kentucky Sportsman Who Preferred the Company of Horses and Negroes to That of Most White Folks.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 3.

THEY are saying around Lexington that old Colonel Hughes was no gentleman after all. The Colonel's lack of gentility is inferred by his neighbors from the will he left when he died a short while back; perhaps a harsh way to judge a man, but then this will is so very conclusive. It is not a gentlemanly testament under the Kentucky code. It outrages those decencies which are tradition in the South. It flings contempt in the faces of friends and enemies alike.

The Colonel left his half-million dollar estate to three negroes, cutting off his relatives with paltry sums.

No one expected quite that from Col. John T. Hughes, although while he lived there were those who did not find in him the nicer virtues which stamp a Kentuckian.

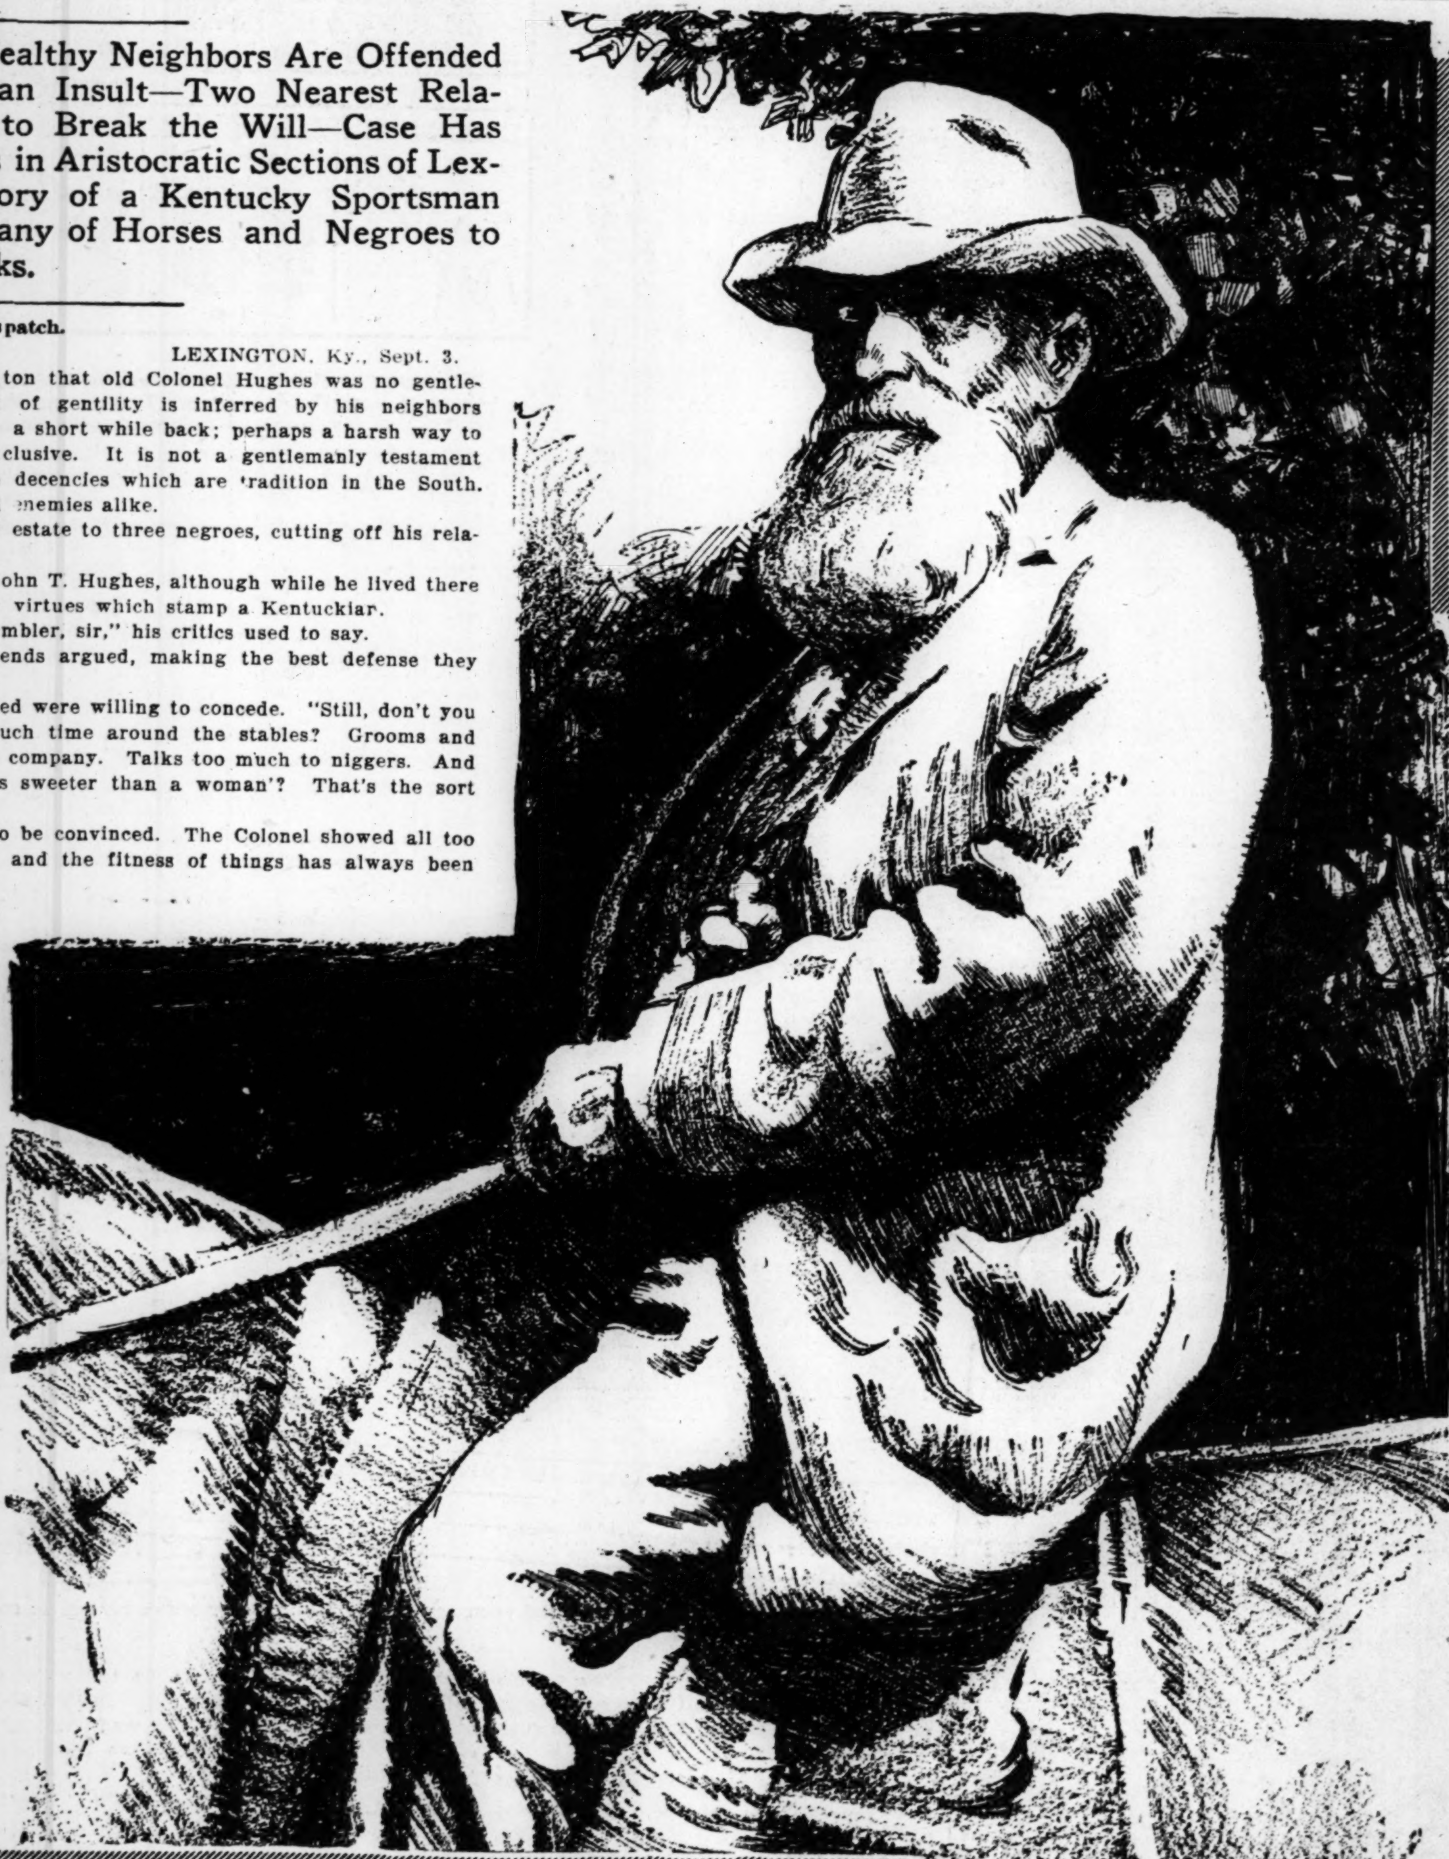
"But, dammit, he's a horseman," his friends argued, making the best defense they could.

"A horseman, yes," they who disapproved were willing to concede. "Still, don't you think he is too—too horsey? Spends too much time around the stables? Grooms and curries his nags and all that. Prefers their company. Talks too much to niggers. And didn't he say once, I think a blooded filly is sweeter than a woman'? That's the sort he is."

Now, reading his will, everyone seems to be convinced. The Colonel showed all too plainly his disregard of the fitness of things, and the fitness of things has always been one of the cares of gentlemen.



COL. JOHN T. HUGHES OF ELKTON.

The Colonel's neighbors have none but the kindliest feelings for 65-year-old Aunt Ellen Davis, who served him faithfully many years. But they do not want to see her installed as mistress of Elkton, the fine Hughes estate on the Maysville Pike. Yet, if its master's will is upheld in court, Aunt Ellen and her progeny will own Elkton, with the fine Georgian-Colonial home, the stables and stock, the 275 rolling acres. The Colonel left his home place outright to Aunt Ellen. Left her his trophies and his antique furniture, his family portraits and rare heirlooms, all that surrounded him during his 38 years in Kentucky.

Now those who have estates on either side of Elkton bear no ill will toward Alex Rankin, described by the Colonel in his last testament as "the old faithful colored man who has been in my employ for 40 years." But they do not think it fitting that Alex should inherit the 100-acre tract on the Haley, Clintonville and Lexington pikes to hold for the rest of his life.

Should the Colonel's will stand before the contest suit brought promptly by his white heirs, Aunt Ellen and Alex will be landed folk and neighbors to the Green Hills mansion of James B. Haggin, the handsome estate of the Philadelphia Wideners; the farm of Pennsylvania Jeffords, August Belmont's farm; Samuel Riddle's place; the Lexington Country Club and John E. Madden's Hamburg place. Such incongruities would be resented in the North, and this is Kentucky!

But Col. Hughes did not stop there in his affronts to the people of Lexington. He bequeathed 160 acres on a road near his home place to Robert Henry Hughes, described in the will as "the son of Ellen Davis." Whether by this phrase Col. Hughes acknowledged paternity of Robert will be tested in court. Public opinion has already reached a conclusion.

The Colonel with one of his fast harness horses. He detested automobiles with the hatred of the old-time horseman, and to the last depended on his trotters and saddlers to take him about the countryside. The Colonel owned Rex McDonald and many other famous horses.

One hundred and sixty acres of as good land as there is in the Bluegrass country to Aunt Ellen's boy, while but $10,000 to Robert McCreary of Chicago, son of the late Gov. James B. McCreary of Kentucky. Two hundred and seventy-five acres of $1000 an acre land to Aunt Ellen and $250 to John Bayless, one of the Colonel's two living first cousins, his nearest relatives. One hundred acres to Alex Rankin and nothing to Mrs. Ella Fennell, his other first cousin.

Bayless and Mrs. Fennell brought the suit to break the will alleging that "this document is not the last will and testament of John T. Hughes." If another document is in existence they have not produced it, nor will they make public their plan of attack. Elements of undue influence and insanity may be introduced in later anticipated actions and the paternity of Robert Henry Hughes would then be an issue. Counsel for Aunt Ellen would probably take the position that the Colonel had been within his rights in providing for his alleged son, and his alleged mistress.

How the White Folks Fare

The other bequests to white persons were small. Col. Hughes—he had some claim to the title, by the way, having fought under Morgan in the Civil War—left $3000 to Gov. McCreary's daughter, Mrs. Gatewood Gay of Lexington, $500 to James D. Clarkson of Kirkwood, Mo., an official of the old St. Louis Fair Association, before whom the Colonel had shown horses; $1000 to Hugh Kenney of Missouri and $2000 to Newton Arnold, a tobacco tenant. The Colonel gave $2000 each to two Lexington churches and a small bequest to an orphans' home here

The chief criticism of the master of Elkton seems to be that he did not order his last affairs as a gentleman should. Bequests to negro retainers of Southern families are not infrequent, but they usually have been modest competences at best. In the past, Southern gentlemen have had their favorites of color, but it is not of record that they ever sought to exalt them to the state of chief beneficiaries.

Well, the old Colonel has passed from Elkton. He fell and broke his hip and caught pneumonia last March and that finished him. Alex had protested every time he came to the stables. "Cunnell John, yo'd better leave off ridin' them ho'ses an' take keer o' yo'self." And each time the Colonel had said, "Go along, you black rascal. I'm as good a man as I ever was." And when he went to the house Aunt Ellen would caution him, "Lawsy, cayn't yo' be peaceful like and res'?" But the Colonel only grunted and buttered another beaten biscuit. That day they carried him in to die, who was there to care? Only Aunt Ellen bustling about to help the doctor. Only Alex, standing with scared eyes in the doorway of the Colonel's bedroom.

His Beautiful Estate

The house with its pillared portico and old-fashioned blinds that are brushed by the bows of honeyshucks and lindens is desolate. It never had the right care, anyway, that house. Colonel Hughes was a bachelor all his days and not a home man. So long as Aunt Ellen kept his trophies polished and his ribbons dusted in the big room given over to relics of the horse show ring and track he was satisfied. The guest rooms stood shut up and musty, for he seldom entertained. The library and parlor had an un-lived-in look—a look of furniture seldom moved and books infrequently handled. Matting and rugs and carpets faded with age and sweeping, never under passing feet.

To the master of Elkton in his later years the house must have been dear, but not with romantic memories. Perhaps in this room and on that table he had won two thousand dollars at poker. In that chair by the fireplace he had been wont to sip toddies with a friend or so. Only the trophy room could delight him with the warmth of his reminiscences. There stood the cup that Red MacDonald, son of the renowned Rex, whom he also owned, had won at the St. Louis fair. There stood the bowl won when his famous saddler, Lou Chief, swept the saddle stakes at Louisville. In that corner of the case rested a pitcher taken by his harness horses at Memphis. Blue ribbons galore. Red ribbons. Each with a memory of white-railed ring, a smooth track, gay sunshine and many flags; the dull clump of hoofs on tan bark and dirt; and the Colonel in saddle or trotters' bike.

A Sportsman Was the Colonel

The romantic scenes which enshrined many a Southern homestead never came to life at Elkton. At the corner of the porch where the moonvine climbs toward second-story windows the Colonel might have kissed a sweetheart when he was young. Music might have died in shadowed corners of the yard, there to live again when the Colonel walked when his head was gray, but he had little use for music. Little use for women and their ways, for children and their ways. He was a sportsman, sir, a horseman especially.

One must go to the stables at Elkton to find its master's loves. Those sleek saddlers and roadsters he kept for show and for sale. The prancing, squealing stallions he managed so well with iron grip on halter strap and snaffle-bit. The Colonel's horses from the first were known where men raised good horses and were famous in Kentucky, a State where only the finest achieve distinction. At the St. Louis Fair where the Colonel showed each year for two decades or so he was the greatest winner of them all. His friend, James Clarkson, who was an official at that fair, frequently assured him that he won more purses than any other exhibitor.

He was a figure in Kentucky and surrounding States. For years he showed at all the big fairs. He wore a Van Dyke beard, Kentucky model, not always well trimmed. He was tall and lean and cold-eyed, as some men become who deal too long with horses and humans. In the show ring none was more sportsmanlike, but none worked harder to win. He was not above little tricks of the game, either.

His friend, Clarkson, tells of an incident at St. Louis when the Colonel was showing a horse of wonderful conformation and performance, but a bit wind-broken. After the horses in the ring had been put through their paces they were told to line up before the judges. The Colonel, however, held back, calling a stableman to his side. A judge inquired as to the trouble and Hughes said, "My check rein broke." The real purpose of the halt was to permit his horse to "blow" (rest) a little before taking up to be studied at close range by the judges.

Before the automobile came in Hughes made a great deal of money from his stock farm. This he invested in land about Lexington and laid the foundation of his wealth. All was in keeping with the Kentucky Standard of what a country gentleman might do. He was, however, criticised a bit for making so much money from his horses and neglecting the society of humans to be with them. He overdid it, folks thought.

As the years passed this grew on him. There were rumors, too, that the Colonel, in his younger days, had liked the company of pretty negro girls, but he was not ostracized on this account. It was a rumor. In Lexington it was gossiped that Ellen Davis was the Colonel's favorite, and that she had borne him a son. Yet to this day no one knows much about the mysterious "Robert Henry Hughes." He is said to be studying at a European university.

An Affair of Doubtful Cast

No one condemned the Colonel for the suspected truth of his alliance. He was looked upon as an entirely eligible bachelor and many young women set their caps for him. Even when he made the statement one day about preferring a blooded filly, that was set down as a trifling whimsicality.

Gradually it developed, though, that John T. Hughes was a "character." He retired to his farm, and although he still made the rounds of the fairs and was often called to distant parts to act as a judge of saddle horses, he seldom mingled with or was civil to his neighbors. The story is told of a clash he had with James B. Haggin who had bought the huge Elmendorf estate and wanted the Hughes property to round out his domain.

"What will you take?" Haggin asked him.

"Nothing, suh. I do not ca'ah to sell," the Colonel replied.

They met several times and Haggin tried to argue. Unruffled, the Colonel would walk away.

"Well, I'll wait and buy your place when you are dead," shouted Haggin, the last time.

"Yo' will have to live a long time, suh," the Colonel replied, "I would never go back on my place by dyin' early, suh."

He outlived Haggin ten years.

When a man becomes a recluse, as John T. Hughes did, the public's impressions of him are vague and fragmentary. Colonel Hughes is remembered by the last generation in Lexington as an old man who occasionally drove to town in a runabout with a fast horse between the shafts. He was outspoken in his hatred of automobiles, but aside from this subject he never bothered to offer a lengthy expression of views. A curt nod to acquaintances, a handshake for his few friends, an invitation to still fewer intimates and indifference toward the world in general. That was Colonel Hughes.

His life at Elkton in later years was lonely. Among his last visitors were the Clarksons from St. Louis.

"Sorry I'm out of lickah, suh," he apologized to Clarkson. "I had a supply, but it

The prints of Harry Trafole taken in Los Angeles recently, which, when compared with those of Resinsky proved that Trafole and Resinsky were the same.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 3.

JOHN RESINSKY is a smart guy. Sharp, Shrewd. Wise. See? There wasn't a jail around Memphis strong enough to hold him. When he wasn't busy escaping he was using his head to fix up that slick yarn he told the jury. He croaked Mae Goodwin because she had sold his sister to the white slavers, he told them. And they fell for the story after John squeezed a few tears from his lamps. Let him off with 20 years instead of giving him the rope.

After the sentence Resinsky crashed out of the county jail with three negroes and made a clean getaway. The bulls weren't smart enough to handle him, that's all. John drifted south of Old Mexico and for seven years nobody at headquarters learned a thing about him. They say around the tenderloin that John came back for a visit several times, but it may have been just his boasting. Anyway, John was bright enough to steer clear of the flat-foots and the dicks.

The trouble with Resinsky is that he can't keep his hands off other people's diamonds. He was a great iceman in his day, was John, and the rocks seem to fascinate him. They drew him back to the old racket, second-story work, two weeks ago. He pulled a job out in Los Angeles and a stool pigeon squealed. Neither the pigeon nor the police knew that John was John. The pigeon knew him as Harry Trafole. So did all the mob along the West Coast.

Even the slickest burglar in the business is bound to get pinched if another crook knows he pulled a certain job and tells the police. Which is what happened to John, though the police said "Clever detective work enabled Los Angeles officers to run Trafole to earth." They caught John down at San Pedro and, as they always do, asked him: "Where were you on the night of that Los Angeles job?" Of course, John had his alibi ready, but it didn't do any good. They brought him back to Los Angeles, charged with burglary, and held him on $3000 bond.

Now, how did they find out that Harry Trafole was John Resinsky, wanted in Memphis for a 20-year stretch for murder?

It wasn't exactly John's fault. He is a slick one, remember, and he did everything he could to change his description. When he escaped at Memphis he had a long scar on the right side of his cheek. Used to say he got it one night when he dived through a window of a swell place in Milwaukee, but his friends figured some buckaroo had knifed him. Anyway, that scar was a dead give-away. He knew his description and pictures would be sent all over the country. If he meant to hide out he'd have to change that scar. So John, darn his slick hide, went to a beauty specialist and said: "I want my face lifted."

Sure enough, the beauty specialist lifted John's face and covered the scar so it could hardly be noticed 10 feet away. But getting rid of that scar wasn't John's only precaution. The thumb of Resinsky's left hand was missing. That would have been a give-away, too. So Resinsky, the sharp old coot, made a thumb out of wood and glued it on the stub. Unless you examined closely, you would never guess that it wasn't flesh and blood.

So when Resinsky was arrested as Harry Trafole he stood an even chance to remain Harry Trafole and get off with five years or so at worst. If it hadn't been for two things he'd have made it.

The Tell-tale Finger Prints

The two things that beat Resinsky were:

As the bulls always do when they've caught a strange crook, the Los Angeles men looked over the pictures of thousands of criminals in the Bertillon room to see if Resinsky tallied up. They discovered that except for the scar he looked like John Resinsky, wanted in Memphis.

Then they took his fingerprints. The only way to dodge fingerprint identification is to tear the skin off each finger and slash it as it grows back so as to cover up the lines with scar tissue. But Resinsky hadn't attempted this. He had needed his hands to get him food. The Los Angeles police sent Harry Trafole's fingerprints to Memphis and soon a wire came back: "Trafole is Resinsky. Hold him."

When they showed him the Memphis telegram Resinsky didn't turn a hair. He said: "Sure, I'm Resinsky. Did it take you boobs all that time to find out?" And a dick snapped back: "You won't be so cocky when you've done a twenty spot in Nashville." And Resinsky said: "I ain't there yet, am I?" That's the way crooks and the bulls carry on, each thinking they're pretty wise.

These Memphis detectives who are on the way to the coast for their man will watch Resinsky. He's beaten them three times before, not to speak of the many jobs he pulled successfully before he got mixed up with Mae Goodwin.

Resinsky is one of these smart Poles, and when a Polack gets smart he's a wiz. Take Paderewski, for instance. Well, Resinsky started out in this country to live by using his head and turned to diamond thieving. He worked the Northern states for 10 years or so until a pal snitched on him and he did a five spot for robbery in the Wisconsin State Penitentiary. He cached his loot while he was doing time and when they let him out Resinsky had $18,000 worth of sparklers waiting for him in a coffee pot somewheres.

The Milwaukee and Chicago detective bureaus were on to John when he left the pen in 1916 and so he decided to go south. He needed a place to rest up in and someone to sell his diamonds for him. By chance he hit upon Memphis as the next town to be worked.

Mae Goodwin, "Queen of the Mob"

The queen of the mob in Memphis was Mae Goodwin. She was as crooked as she was beautiful, which made her some crook. She specialized in the badger game and in helping husbands get free from their wives. She was a divorce co-respondent by profession, see? No, there wasn't much good in Mae. As side diversions she ran several tough joints and acted as a fence for the boys—sold their stolen goods.

When Resinksy hit town he let it get around that he needed a high-class fence to put some diamonds back in circulation for him. The first crook he piped whispered: "Go and see Mae Goodwin." Resinsky saw Mae Goodwin and fell for her hard. So hard that he lost his judgment. He was so nutty about her that he let her take all the diamonds without security, merely on her word to treat him right.

MAE GOODWIN,
Queen of the Memphis underworld for whose murder in 1916 Resinsky was sentenced to 20 years in the penitentiary. He escaped the gallows by a sensational story on the witness stand in which he averred he killed the Goodwin woman because she had lured his sister to ruin, a story later denied.

The Memphis dicks vow to this day that she double-crossed him and that is why he killed her. They say that on the early morning of Oct. 9, 1916, Resinsky went to her apartment and wanted to know: "Where's my money?"

"I haven't got either your money or your diamonds," she told him, cool as a cucumber.

They Shoot It Out

Then he knew that she had gyped him. So he started to pull his gat and she reached for a rod in a table drawer. Before she could aim her gun he had shot her three times. She shot back, but her eyes were blurring. He had croaked her.

Resinksy at Los Angeles denies this version of the murder. He says, now, that she had thrown him down for another man, and he was jealous.

Resinsky made a quick exit, but in running from the room he bumped into Maude Becker, the dead woman's maid. She recognized him in spite of the handkerchief over his face. As it turned out, now, John's friends think he should have croaked her, too. Wasn't any use in letting her live to peach to the police, the crooks around Memphis think. But, anyway, he didn't shoot her and she told the cops who had shot Mae.

Of course, the murder was all the blow in Memphis for awhile. Mae had been mixed up with so many prominent men that the newspapers sort of hoped the story would take a triangle or blackmail turn. But it didn't. It was just a low-life killing by a guy below the line.

For three weeks they hunted Resinsky. Then one night down in Columbus, Miss., they found him hiding in a church steeple and the Memphis dicks had to pay transportation for Maude Becker, the maid, to Mississippi to identify him.

Resinsky's finger prints taken in 1917 and sent out by the Memphis detective bureau as an aid in his apprehension after he escaped.

On the train going back Resinsky was using his head all the time. He was a wise Polack, all right. He waited until he and Al Hurst, the Memphis dick who was taking him back, were changing cars at Winona, Miss. Hurst let Resinsky eat without handcuffs and Resinsky took advantage. Snatching Hurst's sack of Bull Durham he threw a handful in the dick's face and lammed down the platform. Hurst was game, though. He drew his gun and shot with his eyes closed, and Resinsky stopped. Bystanders grabbed him. Hurst was so blinded for the moment he wouldn't have been able to handle his man.

Resinsky's Moving Story

At the trial the State's mouthpiece thought he had an open-and-shut case. He was going to present John with a hemp necktie. He had enough evidence, too.

"John'll beat the jam yet," Resinsky's friends below the dead line said.

The reporters said it was a dramatic trial. By this they meant it had everybody going—they were goofy with emotions. And why not? Wasn't Resinsky on the stand? The guy the Prosecuting Attorney meant to hang. Just think of him sitting up there, not knowing how long he'd have a neck, eh? Of course, it got them.

Then this wise egg, this smooth article, started talking to the jury. He was an educated guy and looked real intelligent. And what do you suppose was his talk? It sounded swell.

Poor Little Maisie!

"I lived in Poland, I and my little sister, Maisie, and my poor mother," he began. You could see the jurors straightening up. "My mother on her deathbed told me, 'Go to America with Maisie and make a home for her there. Look after her as I would had the good Lord let me stay.' So I took my little sister Maisie to America. We settled in Brooklyn and I got work as a mechanic. We lived in miserable quarters." And he shrugged apologetic like to let the jury know that he had high ideas and all that, see? Oh, he was a smart one. "Maisie blossomed into young womanhood, and I prayed to the good God to look after her. I slaved and scrimped to give her a good education. Then this procuress, Mae Goodwin, saw her on the street one day!"

That had them gasping for air. You could tell by their eyes that the jury had fallen for it. The courtroom was quiet as a church, everyone listening.

"Mae Goodwin, the arch fiend, lured Maisie from me!" Resinsky shouted. "She enticed her away with promises of pretty clothes. She was the agent of the national white slave ring."

After getting everybody worked up by describing the white slave traffic the witness pulled out his handkerchief. His voice sounded like he would break down and cry any minute. His pals in the audience took out handkerchiefs, too.

"Two years later," Resinsky said, "I met Maisie on the street in San Francisco. I saw it was too late. The traffic had her body and soul. She whimpered and cried and slunk away and I swore by my sainted mother that I would have revenge. I came to Memphis and went to see the Goodwin woman. God help me, my anger got the best of me. I shot her. I admit it. But heaven will justify me. My mother up there is smiling today as she sees me here."

He Gets Off With Twenty Years

It went over big. The jury was out [illegible] hours. John would have been acquitted as a public benefactor, except that he had served time and had stolen so many diamonds. They gave him 20 years by using the second-degree murder charge.

But Resinsky didn't mean to serve even that much. They took him to a county hoosegow to wait for formal sentence before he was put in the big house at Nashville. His friends smuggled tools in to him and he picked the lock of the strongest cell in the jail. Then he and three others cut the bars from a window and slid down a water pipe.

Of course, these last seven years haven't been a cinch for John. When a guy is hiding out he keeps looking over his shoulder. Folks walking behind him make him nervous. He can't talk to anybody confidential like for fear of a snitch, and he's always sort of afraid he'll give himself away. Some guys go nuts after a year or so and walk in. But Resinsky stuck it out.

At Los Angeles he said he had been in Old Mexico most of the time. Once a man gets across the border he can keep pretty well under cover if he doesn't try to fly too high. Resinsky drifted from Juarez to Tia Juana and then across to Vera Cruz. Lived there two years, he told the dicks. But John didn't go into details, much. He was afraid they'd back-trail and lay some more jobs on him.

Maybe the lonesomeness drove him back to the United States. Maybe it was his love of the sparklers that sent him at that Los Angeles burglary for which he was pinched. Maybe he thought because he was such a smart guy he could outslick the police again. It doesn't matter. He's in for 20 years at Nashville now—maybe.

went tol'ably fast. I'm expectin' mo' in a few days, if you would ca'ah to stay."

He made them welcome to his home and Aunt Ellen bustled forth to greet Mrs. Clarkson.

"Heah is yo' all's room, honey," she said "The Cunnell likes powahfully well to have his frien's visit him. Mighty lonesome heah fo' the Cunnel. Yas suh."

To these friends he never mentioned his relatives. Indeed, he gave the impression that he was alone in the world. Of the negroes on the place he spoke affectionately, as if they were the only creatures besides his horses about Lexington that he esteemed.

"Ellen is a good cook, suh, a mighty good cook," was one of his few comments. And, "My man Alex is a damned good niggah, suh. Helps me with my ho'ses. Used to go to the fa'ahs with me, suh."

"When we got ready to leave," Clarkson is quoted as saying in a talk with a newspaperman at St. Louis," The Colonel rode down to open the gate for us. Then he turned and galloped back to the house without telling us goodbye. We felt that he believed it was the last time he would see us and was afraid of showing emotion." That was two years ago.

Probably one evening or one day the Colonel took stock of his life. He was old. He had in a way outlived his age. Probably he felt that Ellen and Alex and her boy, Robert Henry Hughes" were the only living persons to whom he was indebted. The woman had worked most of her life for him. Alex had, too. Was it not the best justice that his possessions should go to them? Evidently the Colonel thought so. He said so in his will.

The Threat to Cut Off All Contestants

But he was man of the world enough to know that his relatives would not agree with him. "If any person mentioned contests my will, or objects to the probate thereof, then any and all property devised to said person or persons shall lapse and pass under the residuary part of my will," he wrote.

The life of a Kentucky sportsman came to an end. The master of Elkton passed. Who were there to mourn him? Only an old negress and an old negro and perhaps "Robert Henry Hughes." Who was there to inherit Elkton? None but the three who had spent their lives with him there. Should it go to strangers or to charity or to these faithful darkies?

Those who sought to question Ellen Davis and Alex Rankin found that their master's taciturnity had sealed their lips. Too bewildered and frightened to discuss their legacies they are living with relatives in Lexington until the court decides the fate of Elkton.

As for "Robert Henry Hughes," the [illegible] principal is still an enigma, and [illegible] enigmas do not give interviews.

He Ranks in Grade With Sheridan, Grant and Sherman on His Retirement This Week at Age 64—A Review of His Battles on Many Fields—Good Luck and Bad Have Played Prominent Parts in His Amazing Career.

JOHN J. PERSHING, the first full General of the United States Army since Sheridan and commander of 5,000,000 American soldiers in the world war, retires this week from active service, having reached the age of 64, which is the limit of tenure under army regulations. His sixty-fourth birthday is Sept. 13.

By this time the General will have completed his last tour of inspection of regular army garrisons over the country; will have received his last salute as General commanding, reviewed his last parade as the head of the general staff. When he passes from the active list there will be no full General of the armies, a rank bestowed by act of Congress, the highest grade by ordinary promotion being that of Lieutenant-General. Maj. General Hines will succeed Pershing as Chief of Staff. Besides Gen. Pershing only three men have been ranked as General of the armies. They were Sheridan, Sherman and Grant. George Washington led the Continental Army as a General but when the regular United States Army was organized he became Lieutenant-General.

No American soldier before him ever was swept to as great power as John J. Pershing. Under his leadership was organized the largest army ever assembled by the United States and under him America fought in the great war. With Foch and Haig he made up the triumvirate of the Allied War Council which directed 12,000,000 soldiers in the final battles of the war. Power and glory enough for one lifetime, surely.

So far and so high did circumstance, opportunity and his own talents lead the Missouri boy who once scuffled on the playgrounds of Laclede in Linn County. The lad became the school teacher, the school teacher turned cadet, the cadet became the Lieutenant, the Lieutenant the Captain, the Captain the General.

Has Beginning in Laclede, Mo.

No one dreamed of greatness for Jack Pershing, son of a Laclede section foreman and hotelkeeper. When it was announced that President Wilson had selected John J. Pershing to lead the American Expeditionary Forces in France, immediately newspaper correspondents made a dash for Laclede. They saw Aunt Louisa Warren and Aunt Susan Hewitt, white, and Uncle Jordon Parks, colored, and others of those-who-knew-him-when. How did the early sparks of genius fall? Who first observed in his eyes the high fires of leadership? What noble traits in his poor but honest parents, transmitted to their son predestined him to sit with the Allied War Council?

The townfolk of Laclede could not say. Each of those interviewed had a little story to tell. One was about Pershing's birth in a humble house too far away for a doctor to reach in time. Another story related how he thrashed this bully or that at school. Another how he went to spelling matches but was always spelled down. Another how he played with negro children and taught Jordon Parks to read and write. Another about his teaching the negro school and being discharged because the children's parents thought him incompetent.

Even the first great step in his career had no auguries of a brilliant future, so far as the people of Laclede were able to discover. He saw a Congressman's advertisement informing the boys of his district that competitive examinations for an appointment to West Point would be held at a certain time and place. John Pershing went along with the other youths and the judges narrowed the contest down to him and a lad named Higginbotham. It was so even that the judges made their decision on Pershing's parsing of the sentence "I love to run." They held that the phrase "to run" was the object of the verb rather than an infinitive modifier.

The Years at West Point

So at the age of 24 Cadet Pershing was launched on his career. Once again interviewers who sought to find schoolmates who recognized him for the future General of the armies at that early stage were disappointed. Army officers who had been at West Point while he was there recalled how hard Jack Pershing had to study to pass in French, and how very ordinary he was in chemistry. He stood 30 in a class of 77. Yet his gift for military leadership was conceded. He had the physique and the self-control that makes the ideal officer. He was military at a school where the ramrod back and square chin are prime desideratums. Thus, though he was not foremost in academics on the parade ground he shone and was senior cadet captain in first class year.

In 1886 Pershing graduated from West Point and was commissioned Second-Lieutenant. His first post was at Fort Bayard in Grant County, New Mexico. In this year General Nelson A. Miles led an expedition against Geronimo and Natchez, the Apache chiefs, whose marauding bands had terrorized the settlers of New Mexico and southern Arizona. The young officer arrived too late, however, to take part in these campaigns. He was assigned to the famous Sixth Cavalry and saw service in the marches against the Sioux. With the Sixth he chased Chief Big Foot into the Bad Lands country of South Dakota and fought him at the battle of Wounded Knee. He later was stationed at various posts in this region.

After six years of Indian campaigning Pershing applied for a leave of absence and visited Lincoln, Neb., where his family had moved from Laclede. While he was home the chair of military science and tactics of the University of Nebraska became vacant and citizens of Lincoln petitioned the War Department to appoint Pershing. This was done and he was a professor for four years. In 1895 he was transferred to the Tenth Cavalry, crack negro regiment of the service. He did not stay with this command long before he was transferred as a First Lieutenant to duty at West Point. His duty it was to serve as tactical instructor.

When the Spanish-American War began he was ordered to join the Tenth Cavalry at Tampa, Fla., where the American Army was concentrated preparatory to an invasion of Cuba. Pershing went with the unmounted cavalry that was the first sent to the island and fought with the Tenth through the battles of San Juan Hill, El Caney and La Guasima. In the Cuban campaign he first made the acquaintance of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, then commanding his renowned Rough Riders. They met on a muddy Cuban road, the story goes, and Pershing and his men helped the Colonel pull a wagon from the mire. Years later at the White House, Captain Pershing was introduced to President Roosevelt. Capt. Pershing recalled, jocularly, many of the Colonel's words on the occasion of their first meeting.

Invalided home from Cuba because of sickness, Pershing rejoined the army as a Major of volunteers and served on the staff of General Miles in Washington. He held various bureaucratic posts in the War Department for a year and then applied for a transfer to the Philippines. He was commissioned a Major and, as Assistant Adjutant-General, sailed with troops for Manila. His administrative abilities, however, kept him out of field service. He was assigned to the district of Zamboanga, serving as Adjutant-General, engineer officer, signal officer, ordnance officer and Collector of Customs of Zamboanga. Here he joined the regular army once more as Captain and was transferred to the Fifteenth Cavalry.

Quells a Moro Rebellion.

In 1900 and 1901 the Moros rose against the American administration of the islands and Pershing was one of the officers chosen to lead expeditions against them. His bravery in the field was proved in these campaigns, which extended until 1903.

He served on the General Staff corps in the United States from 1903 until 1906, once being assigned as military attache at Tokio. He saw the Russo-Japanese War from the post of onlooker.

In 1906 President Roosevelt, taking note of the still young officer's brilliant record, jumped him 862 files to the rank of Brigadier-General. A year before Maj. Pershing had married Miss Frances Warren, daughter of United States Senator Francis H. Warren of Cheyenne, Wyo., head of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs. After his promotion to Brigadier-General, he was sent back to the Philippines as Governor of Moro Province. His first official act was to order the disarming of the Moros. They rebelled and he gathered an army of American troops and faithful Filipinos and marched against the rebels. In one short campaign he subdued all opposition and arrested the ring-leaders. The battle of Bagsag was the decisive conflict in these operations.

His Great Tragedy.

Followed years of administrative work in the Philippines and in army corps areas of the United States. It was in 1916 that the great tragedy of Gen. Pershing's life fell upon him. His wife and three little girls were burned to death when a fire destroyed their home in the Presidio, San Francisco's military post. His son, Warren, 5 years old, was the only survivor. Pershing was away at the time.

The same year Villa, the Mexican outlaw, raided an American border town and a punitive expedition was organized to capture him, consisting of 6000 troops. Gen. Frederick Funston, at that time commanding the Southern army area, sent for Pershing and put him in command of the expedition.

Although the expedition did not find Villa it provided many lessons for the general staff on the maneuvering of troops in the field. Its commander was complimented for his handling of the troops and in September, 1916, Pershing was promoted to be Major-General. A few months later Gen. Funston died and the War Department assigned the new Major-General to command of the Southern department.

General of the Armies.

Then came America's entrance into the World War in the spring of 1917. The question for the administration was, "who will we place in command of the army overseas?" The story goes that Secretary of War Newton Baker asked Senator Warren one day, "Does Jack speak French?" The Senator said, "I think so." Not long after Pershing was summoned from El Paso and informed that President Wilson wanted him to lead America's forces in France.

When Gen. Pershing and his staff went overseas, the nations knew nothing of it, owing to the secrecy of those war days. He landed in England and was received by the King. He crossed to France and was greeted with a tremendous ovation. A visit to the tomb of Lafayette followed, and the historic words credited to Pershing as he laid a wreath on the marble, "Lafayette, we are here!"

The deeds of Pershing and his army in France have been too fully and recently related to need recital here.

Shortly, Congress made Pershing "General of the Armies," the highest rank in the American army.

They decided l, however, in response to the demand for tracts in this locality, eligible for high-class country homes.

Covered With Oaks.

The tract has been under development for several years from plans by John Noyes, landscape architect of the Missouri Botanical Garden and under whose direction Shaw's Garden addition was laid out. It is almost entirely covered with a uniform growth of oak trees and has been laid out with winding driveways throughout. The center and the approach of the driveways are embellished with fountains and flower beds. A stone entrance of imposing and original design is a notable feature. Water, gas and electric mains have already been constructed in anticipation of the early upbuilding of the addition.

The layout comprises 69 estate sites with a minimum frontage of 100 feet and with depths ranging from 250 to 300 feet. No building costing less than $15,000 can be erected in the tract under the restrictions. Purchase of the sites is restricted to invitation and approval, thus insuring exclusiveness.

Ten of the sites have already been sold, while negotiations pending presage early absorption of the tract. Two of the 10 original purchasers have retained their estates, A. G. Lueking and George Aurin, with plans for handsome homes.

Hawke is known as promoter and organizer of North Hills Country Club, one of the most ambitious undertakings of its kind, and Comfort as developer of Clermont, Exermont and other high-class private estates. They have opened an office in room 212 City Club Building, and will market the "estates" in conjunction with the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, Albert T. Terry & Co. and the Watts Realty Co.

Adjoins Country Club.

The Bogey Country Club adjoins Fair Oaks on the west and the tract is adjacent to John Burroughs school.

A. R. Schollmeyer, a former president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange was the purchaser of the 15 acres forming a part of the Forest Park University campus. Mrs. Anna Sneed Cairns, president of the University, was the granfor in the transaction. The price was not announced, but established a new record for this district, it was stated.

The purchase comprises 200 feet on Hampton avenue and the entire frontage on Clayton road and on Oakland avenue, extending back to Berthold avenue. It includes all the remainder of the campus with the exception of a plot 248 feet wide on Berthold by a depth of 400 feet extending to Oakland avenue, and on which is situated the university building.

The ground is to be subdivided into lots with a uniform frontage of 35 feet, which will be available alike under the restrictions for dwellings, flats and apartments, with business buildings permissible on the Clayton road frontage. Contracts have been let for surface and underground improvements of the most approved type.

The lots are now being sold from plats through A. R. Schollmeyer & Co. The University background is an attractive feature of the addition, which is to be known as Oakland Park No. 2, and which adjoins a section of the campus previously purchased by Schollmeyer.

Filling Station Site.

The University, which has been located on its present site since 1891, will not be affected by the subdivision plans, Mrs. Cairns explaining that the surplus ground had become too valuable to remain in its unproductive state.

While the advent of September was not otherwise signalized by any large transactions, prevailing opinion is that trading henceforth will be on an improved scale. There is already an aggressive demand for investment, as well as for business purposes.

The situation in the business district is decidedly favorable for a broad resumption of operations. While occupancy has been at a high stage in this area for several years with its corresponding increase in rentals, there has been no coincident advance in prices, agents declare.

This anamoly is ascribed to the fact that the demand has been on a restricted scale for sites for new buildings east of Grand boulevard, as well as that east of Eighteenth street, owing to prohibitive construction costs, as a result of which the upbuilding of these areas has been virtually deferred. The only buildings worthy of note erected east of Twelfth boulevard recently were Loew's State Theater at Eighth street and Washington avenue, and the City Club Building at Eleventh and Locust streets. Included also is the building for the Town Club, in course of construction on the south side of Locust street, between Eleventh street and Twelfth boulevard. The Arcade Building, promoted by Isaac T. Cook, is the only lofty building for offices to go up, but that project was launched before the war.

Building Revival Expected.

Paul Brown, president of Paul Brown & Co., brokers, and vice president of the Mercantile Trust Co., foresaw the present office building situation when he purchased the Chemical Building, the Title Guaranty Building and later the Odd Fellows Building, the latter being a recent acquisition.

A general revival of building together with speculative operations, east of Eighteenth street, is foreshadowed in the mammoth garage under construction on the Lionberger block at Eighteenth and Chestnut streets, vacant for a decade or more, and the 18-story Mayfair Hotel at Eighth and St. Charles streets, from plans by Preston Bradshaw, architect, to say nothing of the Western Union and Bell Telephone projects.

Demand for buildings for general business, especially for offices, now is such that construction in this field can hardly be delayed further. This also applies to hotel construction, but only with respect to downtown St. Louis.

Plans have been made for many large buildings for this territory during the last three or four years, but have not been carried through because of adverse economic conditions. Doubtless, not a few of these projects now will materialize in view of the urgency of the present demand and the plethora of capital available for all legitimate purposes.

SLIGHT REDUCTION IN MADISON COUNTY'S BUDGET

A slight reduction will be made in the appropriations to provide a portion of Madison County's expenses for the coming year when the Madison County Board of Supervisors holds its regular session at Edwardsville Wednesday, according to a statement yesterday by Auditor Louis Bright. The total amount estimated as needed for the ensuing year is $247,254 as compared with $257,875 for this year.

The Finance Committee of the Board of Supervisors has fixed 83 cents on the $100 valuation as the rate of taxation to raise the amount. Officials had hoped to reduce the rate to 75 cents but increased amounts needed for hard road bonds, maintenance of state aid routes and courthouse bonds resulted in the same rate as last year. It is lower, however, that the rates of several previous years.

Figures compiled by County Treasurer W. H. Martin show the county had a balance of $198,739, Sept. 1, and will receive approximately $60,000 more in delinquent taxes. An estimate was made that the expenses to next May will amount to $156,609 and the county funds will contain a balance of $102,130 for the coming year.

All of the special funds of the county have balances excepting that appropriated for hard roads, which will have a deficit but which will be overcome by increasing the rate slightly.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

MARY A.—We would advise you to have the silk garment cleaned by some reliable cleaner.

PAUL.—We cannot quote you a price on the coin without knowing the denomination.

MRS. C. F. D. — The 50-cent piece dated 1831 is worth from 50c to 55c.

ANXIOUS. — Inquire of the department stores regarding the wool in question.

A READER.—There is no premium on the half dollars dated 1833, 1860, 1874.

THANK YOU.—The word "Gubernatorial" pertains to a governor or the office of governor.

MISS WANT.—Write to the Girl Scouts Council, 3858 Westminster place, for the information regarding the Scout mistress.

W. J. E.—Inquire at the City Hall for full information regarding the city ordinance and the traffic laws.

F. K. D.—Walnut Park starts at Union avenue and runs from Bircher street to West Florissant out to Jennings Station, at which point West Walnut Manor begins.

INQUISITIVE. — Inquire at the Old Custom House, Third and Olive streets, for full information regarding the Civil Service examinations.

LORETTO.—Corn on the cob may be taken up in the fingers, although polite society favors the newer plan of dislodging the kernels on the prongs of the fork. Some hostesses provide short, keen knives with which to cut off the kernels, which are then conveyed to the mouth with a fork provided for the purpose.

L. K.—To paint on muslin requires a considerable skill. Select a smooth wall or partition, upon which to tack the muslin, drawing the fabric taut and firm. Then make a solution of starch and water, adding one-fourth starch to three-fourths water, and apply a glaze of this to the muslin. To guard against the striking in of the paint, and to hold it more securely in place and texture, mix the pigment with rubbing varnish to the consistency of a stiff paste, and then thin with turpentine to a free working condition. A double-thick camel's-hair brush, of a width to correspond properly with the size of the surface to be coated, is the best tool with which to coat fine muslin. A fitch-hair tool is probably best suited to the coarser muslin. Many painters, when about to letter on muslin wet the material with water; but this method is not so reliable as sizing with starch and water. Wetting canvas or duck operates very successfully in holding the paint or color in check, but these materials should not be confounded with muslin, which is of an entirely different texture.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

F. R.—It is not lawful for the person in question to carry a revolver, when off duty.

THANK YOU.—We do not understand your question. Please write again, stating all the facts.

SUBSCRIBER.—Consult a California lawyer regarding the foreclosures on the real estate there.

I. M. C.—Washington University has usually had such a course as you mention at night each winter.

ELY. — Such a divorce as you mention would be legal in Massachusetts.

FRIEND.—There are many such laws pertaining to rooming house owners and tenants. Look in the Index, under "Hotels, Inns and Boarding Houses," p. CCLXXXV.

EX-SOLDIER.—We understand that all the Missouri claims have now been paid, except about 12,000 which have been held up for further investigation.

A. B. C.—We know of no law prohibiting the return of the ticket in question, provided that no false representations are made.

H. W. E.—You must give the landlord one month's written notice, served not later than the day before the rent day, unless he is willing to accept shorter notice.

A Subscriber.—If the life insurance is made payable to your wife, then she will get it all on your death. It is not necessary to make a will if you have no other property.

A DAILY READER.—If you were dependent on your husband for support, at the time of his death, then you are entitled to the Federal bonus. Get an application blank at the Old Custom House, 3d & Olive streets, or write to the Veterans Bureau, Washington, D. C. for one.

WORRIED EDWARD—(1). Marriage licenses cannot be dated and recorded back. (2). Both parties have to go to the Recorder's office to get a marriage license. (3). The licenses can be used 90 days after they have been issued. (4). The law does not require witnesses. (5). There is no requirement that the names be published in the newspapers.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

BLOCK.—The answer to your first two questions is "No." Where there is irregularity it is difficult to determine. Physical signs by examination would need to be depended on.

MRS. H. Z. S.—The medicine in question will dilate the pupil of the eye. The doctor could not tell if the medicine had been used because there are other drugs which dilate the pupil also.

P. D.—Piles are caused by some disturbance of the portal circulation. Piles may affect the general health. Try the following: Mix thoroughly equal parts, by weight. Washed sulphur, cream of tartar and powdered sugar. Take a teaspoonful or two stirred up in a glass of water before breakfast.

PAIN.—The bowels should move daily and a daily movement should be secured. Regularity of evacuation is most important. Drugs may be necessary at first but should be supplanted by open air. Take four cholelith pills night and morning until 200 are taken. Send stamped addressed envelope requesting constipation diet list.

GYZ. — (1). An examination should be made for a cause for the condition including examination of the spine, blood pressure, and examination of the heart and kidneys. (2). Many catarrhs are curable. They are generally caused by some abnormal condition of the nose, or possibly the throat. (3). Any disturbance of the general health may cause excess perspiration.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our son, brother and grandson, Roland Ludewig, 4148A Connecticut street, who departed this life one year ago, Sept. 8, 1923.
The depth of sorrow we cannot tell,
At the loss of our child we loved so well,
And while he lies in peaceful sleep,
His memory we shall always keep.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, FATHER, SISTERS AND GRANDPA. (c)

In loving memory of my dear wife, Mrs. Sophia Berg, who departed this life one year ago, Sept. 10, 1923:
Days of sadness often come o'er us,
Tears of silence often flow;
Love shall always keep you near us
Though you left one year ago.
Never shall you be forgotten;
Never from our memory fade;
Our loving hearts will always linger
Around the grave where you are laid.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, FATHER, MOTHER AND THOSE WHO LOVED HER.

In loving memory of my dear husband and father, Frank W. Willman, who departed this life one year ago, Sept. 4, 1923.
Tho' you left us precious loved ones
And we hear your voice no more,
We still in our confiding
That we'll meet on yonder shore.
Watch and wait for us dear husband
And father.
For we know it can't be long,
Till we are again united
In the land of sun and song.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, CHILDREN, NEPHEW, DAUGHTER-IN-LAW AND GRANDCHILD. (c)

In loving memory of my devoted wife and our dear mother, Mrs. Amelia Kempen of 2306A South Fourth street, who departed this life five years ago, Sept. 5, 1919.
Days of sadness often come o'er us
Tears in silence often flow;
Love shall always keep you near us
Though you left five years ago.
Never shall you be forgotten;
Never from our memory fade;
Our loving hearts will always linger
Around the grave where you are laid.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, CHILDREN, GRANDCHILDREN, GREAT-GRANDCHILDREN and all those who loved her.

In loving remembrance of our dear daughter and sister, Anna May Gorman, who departed this life three years ago, Sept. 3, 1921:
In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly
In her silent, lonely grave.
Oh, so calmly did she leave us,
How we miss her smiling face;
She is gone but not forgotten
To the far off distant place,
For her soul to pure and holy,
God did not permit to stay,
She had won her crown in heaven.
Sadly missed by
SISTER AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

BALLOONS! (Drawn by Gisella Loeffler.)

Vignettes of City Life

By MANNEL HAHN.

FIRE! FIRE!

HE WAS almost too tired to wash. It was long after hours, but the job had to be finished, and it was nearly 10 o'clock when he finally dragged himself to the washroom and sluiced warm water over his grimy hands. The towel hung by the window, and as he pawed at it, his half-washed hands making grimy marks across it, he fancied he caught a flicker of light in the window pane across the alley. Was it a fire? He threw open the window and thrust his head out. As he did so a tiny blaze thrust out from the building four doors down, then disappeared, only to be followed by a burst of raw red flame at the top of the elevator shaft. Forgetting that he had been tired, he rushed downstairs and across the street to the alarm box. Once, twice, three times he pulled the signal.

In a big city, the thickly populated and business centers are protected by fire companies within a few blocks of each other. It seemed to him that he had scarcely taken his finger from the hook when the night calm was shattered by sirens and bells from every point of the compass. The flaming beacon on the roof had grown, and the first company to rush up to the plug realized that further help must be called. Then began a madhouse of efficiency. From north, south, east, west came fire apparatus of every description. At almost every corner was a whirling mass of hose reels, driving over lines of hose already laid, spinning a line of flabby rubber pipe behind them. At every plug a straining pumper stood, and as the lines were laid they were coupled quickly to the motor pumpers or steamers, and a moment later a flat hose was rounded to a solid cylinder of fabric, rubber and water.

Clouds of smoke began to issue from the windows of the building. It was 10 stories high, and from the cliff wall of its front windows began to fall, while behind the bank of smoke, fire devils danced.

He stood bewildered, shrunk into a doorway. Around him hoarse shouts were bandied. "Eighteen!" The shout passed from throat to throat till four blocks away No. 18 started to pump, and another stream of water spurted into the building. Unwieldy water towers rumbled in and took a position in front of him, reared themselves high into the air and began to spit huge streams against resisting panes. White-coated chiefs carrying lanterns swam out of the smoke clouds and into them again. Buildings on each side began to belch smoke, and a heavy plate-glass window was splintered. Two beautiful pianos tumbled into the street so that the streams of water might be poured at the base of the flame.

In the thick of it all No. 10, a motor pumper, was throbbing. Six streams radiating from its pump—four into the building, two to the water tower nearest him. Suddenly a jet of water sprang from the middle of the apparatus. Even above the jumble of the high-pitched shouts, roaring exhausts, the murmur of the crowd that stood back of the barrier hastily erected, and the crash of falling floors, he could hear the fervent, heart-felt oaths that the master mechanic exploded. No. 10 was hastily disconnected and limped to one side, while a younger, fresher pumper whirled into its place to take up the uncompleted task.

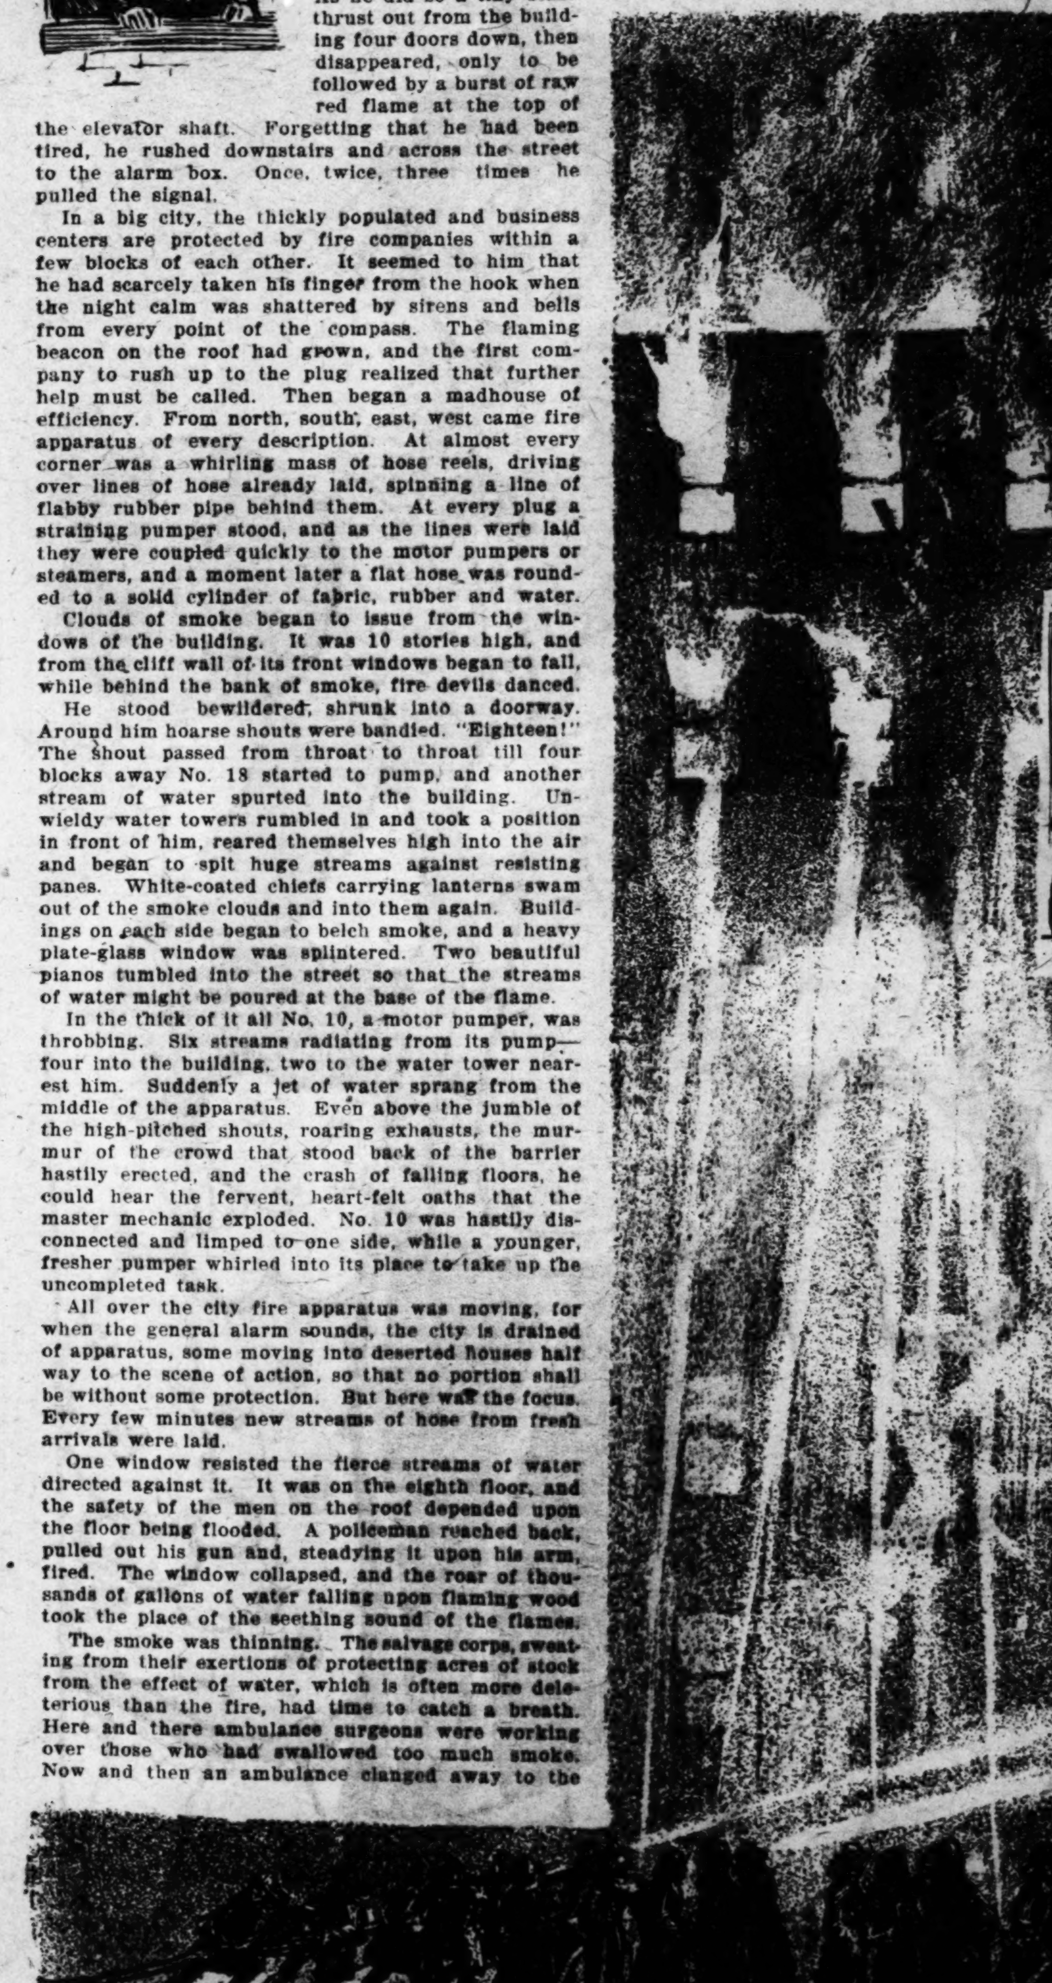
All over the city fire apparatus was moving, for when the general alarm sounds, the city is drained of apparatus, some moving into deserted houses half way to the scene of action, so that no portion shall be without some protection. But here was the focus. Every few minutes new streams of hose from fresh arrivals were laid.

One window resisted the fierce streams of water directed against it. It was on the eighth floor, and the safety of the men on the roof depended upon the floor being flooded. A policeman reached back, pulled out his gun and, steadying it upon his arm, fired. The window collapsed, and the roar of thousands of gallons of water falling upon flaming wood took the place of the seething sound of the flames.

The smoke was thinning. The salvage corps, sweating from their exertions of protecting acres of stock from the effect of water, which is often more deleterious than the fire, had time to catch a breath. Here and there ambulance surgeons were working over those who had swallowed too much smoke. Now and then an ambulance clanged away to the hospital with one or two who had been too zealous. The white coats of the chiefs, shining with water, plunged down into the building, reappeared and, followed by a group of men with a straining, snakelike hose, entered once more into the darkness. The red flames were dying. The heavy black smoke was turning to a whitish mixture of steam and fumes. The fire was under control.

He looked at his watch. It was 1:30.

The next morning, when he came to work, the corner was again passable. Two engines still sent a few streams into the wrecked buildings. The welter of broken glass and scrambled pianos was gone. And still the salvage corps men were swarming about the buildings, sweeping out masses of water, covering furniture and supplies with their tarpaulins, and saving what might be saved from "the biggest fire of the year."



A POLICEMAN'S LIFE.

"THERE'S been a murder at 1515 [illegible] I can't make out if it's single [illegible] Get out there at once," the [illegible] said.

"Where's the place, Sergeant?"

"I dunno, sorr; them women don't [illegible]"

The number, 1515, proved to be a [illegible] hovel, the first floor being remodeled [illegible] a rats' nest of plaster, lathing and less [illegible] jects. The upper floor was vacant, the [illegible] up. A shoulder to the door, and the rickety [illegible] gave way, opening up into a smelly room, [illegible] dolent of many cookings, but untenanted.

"Do you vish the accident?" A younger [illegible] stood below, with an older woman tugging at her sleeve. "It's across the street you'll find that."

"The patrolman's gone to the hospital, sorr," the Sergeant explained, as we picked our way across the street. Each group that we came near ceased the excited clamor they were raising and stood mute and apprehensive. A few words in German to one of them brought a veritable gabble, of which the words "tod geschlagen" were the only ones understandable.

Through a narrow passageway, a little electric light globe struggling with the gloom, and all but extinguished in the combat. Up slippery stairs, around a slick post, threading a devious path through baskets [illegible] God knows what, up a second flight, [illegible] bloodstains telling us we were on the [illegible] trail.

Into a doorway the red trail led, [illegible] warm air of the kosher kitchen—no [illegible] kosher, for kosher means clean—[illegible] the oilcloth-covered floor two pools [illegible] arterial blood. On the table were the [illegible] tions for breakfast—a plate of [illegible] crullers, a coffee pot, empty plates. [illegible] the bedroom.

In one corner, [illegible] on one stockinged foot, the other bare, [illegible] her, and a stocking in her hand, [illegible] little girl of about 12. From the covers [illegible] bed peeped a brown-eyed boy of some [illegible] less. And in the front room stood an old [illegible] clinging to a crutch, incoherent with [illegible]

"What's happened?" the Sergeant [illegible]

"My brother and me was asleep, and [illegible] a noise, and then she was crying and he [illegible] stairs in his nightie," said the little girl. [illegible] with a toss of the head towards the [illegible] doorway, "she can't tell me, 'cause she [illegible] good, and she's doing nothing but praying."

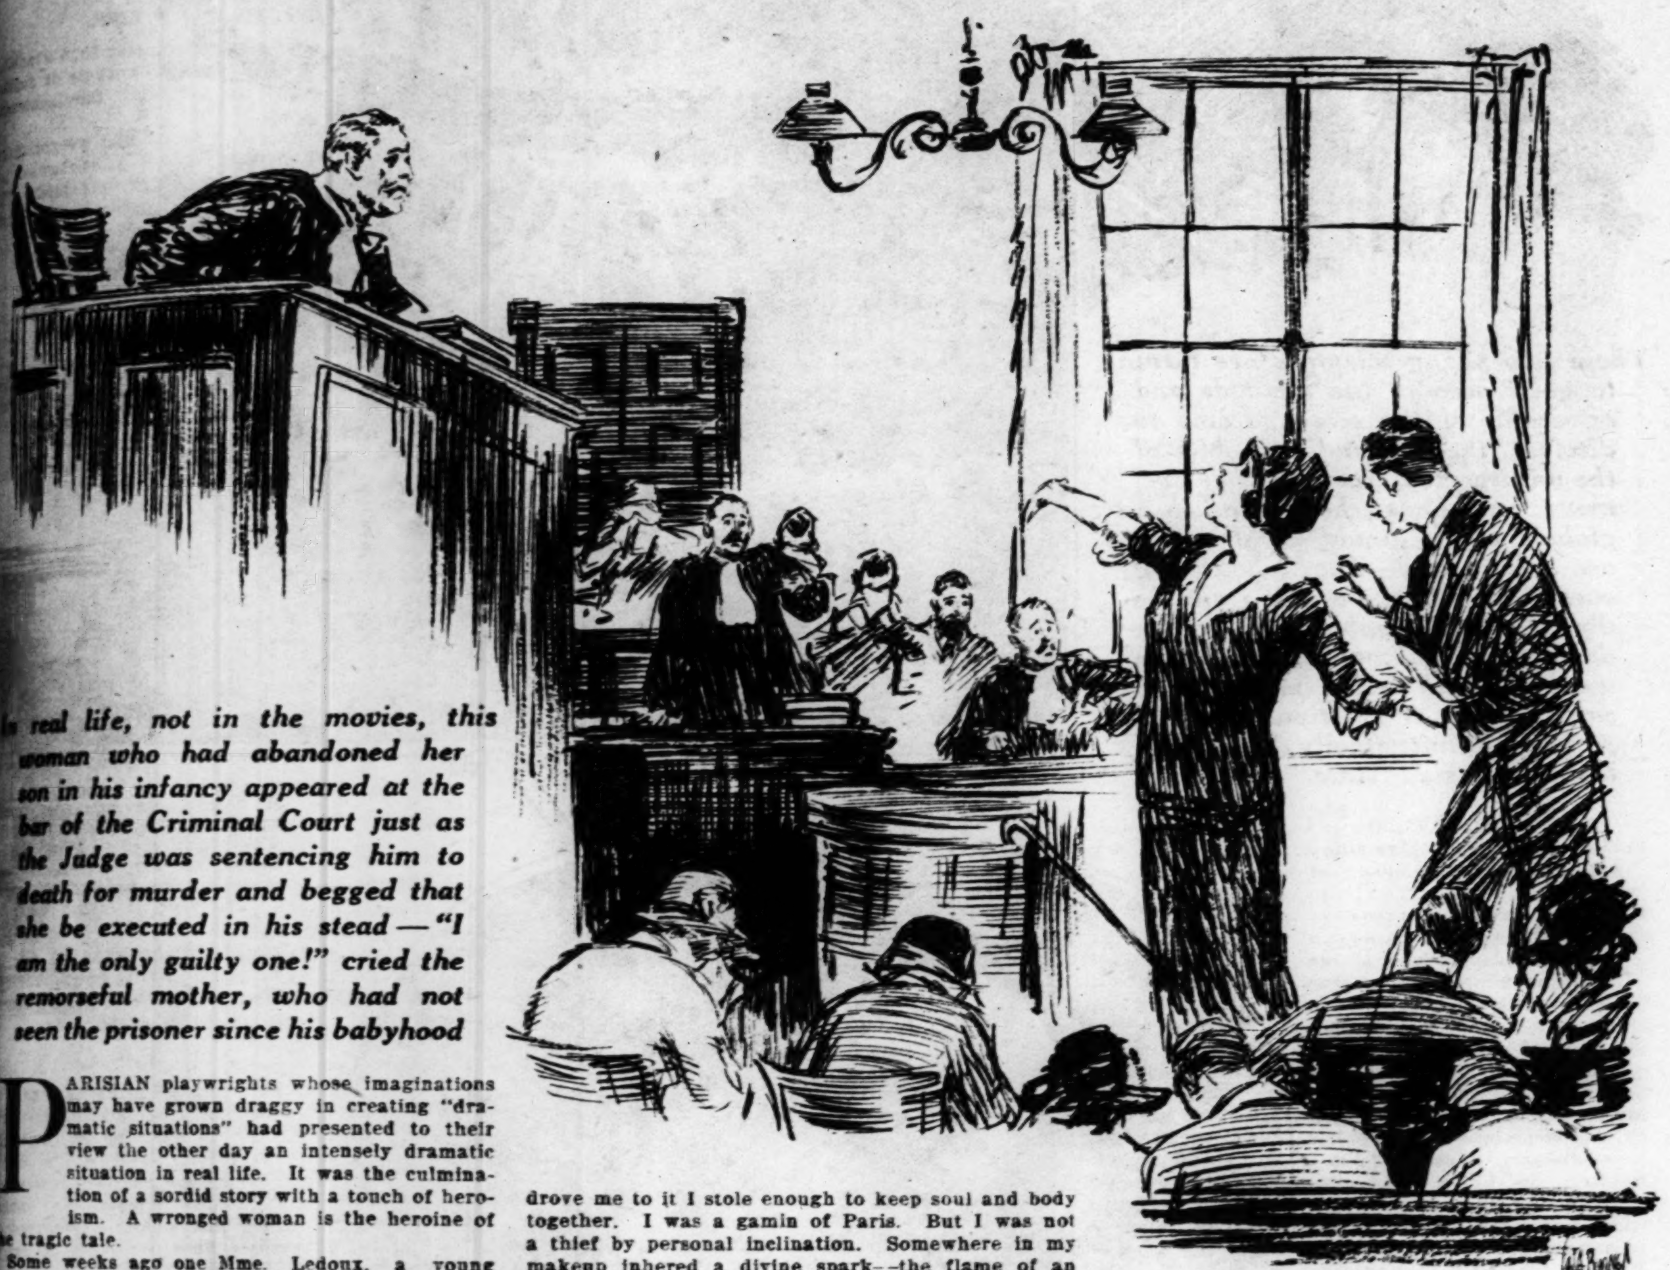
"Oh, Moriarity!" A voice boomed [illegible] passageway and up the winding stairs.

"That's the patrolman," said the Sergeant. [illegible] Phelan, what in the name of the divil's [illegible]

Phelan hopped up the stairs.

"It's nothing. The missus got sore at [illegible] he wouldn't get up and bounced the coal [illegible] his head. He bled like anything. Then [illegible] scared and called the ambulance and the [illegible] went to the hospital with him. There's no [illegible]

A Dramatic Situation for Playwrights



In real life, not in the movies, this woman who had abandoned her son in his infancy appeared at the bar of the Criminal Court just as the Judge was sentencing him to death for murder and begged that she be executed in his stead—"I am the only guilty one!" cried the remorseful mother, who had not seen the prisoner since his babyhood

"This boy is innocent!" she cried.

PARISIAN playwrights whose imaginations may have grown draggy in creating "dramatic situations" had presented to their view the other day an intensely dramatic situation in real life. It was the culmination of a sordid story with a touch of heroism. A wronged woman is the heroine of the tragic tale.

Some weeks ago one Mme. Ledoux, a young actress, was murdered in Paris. A young actor who was known as Louis Derisbourg was arrested. He had been in love with Mme. Ledoux, who had spurned him. The evidence was overwhelming. There was naught for him to do but to throw himself upon the mercy of the Criminal Court, after confessing to the crime. This he did, and in the dramatic manner common to French people of the stage who find themselves confronted with extraordinary emergencies.

The French courts allow persons accused of crime a wide latitude in self-defense or mitigation. Derisbourg was permitted to tell in detail the story of his life, so far as he knew it. There was a mystery as to his origin. He did not know, for instance, just what name he was entitled to bear. He never had known the name of his father, nor had he known his mother's name. In brief, he knew absolutely nothing about either of his parents, save that he had been told that in his infancy his mother had left him at an orphanage to be brought up in ignorance of his own people.

Derisbourg had been a youthful soldier in the World War. He had fought valiantly for France. He wore upon his breast a medal conferred for exceptional bravery in battle. To the court he said, in substance:

"I do not know who I am. As to family, I have none. I never have known whether I have a single living relative anywhere on earth. My earliest recollection has to do with a home for orphans, but whether I was or am an orphan I do not know. For all that I know, Your Honor, both my parents may be living, and here in Paris. The probability is that I am a native of this city, though that is mere surmise. I may be a child of the gutters, of the underworld; or, on the other hand, it may be that my people were, and are, if still living, persons of important family and of financial consequence.

"Your Honor, I hold it not true that life is what we make it. We, it seems to me, are what life makes us. I am not responsible for myself, to begin with. I had nothing to do with bringing myself into this world of mirth and madness, of smiles and tears. But you may hold, sir, that I have had much to do with the shaping of my own life after it was conferred upon me by others. As to that, I may say that such a view may contain some truth, yet by no means is it true altogether.

"Picture to yourself, if you can, a small boy turned loose from an orphanage to shift for himself. Follow this lad, a waif of the streets for years, in his difficult task of finding food and raiment and shelter. I slept in back alleys, in goods boxes, in the shrubbery of the parks—anywhere. I filched bits of vile food from refuse of kitchens, or when hunger drove me to it I stole enough to keep soul and body together. I was a gamin of Paris. But I was not a thief by personal inclination. Somewhere in my makeup inhered a divine spark—the flame of an inborn urge toward better and nobler things than I had known.

"When I could work, I worked. Odd jobs I picked up, here and there. Sometimes I earned enough to keep me from want; at other times I suffered hunger and cold. But it seems that I possessed a spirit that could not be broken. I pass over much of my sorry story, saying merely that somehow, by hook or by crook, I managed to grow up. As a youth several years under age I enlisted in defense of France. This medal, Your Honor, I offer in testimony to the quality of my service at the front. My record on the military rolls of France, at any rate, cannot be attacked.

"After the armistice I returned to Paris and began, in a modest way, the life of an actor on the minor stage. I met Mme. Ledoux and loved her. My habits were not those of a youth who had enjoyed the advantages of a home where the training is conducive to irreproachable conduct. Perhaps, Your Honor, if I had had a mother's love to guide me"——

The solemn Judge was affected deeply.

"Go on, M. Derisbourg," he directed, after a pause.

"If I had had a mother, or a father, but, what is of most importance, it seems to me, a mother, a good mother, it may be that I should not have grown up to be capable of the deed I have confessed. As the record shows, I drank hard, and in a moment of madness, half-stupefied by drink, I slew the woman I loved. Your Honor, I implore the mercy of the Court, offering in mitigation this true story of the wretched career of a waif of the streets of Paris."

Derisbourg was taken back to his cell, the Court having set a day upon which to announce decision in the case. The nature of that decision was not doubted by anyone who had read the press accounts of the murder. It was a clear case of the commission of a capital crime, with no mitigating circumstances save what the prisoner himself had offered.

When Derisbourg again was called before the bar of the Criminal Court the Judge was in the act of condemning him to death by the guillotine. The courtroom was crowded with the sort of people who seem to enjoy such a scene. Everybody was leaning forward to hear the fateful words of the Judge.

A woman carrying a walking stick, upon which she leaned heavily, worked her way through the throng. She seemed elderly, though she still was considerably under 50 years of age. She was weeping, and her face bore the aspect of one who was undergoing a supreme tragedy of remorse. She was dressed neatly, yet her garb indicated that she belonged to the working class. It appeared that she was an honest housewife of the type of the toiling majority, which, in fact, she was.

The woman reached the bar and stood before the Court. Hardly two feet away stood Louis Derisbourg, who already had heard a portion of the sentence of death. The Judge had paused in his delivery as the unexpected interruption occurred. The woman, lifting her face toward the bench, addressed the Court:

Derisbourg looked at her in amazement. The Judge did likewise. The curious crowd craned necks to get a better view of the woman who thus interfered in the solemn proceedings.

"Yes, Your Honor," insisted the woman, "he is innocent. I am the only guilty one—it is I who murdered Mme. Ledoux!"

The Judge motioned to a bailiff, apparently intending to direct that the woman be removed from the chamber. A crazy woman, no doubt. It was not possible that she had slain Mme. Ledoux.

But the woman at the bar continued, rapidly, yet in a clear tone that rang through the courtroom, so that even the thrill seekers now standing up on the rear seats could hear every word:

"I affirm, Your Honor, that I, not this boy, am guilty of this murder. It is my fault that he is a criminal, and I offer my own head for the ax of the guillotine, instead of his. Take me, execute me, but let this innocent boy go free! I beseech you to do so, for only thus may justice be done."

"Madame," sternly inquired the Court, "who are you?"

"I am the mother of this boy who is called Louis Derisbourg," rather calmly replied the agitated woman. "He is my baby."

She dropped her walking stick and reached both hands toward the prisoner. Derisbourg gazed for a moment into her eyes. Then he stepped forward and swept her into his arms. She clasped her arms about his neck, her head dropped upon his bosom, she broke into wailing sobs. The prisoner sought to quiet her.

"Mother!" he cried. "Oh, my mother—I know you are my mother, yet I do not know why I know. Be calm—it is not your fault at all, it is all mine!"

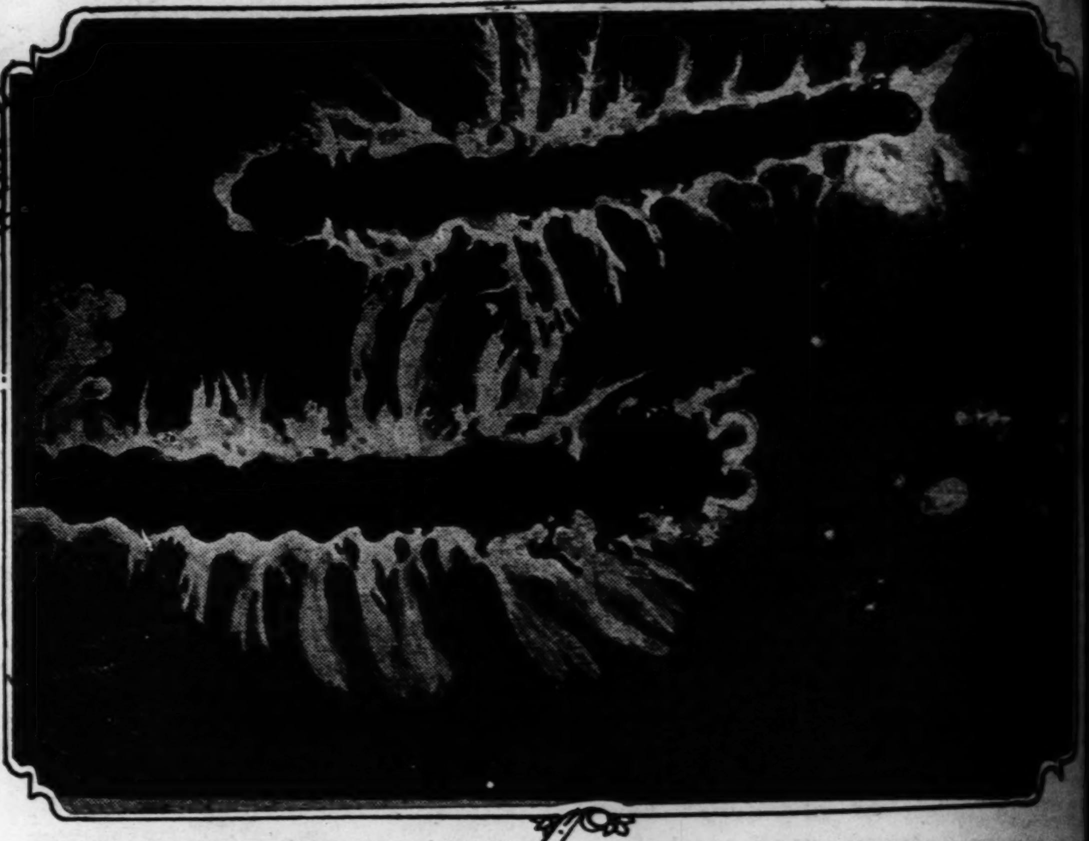
The Movie Shows That Science



A remarkable microphoto of two young mosquito These tiny creatures live in water of stagnant pools grow up to become the annoying of insect pests.

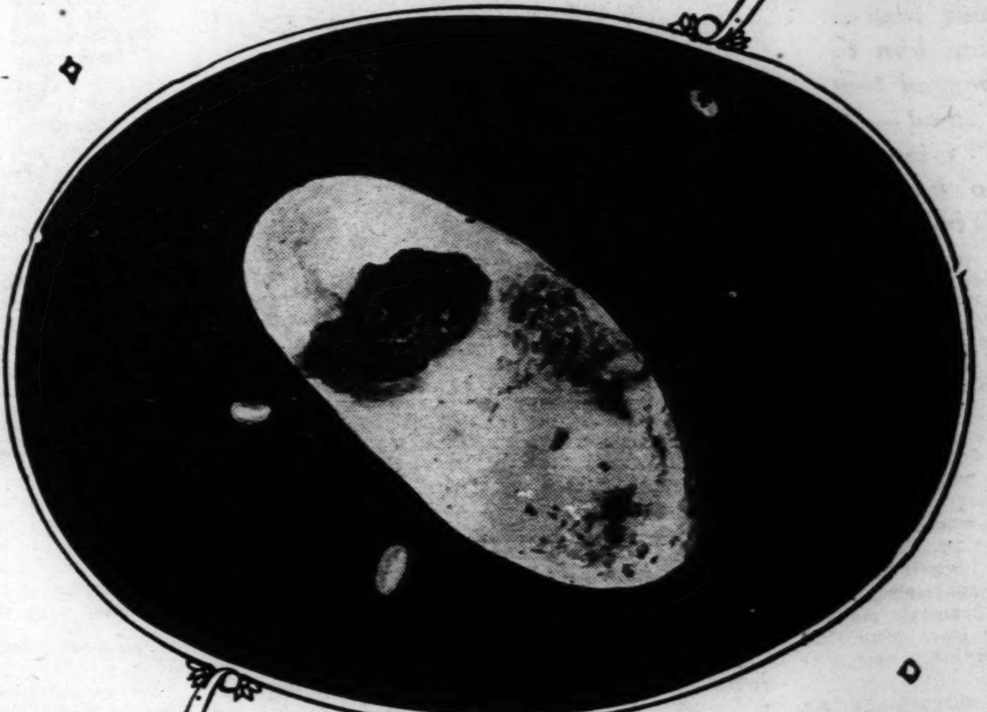
These two young scientists are turning to good account the methods and apparatus of the screen drama to disclose the astounding habits of the unsuspected creatures that live, move and have their being in a globule of the liquid we drink or use ablutionally—They show that every time we take a swig from the dipper or the goblet we gobble down thrilling "movies" and when we take a bath we are immured in a small ocean of emotional motion pictures, infinitesimally depicted by the animalculae "stars."

By E. E. FREE, Ph. D.,
Fellow of American Association for the Advancement of Science.

THE motion picture has done more than to create a new art and a new means of public amusement. It is beginning, scientists believe, to create a new and powerful instrument of scientific research.

From France comes the news that motion pictures of the beating human heart are being used by physicians in the diagnosis of heart disease. Surgeons in this country are using movies to study the motions and abnormalities of diseased joints. At the recent meeting of the American Medical Association in Chicago much enthusiasm was expressed by the attending physicians over a remarkable motion picture showing the normal and abnormal motions of the human stomach—a movie drama of a stomach ache.

Meanwhile the physicists at the University of Chicago have made a motion picture of the explosion of an atom and have discovered thereby a new kind of ray which Dr. Harkins, the discoverer, calls the Z ray. And finally two young scientists of New York City have made a remarkable film study of the lives and loves of the millions of tiny animalcules that dwell in the water of roadside ponds and ditches.



A view of the astonishing Paramecium or "Slipper Animalcule." This photograph was made by the new process invented by Mr. Carpenter and Mr. Goldman, which process shows the living creature clearly illuminated in white on a dark background. The dark spot inside the animalcule is his contractile vacuole. The small white specs are other Paramecia of a smaller species.

These animalcules have long been known to scientists through the medium of the microscope. If you gather even one drop of the slightly cloudy water from near the bottom of such a pool of standing water and if you focus your microscope on it with a magnification of some six or eight hundred times, you will find it literally teeming with life.

Here will be a marvelously organized little creature with arms like an octopus. Scientists call him a hydra. Next to him will be a small bell-shaped creature with a row of moving hairs around his mouth, which hairs make a vortex in the water and thus brings still tinier specks of plant or animal matter into the hungry maw. Because of the vortex that this creature makes in the water scientists have named him Vorticella.

Darting about between the hydras and vorticellas and a dozen other kinds of creatures you will see a number of the wonderful slipper animalcules, named Paramecium; the submarine of the water-drop world, for he looks for all world like a snub-nosed boat moving very rapidly some pressing business own.

And on the bottom of microscope slide you may find you are lucky, one or two of amazing creatures called ba, the lowest known form imal life; a creature that more than a sluggishly drop of jelly, and yet alive, even possessed slight degree of what we call intelligence.

And on the bottom of your microscope slide you may find, if you are lucky, one or two of the amazing creatures called Amoeba, the lowest known form of animal life; a creature that is no more than a sluggishly flowing drop of jelly, and yet indubitably alive, even possessed in some slight degree of what we might call intelligence.

It is this creature, the amoeba, which represents, most scientists believe, the nearest surviving relative of that primeval slime speck that developed perhaps a billion years ago in the shallow waters of the ancient ocean and which marked the first appearance of life on this terrestrial globe.

Really this hair is trigger. When the arm of the hydra comes close any still tinier creature that the hydra fancies for a touch against these sense hairs releases hun- of the tiny darts. They instantly fly out like spears of attacking savages.

In each dart there seems to be a tiny drop of paralyzing poison. At any rate we can see the microscope that the creature seized by the dra's terrible tentacles instantly ceases to struggle meets his fate as quietly as does the bird hyp- tized by the eye of the predatory snake.

These hairs sweep back and forth in the water like the oars of an ancient galley. This is how the Paramecium moves about, which he does with really astonishing eed. If he were actually the size of a submarine retained his present ability to move he would vel some eight or ten miles in a minute; faster n even the fastest airplane, to say nothing of the test ship.

This Paramecium happens, also, to be one of the eatures of whom it is really true that marriage kes two individuals into one. When two of these imalcules decide to marry they lie close side by for a while, as though they glued together. This how the creature multiplies kind. And scientists believe the original act of fusion the two "parents" is an important part of this reproductive process; that it has some deeply necessary function in preserving the vigor of the animalcular race.

Inside the body of this slipper animalcule there is a very curious organ called the contractile vacuole. We do not know just what it is or how it works. Mr. Carpenter and Mr. Goldman have succeeded in getting motion pictures of it in action and these pictures are now being studied in an attempt to determine some of the secrets of its action.

It seems to have the duty of getting rid of waste products from the animalcule's body. It is not improbable that its curious contractile power is a forerunner in the evolutionary series of the contractile power of our stomach, a power so important to human digestion.

This vacuole may be seen as the dark spot on one of the photographs of the Paramecium reproduced with this article. What it does is this: Gradually it swells up inside the creature. It contains a watery fluid. Suddenly, after it has attained a certain size, it contracts violently and bursts through the skin of the animal. But this does no harm. The skin immediately heals itself. Then presently the vacuole begins to distend itself again with the watery fluid and the whole cycle is repeated. Whenever this cycle of expansion and discharge stops, the observer knows that that particular animalcule is sick and about to die. His digestive system has got out of order, and with the water-drop creatures indigestion is a fatal disease.

The simplest form of digestion in this microscopic world is that of the lowest creature of all, the jellylike amoeba. These amoebas are creeping creatures, not swimming ones. They crawl slowly along the bottom of the water or over the surfaces of twigs or roots that are submerged in it. And when they come to a particle of food they merely wrap their bodies around it.

In the amoeba whose portrait is reproduced here you can see a small arm being pushed out by the creature. The front of this arm is of clear, transparent jelly. Back of this, the main body of the creature contains many opaque granules that make the body more or less cloudy.

When the amoeba wants to swallow a food particle he merely pushes out two of these arms. They meet on the far side of the food particle and engulf it. Then the living matter of the amoeba digests it. If it proves to be something indigestible the amoeba is not especially concerned. His body simply flows on and leaves the useless particle behind.

This amoeba is the simplest living animal. He is extremely simple even when compared with his more educated companions in the water-drop world, the hydra and the slipper animalcule.

Nevertheless he possesses the beginnings of the great gifts of life that we enjoy. His creeping ability is the beginning of muscular movement; his recognition of food is the beginning of the senses; his utilization of the food after it has been engulfed inside his body is the beginning of digestion.

MARTIAN CANALS SEEN TO SHIFT.

PROF. W. H. PICKERING, long a distinguished student of the canals and other markings on Mars, describes in a recent announcement in Popular Astronomy the relatively sudden shifts in position which these curious markings sometimes are seen to make.

Within a few days a canal may move its apparent position, the professor states, by as much as 150 miles.

It is difficult to reconcile this with the idea that the canals represent strips of vegetation growing along artificial waterways built by intelligent creatures for the distribution of life giving water, this idea being the interpretation of the straight-line "canals" originally suggested by the late Prof. Percival Lowell. Such strips of vegetation probably could not move at all, let alone moving as rapidly as some of the canals seem to do.

Another interpretation of the canals is that they are darker strips produced when the ground is wetted by a severe storm of rain.

But if this is their origin, why are they so frequently straight lines, and why do they reappear year after year in the same positions?

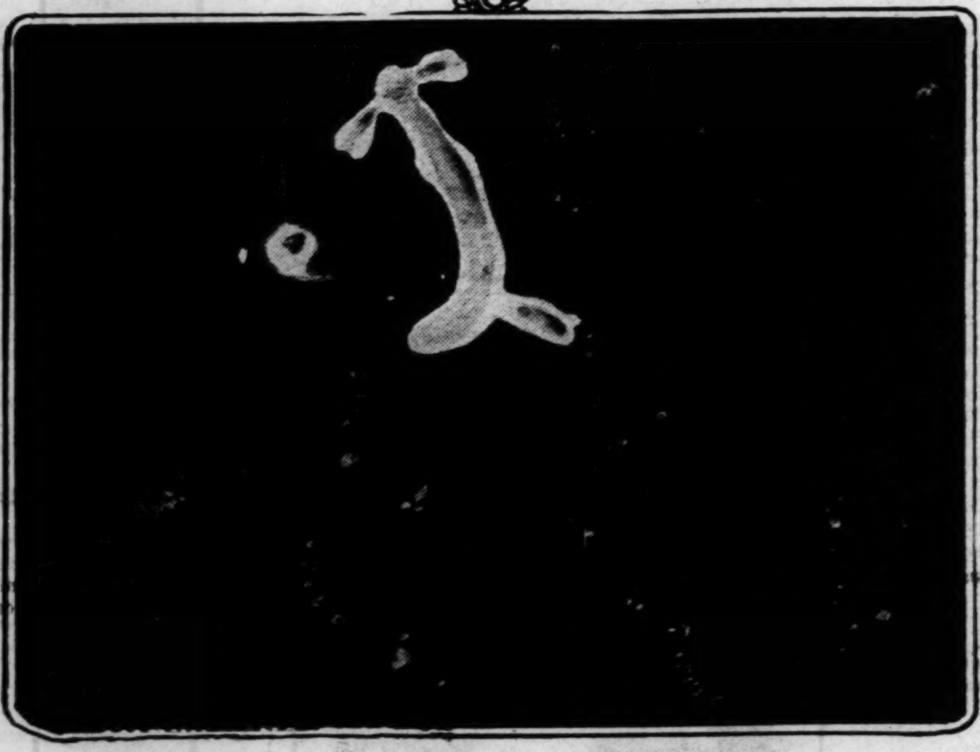
It cannot be doubted that important changes go on over there on our sister planet. Some of them we can understand well enough, as, for example, the widening of the polar snow caps in winter and their disappearance in summer. But others, like the appearance, shifting and disappearance of the canals, we cannot understand at all.



A remarkable hydra, photographed by the new process of dark-ground illumination. Four arms are visible around the mouth. At the lower part of the body there is a young hydra just issuing from the body of the parent as a "bud." These wonderful creatures reproduce in this way, by budding, much as plants do.

As told by CAPT. ARTHUR CAREY

WE OF the Homicide Squad are accustomed to the unusual and the baffling. Generally, by tenacity and unrelenting investigation, which may continue for years, we succeed in apprehending the perpetrators of crime. But the murder of Hannah Burger, with its lack of all clews except the one indicated by a glass of whisky and a woman's testimony about a certain mysterious man in black, may well be regarded by writers of sensational detective fiction as the substance for "the clewless crime."

A grief-choked voice over the telephone, toward dusk one evening summoned us to the Burger apartment on Sixty-seventh street, where resided Samuel Burger, wealthy head of a large wholesale fruit establishment. His face was gray, his body trembling convulsively, as he met us at the door and led us into the kitchen. On the floor, sticky with half-dried blood, lay the body of Hannah Burger, his wife, her delicate arms stretched out rigidly. Her shining black hair was mottled and tangled about a great jagged hole in the top of her head; a few feet away lay a hatchet whose blade showed patches of red through the black wisps that clung to it.

The story Burger told us was brief. He had kissed Mrs. Burger good-by that morning and hurried to catch the downtown elevated train, congratulating himself on his prosperity and the possession of a wife who was without a peer He had spent the morning and afternoon in his office. At 6 o'clock, returning home, he inserted his key in the lock, opened the door, strode into the hallway and looked around in the living room for his wife, who usually sat there awaiting his arrival. She was not to be seen. Thinking that she had not yet finished preparing his dinner—though wealthy the Burgers preferred to live unostentatiously, and employed no servants—he sauntered through the dining room and into the kitchen. To his surprise, she was not to be found there, either. Mystified, he called loudly, "Hannah!" There was no response.

He slipped the card beneath the door and departed.

Wondering whether she might have departed on some errand, he started to walk around the table to the oven to see what delicacies were in store. It was there he made the discovery. Blindly he made his way back to the living room and telephoned to us.

Intently, we listened to his recital, then examined the body and strode about making a minute examination of the room. We found that the woman had fallen on her back, a few feet from the table, which in turn was only a short distance from the dumb-waiter shaft. The lid of the icebox was open; a large piece of ice was melting in the compartment at the top. The bloody hatchet on the floor was the one which had always rested on a shelf in the kitchen cupboard. The cupboard door was not shut.

On the table was a wine glass with a small quantity of whisky in the bottom. On the floor, near the door, was a small white card, which bore the name of the Wellner Photograph Studio. The only door into the compartment had been locked—the stricken husband was certain of that—and the window leading to the fire escape was latched. A scrutiny that extended from doorsill to window and from wall to wall showed no marks where an entrance had been forced, disclosed no signs of a struggle.

We aroused the grief-paralyzed husband sufficiently to make a search of his belongings. Quickly the motive for the heinous butchery was disclosed. Mrs. Burger's personal jewelry and diamonds, valued at thousands of dollars, were missing. Whoever had slain Mrs. Burger had slain to steal. Yet the manner in which he had effected his entrance was unfathomable. For Mrs. Burger, frail, delicate, was unusually timid and admitted no one she did not know.

Perhaps, we suggested to the husband, who sat in the corner despairingly shaking his head, perhaps there was another man, a lover, who had slain her in a fit of jealous rage, and carried off the jewels merely as a blind. But the quivering Burger sobbingly declared that never before had there been a wife so faithful as Hannah.

A bluecoat was dispatched to summon in turn each tenant in the building. It was not one of those palatial structures of Park avenue or Riverside drive where families live for years in adjoining apartments and never learn to know the others' faces, much less names. The tenants were horrified to learn of the tragedy. Yes, they knew Mrs. Burger, they told us; she was an excellent woman who worshiped her husband.

Had they noticed anyone going up to the apartment at any time during the day? Yes, said Mrs. Erman, who lived on the second floor directly across the hall from the Burgers. At about 9 o'clock a short man, who appeared to be an agent, had knocked on Mrs. Erman's door, and said he was looking for Mrs. Burger. She had shown him the door opposite, and had heard him knock. Yes, said Miss Knapp, who resided downstairs. She had started out to the grocery store about 11 o'clock when she noticed a letter in the mail box. She was on the steps reading it when a tall, dark-mustached man, of burly stature, came up to her and inquired for Mrs. Burger's apartment. Neither neighbor had seen either of the men before.

The next morning, at the Wellner Photograph Studio, the worried proprietor conceded to us that he had an agent in his employ who might answer the short man's description.

ied proprietor conceded to us that he

"But he's straight," the proprietor insisted. "He wouldn't commit a crime in a thousand years."

Frankly, the agent, when we questioned him, admitted having called to solicit patronage at the Burger home. But Mrs. Burger, he asserted, had refused to let him enter; whereupon he had slipped the card beneath the door and departed. Subjected to a wearing inquiry, he repeated his story again and again, varying not a single detail. We brought him before Mrs. Erman. She recognized him at once. As other neighbors had talked to the dead woman after 9 o'clock, and as investigation of the man's intimate life confirmed the studio proprietor's favorable opinion, the agent could not be considered the likely slayer.

The agent's card having proved worthless as a clew, our horizon was gloomy. We knew nothing, except that a tall, burly stranger, dressed in black, had inquired for Mrs. Burger at 11 o'clock; and even though we possessed indubitable proof the stranger was the murderer, how could he be found?

Among New York's millions, tall, burly, black-mustached men are to be numbered by the thousands, and the tens of thousands. Every likely pawnshop in the metropolis was combed; their dusty shelves were ransacked for the lost diamond brooch, the diamond rings, the pearl necklace, which the comely Mrs. Burger, curiously enough for a person of her simple taste, had once so cherished. Our search was fruitless.

When evidence is lacking, theories must take its place. Mentally we re-enacted the murder with the fragmentary details we possessed. Mrs. Burger had heard a knock on the door. Always timid, she had demanded that the caller first make known his identity. He spoke. She recognized the voice. He walked in. He was someone she knew well, a friend, perhaps a relative. She had poured out a glass of whisky for him, a Jewish hospitality ordinarily reserved for a visitor to whom the hostess wishes to show particular courtesy.

The buzzer had sounded. She had turned her back upon the guest to take the ice from the dumb-waiter. The caller was one whom she trusted, or she would have kept him constantly in sight. We surmised that Mrs. Burger had been chopping the piece of ice to make it fit into the refrigerator, when the assassin wrested the hatchet from her hand and hacked her to death. His blow had been struck from behind—that was evident.

The woman butchered, the slayer then had hurried directly to the unlocked dressing table, in which Mrs. Burger foolishly kept her jewels. He had not fumbled through drawer after drawer, leaving behind a trail of rumpled silks and lingerie. Nothing was disturbed. He knew where to find Mrs. Burger's jewel case. He had been in the home before.

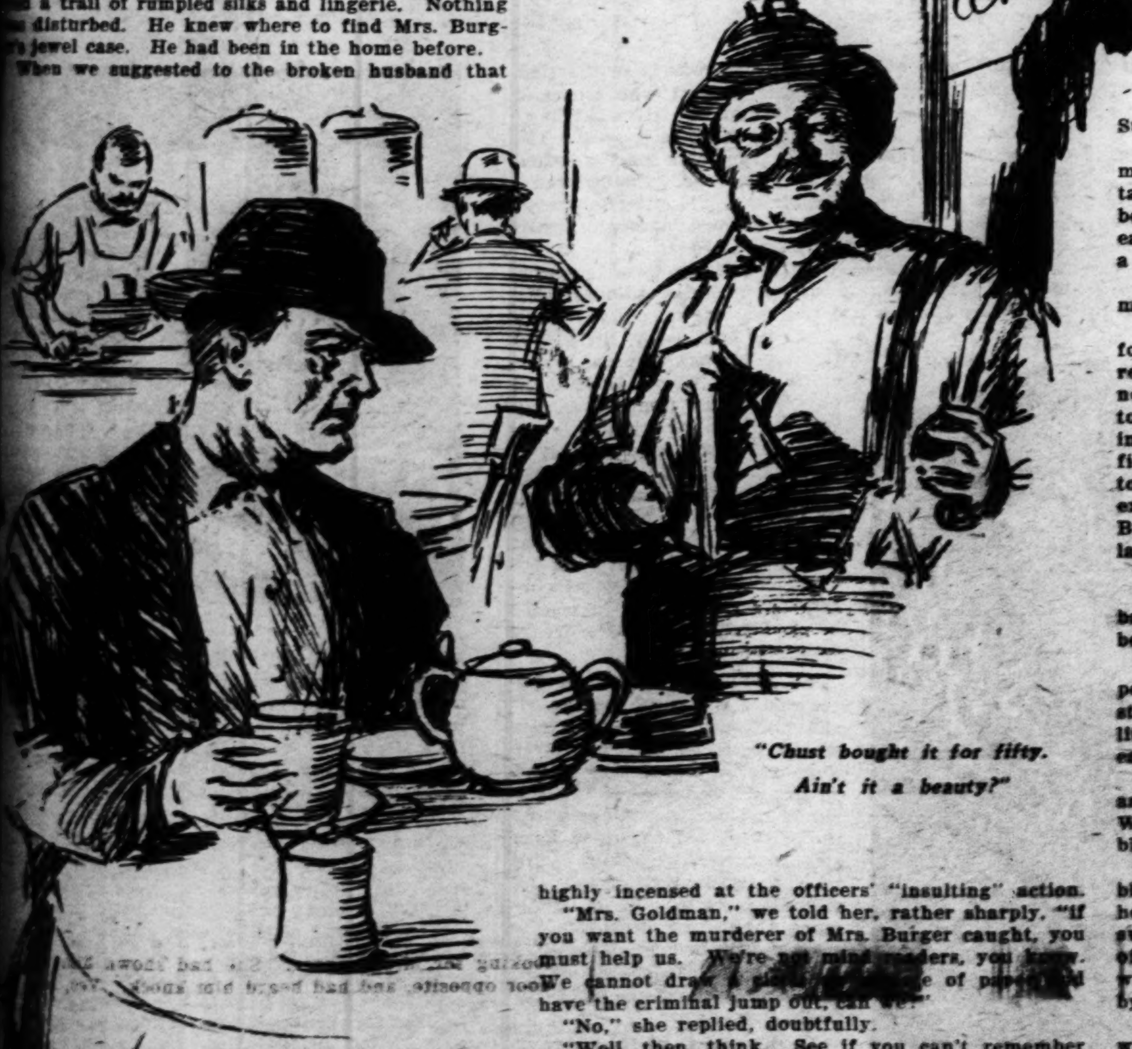
When we suggested to the broken husband that he make out a list of all his relatives, and told him the reason, he was shocked, and his misery intensified.

We nevertheless insisted; and wearily the mourner acquiesced. We tried to question him concerning each name, but he shuddered and refused to answer.

"I can't," he choked. "It's horrible."

One by one we interviewed the kinsmen; the wife's aunt, Mrs. Weinbrodt, whose husband owned a clothing store; Mrs. Burger's brother, a doctor; Mrs. Burger's cousins, the Kallens. One relative would be indignant at the slur upon the family's honor and refuse to answer all questions; another would prove willing enough, but unable to aid. Weeks of disappointing effort elapsed. As we neared the end of the list it seemed as though we must abandon hope.

We were talking one day to Mrs. Goldman, a niece of Mr. Burger, and one of his dead wife's intimates. She, like many of the others, had been highly incensed at the officers' "insulting" action.



WATCH YOUR HAT AND COAT

"Chust bought it for fifty. Ain't it a beauty?"

"Mrs. Goldman," we told her, rather sharply, "if you want the murderer of Mrs. Burger caught, you must help us. We're not mind readers, you know. We cannot draw a picture on a piece of paper and have the criminal jump out, can we?"

"No," she replied, doubtfully.

"Well, then, think. See if you can't remember some relative who answers the description we gave you."

The woman pondered. "I don't know," she answered, reluctantly. "There's one that might be like him. He hasn't been in New York long. William Straus. His mother, Mary, was Hannah's second cousin." Then she added, quickly, regretting the suspicion she had cast on one of her own blood: "No. He couldn't have done it. I know he couldn't."

"You let us worry about that, Mrs. Goldman. Did this Straus, so far as you know, ever see Mrs. Burger's jewels?"

"No, I don't think so," she replied, thoughtfully. "Yes, he did, too. At Passover. Just a couple of months ago. All the relatives were at Hannah's house, and she brought out the jewels and showed them to us. They were beautiful, her jewels."

Enthused by our discovery, we paid a visit incognito to Mr. Straus, who recently had opened a stationery store on Grand street on the East Side, and we paid visits to his friends as well. The friends were not of the sort brought to court as character witnesses, but were portrait showed a mustache; the Mr. men. Straus paid no attention to his store—he was always in a saloon or a billiard hall.

We soon learned that his mother had opened the shop for him in the hope that its effect would be quieting. So when we painstakingly studied the photographs in the rogue's gallery we were not surprised to find, numbered among those portraits taken at municipal expense, a recent camera study of Mr. Straus. In fact, he had only a few months before been released from the Illinois Penitentiary, where he had been incarcerated for burglarizing the Marquette Club in Chicago. The poortrait showed a mustache; the Mr. Straus of Grand street lacked such adornment.

Attired as battered East Siders, Homicide Squad men became Straus' shadows; each resounding restaurant along "Goulash row," that he patronized, became a sleuth's haunt; each smoky poolroom, each queer barber shop that he frequented, became a sleuth's club.

We found the barber who had shaved off Straus' mustache on the day Mrs. Burger was murdered.

The trail was growing hot. We redoubled our efforts. Then, one day as one of our men sat in a restaurant eating pumpernickel and sour cream, he noticed the little German who sold butter and eggs to the proprietor, polishing the diamonds of a platinum brooch, with his huge handkerchief. Our officer tingled with triumph, but triumph that he took care to conceal. For the brooch was either an exact duplicate or the original of the ornament Mrs. Burger had probably worn for the taking of her last photograph.

"Where did you get that?" he inquired.

"From Straus," chuckled the other, proud of his bargain. "Chust bought it for fifty. Ain't it a beauty?"

Soon afterward, in quick succession, we traced the pearl necklace, the diamond rings, the diamond-studded watch. The new owners were keepers of little shops, the aristocrats of the neighborhood; in each case the eager seller had been Straus.

While the stationery store proprietor was occupied as usual in a billiard hall, we entered his room. We searched, and hidden in a cupboard we found a black suit, stained with blood.

Straus was arrested, but he denied all guilt. The blood had spilled on his clothes, he explained, when he cut his arm on a broken window. Desperately he swore to us that he had not been within three miles of Mrs. Burger's home on the day of the murder; while the jewels, he declared, had been given to him by a good friend.

But when Miss Knapp, the keen-eyed neighbor who on the fatal morning had directed the mysterious stranger upstairs, instantly identified the prisoner, the chain of evidence was complete, and his frantic protestations could not sever it. He admitted his guilt after the Judge had sentenced him to die.

The Canary Recital That Stagg[illegible] the St. L

"Pete," who whistles our national air freely on ordinary occasions, found himself unable to do his bit when for the first time he attended a concert by roller canaries that have the art of warbling cultivated to the highest degree — In the appended article is told the engaging story of the breeding and training of these feathered musicians, with sidelights on their ancestral history — The vocalizations of the prima-singers are attained through drilling under "professor" canaries

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

IF A MERE human being is any judge of bird psychology, "Patriotic Pete," otherwise celebrated as the "Yankee Doodle Bird," underwent a nervous shock the other night at the Musicians' Club. "Pete," as many St. Louisans know, is a canary, and he is nationally renowned among fanciers for a unique accomplishment. He whistles that more or less classical anthem, "Yankee Doodle"—not a few notes, mind you, but the entire 16 measures.

He takes a high and proper pride in this attainment, which, so far as seems known here, only one other canary in the United States, a feathered maestro in San Francisco, can rival. Unlike many human pests, as a usual thing "Pete" doesn't pretend the slightest diffidence about exhibiting his talent. He doesn't have to be coaxed; in fact, mostly he gets up and does his piece without waiting to be asked.

If he was less obliging on this particular evening, there were extenuating circumstances. He had been shut up in the dark all day, which made him cross; besides, it was the moulting season, and he had lost most of his tail.

Some 200 men and women were crowded into the small, hot rooms, glaring with electric light. "Pete" didn't mind; he was accustomed to bigger throngs than that. He had received the plaudits of thousands in the huge Coliseum. It was another circumstance that plunged him into morose ruminations. When his cage was placed on a table that served as a stage, "Pete" discovered that he was not alone.

Beside him rose a tier of five small cages, one above another. In each was a creature which was evidently a canary. "Pete's" glance of recognition proved that he suspected that much. But how different they were from himself! He was bright yellow, with touches of darker color. They were olive or grayish or blackish green, with only hints of gold. He was small, brisk and pert; they were large, dignified and elegant.

Still, "Pete" opened his beak to its fullest extent, stuck out his tongue as far as it would go and shrilled a few piccolo notes of greeting, in the meantime hopping excitedly to and fro. The response from the strangers was pleasant, but very reserved. They kept their bills almost closed and stood motionless. One would have thought that they had refused to make any acknowledgment at all, if it were not for their vibrating throats. And could their language really be called canary talk? Instead of loud, high exclamations and piercing cries, the visitors uttered soft, low-pitched hums, or mellow little droning noises.

"Pete" had encountered roller canaries before; but if he could have read the legends on the cages he would have known that for the first time in his life he was in the presence of those musical geniuses of the race which are known as prima-singers. Each was a champion and prize winner. There was "Music Master," from Louisville; and beneath him was "King Pharaoh," champion of British Columbia. Others were "American Prince" and "Whizz-Bang Billy," noted artists from Chicago; and "Gladiator," a Kansas City virtuoso. They had been traveling five months on a concert tour of the country, and were making a return appearance, "by request," in St. Louis.

"Pete" probably had an inkling that his new acquaintances were persons of importance. Alas! For once he himself was not the cynosure of all ears. The silly crowd seemed more interested in those out-of-town upstarts, although "Pete" was known to be homefolks—a loyal citizen of St. Louis, residing at 4264 Labadie avenue.

It was annoying; but "Pete" decided that he, for one, would remain unimpressed. He cocked his head on one side and stared at his rivals, one after another, with a disdainful and jaundiced eye. Not a bird among them, it appeared, knew so much as a single note of "Yankee Doodle"!

His sulky reflections were confirmed by a strange noise which came from one of the cages, and he shuddered daintily in all his remaining feathers. It was a sort of a gobble, like the note of a turkey. Then a clucking sound, like "glook, glook, glook," caused him to bound in delicate horror to the other side of his perch. "Pete" had never heard such speech from any canary, and he himself never uses these outlandish expressions. How was he to know that the first phrases were the famous "Koller" song, celebrated by enthusiasts as the queen of all canary lays; and that the second formed that equally rare strophe, the "Glucke"?

His mistress chose this inauspicious moment to beg "Pete" to sing "Yankee Doodle." She made caressing noises, whistled the opening measures, and wriggled a finger between the bars of the cage. "Pete" pecked at the finger, ruffled his plumage angrily, and gave the deplorable impression that he was hissing bitter objurgations. Why, he seemed to demand, should he degrade his art by displaying it before barbarians?

He was struck dumb with consternation in the midst of his wrath. One of the visitors—they, too, were moulting, and wearied out besides by long travel—decided finally to do a bit of real singing. After a few sweet, contralto flute notes by way of prelude, he proceeded into a roll, inexpressibly euphonious and suave, which swelled and diminished with exact art, rose and fell in miraculously smooth chromatic scales of an octave, and was sustained with a length of breath unbelievable in such tiny lungs. The song dropped into a passage of deep, rich chest-tones, in the so-called "bass voice" of the canary; and, finally, there rang from the little throat an exquisite and ravishing peal of bells, like the chiming of elfin carillons.

"Pete" himself, it appeared, could not help acknowledging that this was fine music. His stare of unbelief was followed by several flutters of dismay; and at the bell song he hid his diminished head under his wing. "Yankee Doodle" had lost its savor. There was not another chirp from him during the entire evening.

"Pete" was not the only one who was startled. Of course, there were experts present who criticised the little cantatrice's performance. His "Aufzug" was too hard, declared one; and to another the "pipes" were overly shrill. Lay ears were assailed by a learned babel of "Knorren," "Schwirren," "Schockeln," "Hohlrollen" and "Knatterknarren." While the technical jargon of human music comes from Italy, that of canary art is German.

The visitors, in addition to fatigue, were temperamental; it appeared that they were discontented with the spotlighting, which was not bright enough. They sang, in fact, very little, but this was enough to prove a revelation for those acquainted only with the common canary and its familiar pipings. Behind the exhibition, as a bit of investigation soon proved, lay one of the most fascinating of musical stories. Not the least picturesque feature is this: that canaries destined to become artists attend vocal conservatories, and are instructed by distinguished professors of their own species.

In 1478 the Spaniards discovered a group of islands off the northeast coast of Africa which, because of the large dogs found there, they called "Terra de Canario." The Canaries, as well as Madeira and the Azores, were peopled by a small, greenish-yellow bird with a particularly fresh and melodious voice. In a little more than four centuries the canary has become a beloved domestic companion among all the civilized peoples of the world.

In the course of time, breeders founded three principal strains upon the original wild bird. In England, fanciers aimed at preternatural size and rare plumage. In Holland, the ideal was found in eccentric forms, such as the Belgian canary, which, with its hunched should[illegible]

The wild canary's repertory has been increased from three or four tours to as many as 10 or 13. Some of these new modes were perhaps learned from birds of different species, like the nightingale; some were imitated from various pleasing sounds in nature; and some may have been invented by canary Beethovens.

The breeders have sought first to eliminate all the flaws of wild canary song; and, secondly, have endeavored to lower its pitch. By compelling the birds to spend a large part of their lives in complete darkness, they have actually contrived to change the voice from a high soprano to a deep contralto.

These are individuals of superior talent, extensive repertory and an execution as nearly flawless as possible. They bring high prices, and are mostly imported from Germany. One now domiciled in St. Louis, "Black Gold," is declared by his owner, Gus Sotmann of 2330A Madison street, to be proficient in 10 of the 13 tours recognized by the American Breeders' Association of the Roller Canary. "Black Gold" will be the principal pedagogue of a college of several hundred canaries which will open this fall.

Until about the middle of September the young canaries are permitted to rollick with their fellows in the big flight cages. But then the youthful, care-free days of play are over. The youngsters make their matriculation as freshmen when they are separated and placed in small training cages, each holding a single pupil. They are gradually accustomed to deeper and deeper twilight. When at last they are plunged into complete [illegible], one might expect a terrified outcry. As a [illegible] of fact, the birds are very little distressed. [illegible] behind the opaque curtains, they begin indus- [illegible] working at their songs.

[illegible] faculty of mimicry is notably developed in canaries; they will mimic almost anything they hear, [illegible] or cacaphonous, so that they must rig- [illegible] isolated from hearing sounds and notes which [illegible] impair their song. If he hears [illegible] of tone production or enunciation, or notes [illegible] and loud, the offender is expelled forth- [illegible] Evil communications corrupt good manners, [illegible] among young roller canaries. The pupils learn poor tones much more readily, because they are easier, than good ones; and one canary with an ugly voice may easily corrupt the entire flock, including the professor himself.

If the student does not know by Christmas all that the tutor can teach him, he will never be an illustrious vocalist. Of course, the graduate continues improving his technique by himself after he has left school; but he has the repertory. The birds usually take a postgraduate course under the same professor after they moult in the second year, and brush up what they learned the year before. In the third year they become firmly established artists, and are ready to serve as professors in their turn.

The feathered graduates undergo examinations or auditions, at which experts decide whether they promise to be superior performers. They take part in contests, like intercollegiate debates, and the winners receive diplomas and prizes certifying them to be finished artists. They deserve these honors, for the course which they must master is amazingly elaborate, detailed and intricate.

The tours differ among themselves widely in pitch, tone quality, enunciation, tempo and execution. The prima-singer is expected not only to perform several of the chief ones almost without error, but to be able to combine and blend them into an organic aria, one which has contrast and yet unity, technical virtuosity and yet feeling, expression and appeal to the heart. Somewhat analogous is the equalization of registers in the human voice.

The principal material used in building this song is the hollow roll tour, but it may not be used at one time longer than one can count 25 or 30. Except for an aspirated "h" at the beginning, no consonants are permitted in this mode, and only three vowels, "ee," French "u" and "oo." Other vowels produce a nasal attack, and nasal tones are taboo in canary as well as human song. The hollow roll is lightning fast in tempo; the best performers swell and diminish it, and cause it to make its legato ascents and descents as many as six times in succession.

The second principal tour is the Knorre, or bass mode, which is sung deep in the chest on the vocable "knorr, or, even better, "quorr." If the bird pronounces these syllables "knarr" or "quarr," the connoisseur is as shocked as if McCormack's voice should crack on high C. The Knorre, despite its beauty, is used only as a transition tour, in modulating from one mode to another.

The third principal tour is the bell roll, which, like the hollow roll, rises and falls in pitch. It is formed on a diphthong consisting of the vowels "ee" and French "u," combined with "r" or sometimes "l." The sound is something like "irr-irr-irr." The simple bell tour is based on the vowel "ee," without consonants. The tone must possess what fanciers describe as "metal"; it must ring with a crystal and silver chime. It is regarded as fatal if the bird introduces an "s" before the "ee." A related tour is the hollow bell, which is low of pitch and slower of tempo. It is considered one of the most beautiful of the modes. It consists of an alternation of the vowels French "u" and "ee."

The loveliest of all canary tours, according to Dr. Karl Russ, who has written a learned volume on the canary, is the "Koller," which, chants this savant, "has a euphony, a fullness which far surpass all other tours, and even the most speaking accents of the nightingale itself." "Koller" means "gobble," and it is explained that the bird seems alternately to swallow and then disgorge its notes. This tour is said to be virtually extinct.

The water roll has liquid, gurgling notes which are thought to resemble the splashing of water. The rare Glucke tour is based on the vocable "glook," which sometimes changes to "glahck," or "klahck"—a defect which fills an expert with horror, as if Caruso had sung off the key.

The pipes or flute notes are sung on the vowels French "u," "oo" and "ow," preceded by a "d" or "t." They often serve to open and usually to end the entire aria, and as modulations from one tour to another. Only three or four may be sung in succession, and they must be low, soft and deliberate. High, shrill flutes make the canary connoisseur's hair stand on end.

The "Schwirre" resembles the whirring of crickets, muted and subdued. These form the 10 standard tours in Germany; to them the American Breeders' Association adds the Water Glucke, the deep, bubbling water tour and the Schockel, which is a kind of laughing cadenza.

Most of these tours are employed either for modulation or for ornament—that is to say, fioriture. No bird has yet been bred which possessed them all in perfection. Out of a possible score of 100, the best bird of the five on tour was rated at 42 points, which is regarded as an unusually good score.

There are certain sounds which no prima-singer may ever utter. A bird which ventures to pronounce the expletives "zitt" or "chop" only once, is expelled forthwith from any contest. He must not smack his tongue while singing, or introduce sibilants into his rolls, or interject disconnected shrill cries, or begin his song with a love-call instead of a flute, or break off without finishing a tour that has been started, or make a false attack—such as beginning his Knorre too low. No cackling is permitted, but the artist may hazard an occasional Aufzug, if it is soft. The Aufzug is a sound like the winding of a clock; when hard, it resembles the tearing of calico. Most of these defects are inherited from the original faulty song of the wild canary.

The task of judging canaries at song contests is so difficult that there is a college in New York for the training of canary judges. Sometimes these experts do not know one note from another, in human music; nevertheless they must have a most delicate sense of hearing in order to recognize all the tours, and to know whether each has its regulation tempo, pitch, tone production and allowance of vowels and consonants.

The difficulty is multiplied by the current practice of presenting four birds for judgment at a time; they all sing at once, and supply no program notes to give warning of the numbers on their schedule.

So that "Pete's" discomfiture—if such it was—no doubt was only natural. Had he but known it, his proud accomplishment is regarded by connoisseurs as no more than a freak. Canary song purists exclude all notes except the natural ones of the canary itself, and even nightingale tutors are looked on with disfavor. It would be regarded as a most barbarous solecism if a prima-singer should burst forth with a theme from a Beethoven symphony, to say nothing of "Yankee Doodle."

A fastidious canary fancier describes the ideal canary aria as follows, but confesses that it has never yet been heard save in the imagination: For beginning, a simple roll or Schwirre; then the Knorre, next a hollow roll with two or three curves, or arches; and then, in order, three or four hollow flutes, a bell roll followed by a Glucke roll, a soft Schwirre, a deep bell roll closing with another arched hollow roll, a second assortment of flutes, a modulation by means of the Knorre to a third hollow roll, and finally three to five deep flutes by way of Coda.

Richard Washburn Child

A YOUNG man, with a young woman clinging to his arm, walked slowly toward the end of the pier. A shadow, grotesque, silent, menacing through the moon-silvered mists which hung above the shore line of the deserted summer estate had followed them to the point where the pier joined the rocks and where a clump of rare junipers had been planted by the landscape architect, and there this skulking figure, lean, catlike, unseen, crouched low.

The fog had brought its suggestion of mystery and terror; the cold made the young man disengage the arm held so tightly by the young woman, so that he might fasten the topmost button of his coat.

"S'all right; that's the tide shaking the pier. We got to go somewhere for a walk. That's what you came way out here to East Harbor for—so's we both could get outdoors sometimes. Maybe he ain't thinking of us, anyhow."

"When did you hear?"

"I saw it in the Bulletin. I called you up at the office the first I heard of it, and they said you was taking dictation. He went outside just a week ago. I wish I'd never seen his face! I wish I'd never been up there with him!"

"Don't talk so," she pleaded, with a sympathy in her tone which comes from few who have not suffered the agonies of the soul. "Denny, you've got me! Everything's all right, Denny. Let's sit down here. You've lived it down, Denny. We ought to be thankful—your good job, your future. Nobody can say anything against you to me. Only, Denny—listen: Let's get married—let's get married tomorrow."

The man was taller than she. He put one of his nervous hands on her slight shoulder, and she smiled.

"I thought it was you who said we'd better wait until we could send word to your mother out in Dakota. You told her the whole story. That was the plan. Then, if anything came up and it was known that I had served my 18 months up there, where"——

"Don't say it!" she exclaimed, with passion. "We promised not to mention anything of that, Denny."

"You're not sorry—now?" he asked, fiercely.

"Sorry! Me sorry? Why, Denny, I was glad—gladder than I ever was in my life—when you said you loved me. At the bottom you were so good—the best man I ever knew. And then these two years that made us both grow so much, Denny—like plants that found the sunlight. And these two years wiped out all the past. Sorry? Me sorry? Why, I only wanted you, Denny—good or bad—I wanted you."

He drew in a long breath and put his arm about her, holding her to him closely. He turned her face upward and kissed her responsive lips.

"I won't have him wipe me out like a dog, Alice. I bought it. He'd kill. He has it bred in his bone. When they caught him—it was for burglary—he jumped from the platform of an elevated station onto an electric sign, and he left an inspector and a ticket chopper waiting for the ambulance."

"He was such a nice-appearing boy!" she exclaimed. "Manners and all! Jennie Boyden and I never knew about the truth. I wouldn't have believed it. There he was, standing at the bottom of the steps where I boarded, and telling me that no girl ever meant anything to him but me. And saying he could be a different man if I loved him—if I'd only say so. He thought I did love him. He said he'd rather die than not have me love him. Oh, what would I have done if I'd known the kind of man he was! And I said: 'Well, you come for me Thursday.' But I never knew. I never heard a word till you"——

"Brought word from him," finished Denny. "But you didn't love him—at all?"

"No, no, no!"

"Well, that's it," he said. "There's something about him that tricks everybody—some power. It was that way up there. The Warden had a quartet made up from the boys."

"Don't, Denny!"

"Yes, I will. I want to tell you. I've heard this man sing in that quartet. The bass was a bank teller, 45, with 10 more years to go. And this man, always lean and clean and white, and a body slender and like a cat, and a tenor voice—what a tenor voice!—sweet, beautiful and terrible. He was like a snake with a bird's voice. They call him 'The Nightingale.'"

"The Nightingale," repeated Alice, with a shudder.

There was a long silence, in which they sat side by side, looking out into the silver-frosted mist over the salt water.

"It's cold, Denny," said the girl, suddenly.

He started, but he neglected her statement. He said:

"He will kill." Horror came into her eyes. "Yes, he will kill," Denny repeated, with his square jaw set firmly. "He said to me: 'Take this message to her. She would have loved me. That is life to me—all the life there's left. You're going out. You tell her the truth. She don't know it. But tell her I say to wait for me. Tell her I'll go straight.' Then when"—

"We've loved each other; haven't we, Denny?" she interrupted, sharply. "I never cared a thing for him. But you!"

"But he'll come, and he'll come to kill. That's like his kind—their white, long fingers and all strung with nerves. He was eating his heart out for you. He'll come. He'll kill if he can. Didn't he write: 'I give you notice'? That's like him."

The girl suddenly threw back her head and addressed the high vault of heaven. "What have we done to deserve this? Haven't we been good? Haven't we earned our happiness? What have we done?"

"Or I'll kill him," said Denny, the rows of his even, white teeth clicking together. "I'd kill him, and then they'd send me back."

"No, no, no!" she whimpered. "He won't come—maybe. Maybe he'll die. Something will happen. I'll ask help."

"Where?" said Denny. "From the police? Then I'll be known again—I'd lose the job. Then where's the living down the one big mistake? I'd rather have him get me, Alice? I'd rather have him wipe me out."

"Denny!" she gasped, clinging to his arm and looking up into his brown eyes. "Don't you worry, Denny. I love you. Whatever could happen, I'd love you, Denny. I'm so cold now. Let's go back to the village. I'm so cold."

"Gee—cold!" exclaimed the man. "All right, let's go back."

They jumped up and started toward the shore end of the long pier. A rowboat, swung by the tide, bumped the piles behind them, and the mists over the salt bay swayed in the faint stir of the penetrating winter wind.

"I've been making the curtains for the living room," Alice said, suddenly. "I left the ends so that we could fix them for any length of window, Denny, we"——

Far away there sounded across the cold night air the first plaintive bars of "Annie Laurie" in a tone as fine and clear as the song of some little bird, sweet, yet sharp and needlelike—horrible in its sweetness. The man caught the girl's wrist. Both of them stopped as if suddenly a precipice had yawned before them.

"He's come!" Denny said, in a hoarse whisper.

"The Nightingale?"

"It's him. It's just like him. He's a fiend, I tell you. Stand up, Alice. Stand up, dear. He's followed us. Maybe—this—is the end. Stand up, Alice. Be a brave girl."

The birdlike song ceased suddenly with a sharp high note.

"Remember this—Alice," Denny whispered hoarsely: "I've loved you—just you. You wouldn't forget that, would you?"

From her throat there came a wordless sound of fear and grief. But immediately she said:

"I'm not a coward, Denny; I'm a woman. I'm your Alice."

The silence seemed to pulsate. The little stenographer, facing the crisis, did her bent to think and her best to pray.

"The boat—the rowboat, Denny!" she whispered.

"No oars," he said.

"Oh, he has me cornered," he went on. "He don't care about the risk of it. What he wants is the torture of it. He wants it to be me, but he don't care if it's him. That's The Nightingale."

"Denny!"

"What is it?"

"You mustn't—you mustn't kill." She clutched at his shoulders. "It would leave me alone just the same—alone in life—all, all alone. You—'Thou shalt not kill!'"

Again the tenor voice, thin, penetrating, burst forth from The Nightingale's lips. The song went on, piping upward; it came toward them where they stood outlined against the silvery light.

"He could kill me, but I can't place him," Denny said, hoarsely. "It's all shadows—all dark there. And the dark is filled wtih song—filled with song."

—"'Thou shalt not kill,'" Alice said again. "Denny, listen. Denny!"

"I hear, little girl," he answered.

"Do you love me. Give it to me."

The song from the dark ceased suddenly.

"It's like him," said Denny, breathing hard. "He knows there is no escape for me. He can see it. His song—it's like him—just like him."

The girl had thrown one arm about her man, with the fingers of the other hand she was clutching, clutching, clutching. Her fingers moved like things of separate intelligence—insinuating, restless, persistent personalities. They crept into the hand which grasped the newly purchased revolver; they loosened the strong fingers.

"Denny!"

"What?"

"Give it to me."

He yielded like a man dazed. With a quick motion of her hand, she flung the chilly weapon over the edge of the pier. It fell into the water with a splash—a startling interruption of the still night.

"What have you done?" her lover gasped.

"Oh, now, Denny, you'll always belong to me," she said. "Even if he kills you—maybe some time we'll be together once more. You're my Denny."

The man dropped his hands limp at his thighs. The voice of The Nightingale took up the melody again. Out into the cold air came the needlelike sweetness.

One Man

"Thro[illegible]'s thin red lips," said Denny.

The song ceased. The moon, low in the sky, appeared to brighten behind them, the shadows fell away, and out of the smother of dark, like a figure developing upon a photographic plate, came the outline of the Nightingale.

"Well, here I am," whined The Nightingale, sliding toward them. "You expected me, Denny?" The other man did not speak. "You know what I come for, eh? You two! And me three years—gnawing on the lining of my own mouth—sometimes till it bled—up there. Nice moonlight, eh? No shadows of bars on the floor here—eh? Get out from in front of that man, Alice Coran."

"I won't!"

"Plenty of time," replied The Nightingale, with a sneer.

His voice broke out again to a little flight of terrible melody, and, as he sang, he came nearer until Alice could see that his arms were crossed, and the gleam of a revolver barrel, resting easily in the curve of one elbow, became visible—and nearer, until the moonlight fell upon his lean face.

The Nightingale was still young, but the penitentiary had turned his skin a ghastly, pasty color, upon which the thin lines of his lips were vivid and the shadows of his nostrils and his heavy eyebrows were grotesquely emphasized. His corded neck gave some indication of his wiry, catlike strength, and this neck was eternally twisting; the shoulders beneath were ever restless under their covering.

He had trailed his victim, unwilling to strike until the dramatic moment. That was like him. He was dressed almost jauntily in a suit of dark brown which was none too full to conceal the fact that he was powerful in shoulders and thighs, and spare of flesh where less sinewy men carry useless weight. For warmth, he wore a sweater, the edges of which showed from under his waistcoat. There were gloves on his hands—old gloves, to be sure, borrowed from some pal who had "welcomed him out" of the penitentiary, and in his buttonhole he wore a rose so white that it appeared as a symbol of the moon and the cold and of bloodless things. It was all quite like him—quite like The Nightingale.

The frightened eyes of the young woman stared at the white-petaled rosebud there in his buttonhole.

"We can talk—us three, for a while," said the discharged convict. "Don't cling to him so—it makes me sick. You ain't saving him. I could kill you both, couldn't I? What's the odds? Listen! I've been thinking. I used to think at night. Denny, old skyrocket, you ought to know. You've been there. I thought on my cot, and I thought in the chapel, and I thought all around everywhere behind the bloody stones and the concrete. Believe me, I've become a philosopher, and the first thing a philosopher has got to do is not to care what happens to him. One or two lives ain't anything more or less. Let it go at that. Only, of course, I've waited for this evening a long while. There was a time when I liked to feel red and lash out; now I want to take it all easy. I got my wish, Denny—you and me is face to face. There ain't any hurry. I like to taste it all. I like to smell it and touch it to my lips and taste a little of it. Then comes a big swallow. Gee, won't I love it!"

The other man stared at the sneering, curled, thin lips through which these words came, but he did not flinch. Alice waited for the tremor which the darting tongue of a snake with the voice of a bird might bring, but none came.

"Denny!" she said.

"Why don't you beg, Denny? That's what a man does who double-crosses his friend. I might let you off. I might give you a chance to pull the gun you carry. Why didn't you pull it when I sang up to you, Denny? Because you knew you'd have to go back—up there—inside—for life. That's the best they'd give you, Denny—manslaughter. There wasn't much for you to do but hope I wouldn't kill you. Well"——

"Well, what?"

"Why don't you beg?"

"I ain't going to beg," replied the other, disengaging himself from the girl's clinging arms. "Go to it. Shoot!"

One Man Came Back and One Didn't

"Thro[illegible]'s thin red lips," said Denny.

"Nearer now!" gasped Alice, staring at the misty darkness till her eyes burned.

"Well, what?"

"Why don't you beg?"

"I ain't going to beg," replied the other, disengaging himself from the girl's clinging arms. "Go to it. Shoot!"

Suddenly the higher voice of Alice rang out.

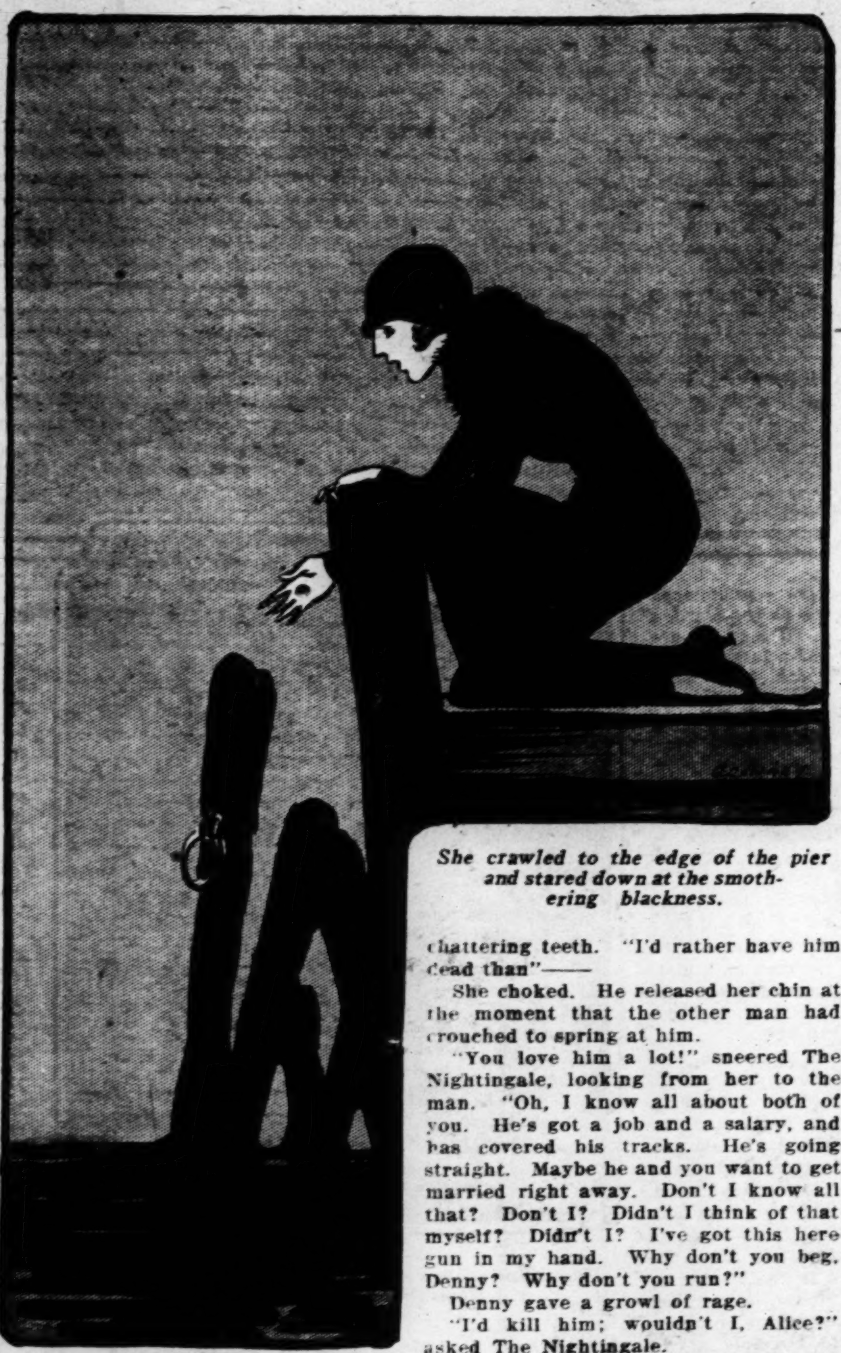
"What's he going to beg for? He never did anything to you!"

"He took you—after promising to speak for me. He took you—didn't he?—when I was up there. I wanted to square it with you, so I told him to tell you the truth about me. But he and you—took everything—everything I had—plans and hopes—all I ever wanted! Pah! I can't wait. I know what I came for." He snapped the gun up into the air and swung it downward.

"I never loved you!"

Alice almost shouted the words. The Nightingale turned toward her.

"I told him so. If you want to kill anybody—kill me," she said.



She crawled to the edge of the pier and stared down at the smothering blackness.

"You would have loved me. I'd have made you love me," The Nightingale replied, in a vicious whisper. "There never was anything like you to make me—good."

"Good! You—good!" exclaimed the girl.

"You don't believe there's anything good in me?"

He came closer to her and peered at her, as if suddenly he was imitating a man in fear.

"No—nothing," she said, defiantly, "not even your love. Even that was bad—it was all for you. Not even your love was good."

The Nightingale stared at her as if he were dazed.

"Listen," he said, after a second. "You mean that? Say it slow—you mean that?"

"No," she said, at last.

"No—what?"

"No; I don't mean that," she said, slowly. "I didn't mean it."

"He's playing with you!" Denny exclaimed. "Don't believe in him."

"I'm not going to blacken my heart with that lie," she answered, stubbornly. "Before God, I believe there's something good in him!"

An explosive noise came from The Nightingale's throat.

"I oughta been an actor," he said, after a pause, with a coarseness in his voice which, after the silence, shocked them both. "Never mind. There was months of torture. Well, this night will pay for it. Listen! Answer me this: Why didn't you pull your gun, Denny?"

"I haven't any gun."

"You lie."

"No," said Alice, "that's the truth."

The Nightingale stepped toward her and, with a quick motion of his gloved hand, caught her chin and turned her face into the moonlight.

"You'd believe me, wouldn't you?" she said, meeting his gaze.

"Yes."

"Well, when we heard you, I flung it into the water. That was the splash."

"The poor fool let you do that, did he?"

"It was my idea," said Alice, through chattering teeth. "I'd rather have him dead than"——

She choked. He released her chin at the moment that the other man had crouched to spring at him.

"You love him a lot!" sneered The Nightingale, looking from her to the man. "Oh, I know all about both of you. He's got a job and a salary, and has covered his tracks. He's going straight. Maybe he and you want to get married right away. Don't I know all that? Don't I? Didn't I think of that myself? Didn't I? I've got this here gun in my hand. Why don't you beg, Denny? Why don't you run?"

"I'd kill him; wouldn't I, Alice?" asked The Nightingale.

"Don't you answer," said her lover. "Can't you see he's playing with us like a cat that's got a pair of mice."

The Nightingale laughed. He threw back his head and, through his thin lips, his voice issued forth again, sweet but terrible, simulating joyousness but horrible in its needlelike quality.

Suddenly he clipped off a note and whirled about toward the girl.

"Why wouldn't I kill him? They'd get me for it—but what's that to me? You love each other, eh? That means I get you both with one shot, maybe—all in one shot, maybe—all in one shot, eh? Gee, but ain't it a beautiful night! Look at them mists!"

A cloud passed over the moon. Far away beyond the inlet, on the waters of the sound, a steamer behind the fog lifted its voice in a tremulous bass note. The rowboat was bumping against the pier; the little waves lapped at the piles. Again The Nightingale spoke.

"Denny, you was always a good feller—up there. I learned to like you, Denny. Do one more thing for me. And then—maybe"——

"What do you want?" the other asked, sullenly.

"Let me kiss your girl—just once, Denny."

The answer was a growl.

"Well, what are you going to do about it?" asked The Nightingale.

He was sliding over toward her; suddenly he made a dart of his head and shoulders. He seized her arm.

The Nightingale, however, began to laugh.

"Not yet, Denny," he gurgled, looking down at the gleaming weapon in his hand. "Ho, ho, ho! Not yet! We ain't begun our little play. Maybe you're right and Alice is wrong, Denny. I'm all bad, eh? So what can you expect from me, eh? Something nice? Something interesting? So let's look around."

He backed away toward the end of the pier and, with a quick thrust of his pointed chin, looked over the edge. He was humming to himself a little quiet tune which was almost like a whispered soprano.

"Hello—a rowboat—a rowboat, and no oars!" he exclaimed. "No oars! Maybe somebody uses this boat and has hid the oars. What's over there?" He pointed with his left hand through the fog at the blurred mass of shadow which was the shore across the bay. "That's where the State road runs, ain't it? Well, let's look."

A long box built of heavy boards rested along the top of the pier; The Nightingale, standing over it, braced his legs, pulled upward, and, with a shriek, the staple which held the padlock came out of the wood. He lifted the hinged cover and, glancing over his shoulder so that his victims might not spring on him from behind, he felt around in the interior.

"Here they are," he exclaimed, "the oars! Ha, ha, Denny, if you'd only had these; you and your girl could have made your getaway! You could have taken a little row when you heard me singing. Well, Denny, now it's you and me will take a little row—a cold little row."

The girl uttered a cry.

"What's the matter?" protested The Nightingale. "You ain't going to object to his going for a little row with an old friend? You ain't going to object if I don't shoot him down like a dog?"

"I'll go, too," Alice begged.

But The Nightingale shook his head.

"Then?"

"Why, one of us will come back for you, little girl. You wait here. One of us will come back—that's what I hope."

Denny stepped forward.

"You got a gun," he said, accusingly.

"That's so!" The Nightingale said, with mock astonishment, glancing down at the weapon in his hand. "What will we do about that, I wonder? Suppose I throw it over after we've started? How'd that be? That gun won't be any use to me, anyhow—after this beautiful night. I meant to shoot you with it, but that's rough work. So, Denny, you climb down and sit in the seat in the stern. I'm going to row, Denny. We'll start fair."

He threw back his head and laughed heartily. The girl's lover took a deep breath; he shrugged his shoulders and clenched his hands.

"I'll go," he said.

"No, no, no!" sobbed Alice.

"Say, what's the matter?" he asked, in his evil whine. "You didn't love me and you loved him. What was wrong with that? You two are planning to get married and go straight. What's wrong with that? I gnawed out the lining of my mouth. But what's that? That's nothing. I don't count—I'm nobody. And then, little girl, you just said there was some good in me. That ought to make a hit with me, hadn't it? And I loved you and still love you, don't I? So why not let your Denny go for a little row with me?" He coughed. "It's better than seeing him drop on this pier and go crawling and scratching around on the boards, ain't it?"

"It's a chance," he whispered.

"Just a little row," whined The Nightingale. "Come!"

Denny uttered a growl, and dropped over the edge of the pier into the bottom of the little craft.

"Well," said The Nightingale, "it certainly is a beautiful night."

He sat down on the edge of the pier, facing the man below, the revolver still in his hand; then he threw the oars

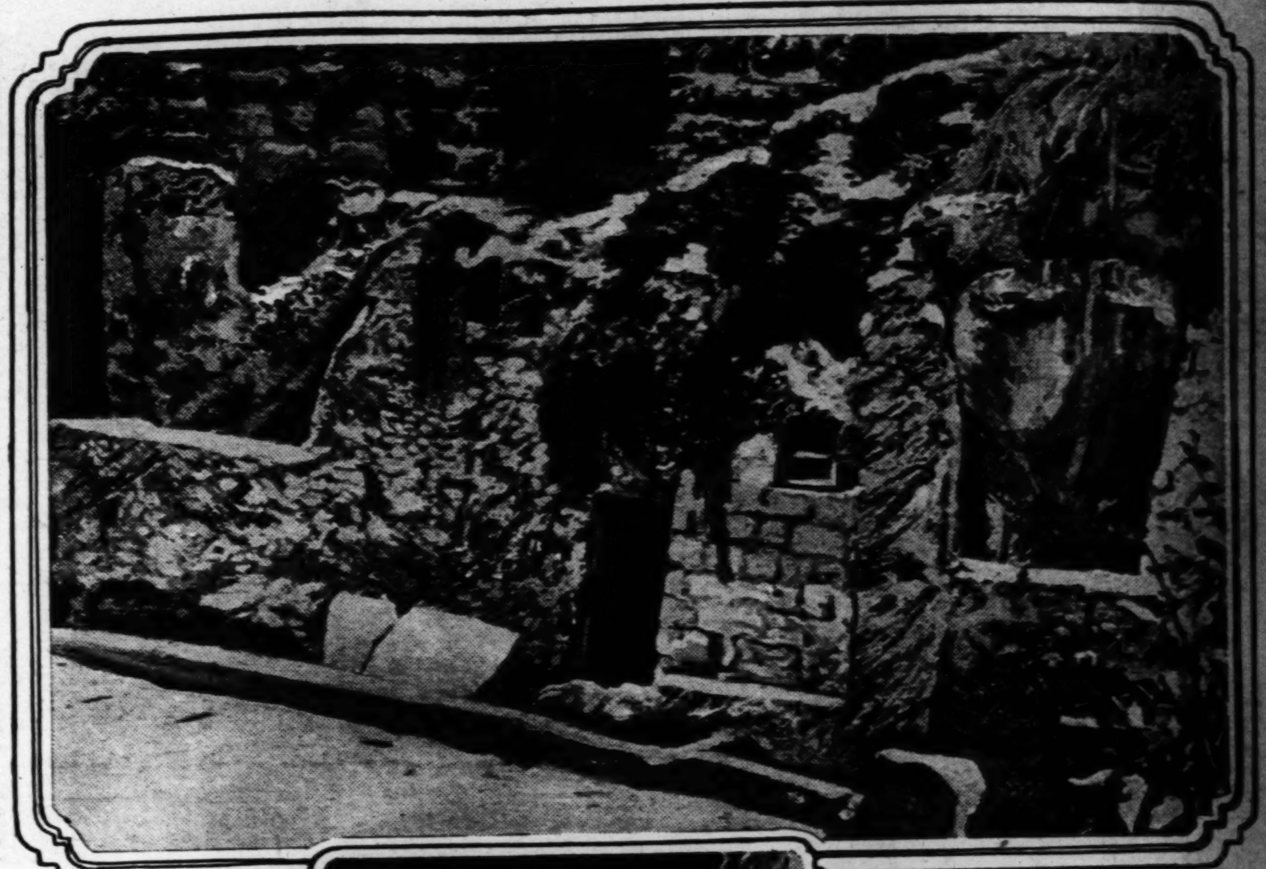
Can This Be the World's Most Sacred Tomb?

Discovery of a shrine of Venus at Damascus Gate of Jerusalem reopens controversy as to place of the Resurrection—Tradition has accepted the present site of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher—Was the Emperor Constantine wrong? — Stone just unearthed may be part of a pagan temple erected by the Emperor Hadrian to desecrate Christ's burial place.



Recently uncovered entrance to the Garden Tomb. There are traces of a large building which may have been the Temple of Venus erected by Hadrian.

FOLLOWING close upon the unearthing of the tomb of Tutankhamen there now comes a discovery which may have an important bearing on controversies as to the exact location of another tomb of far greater significance to the Christian world—the Tomb of Resurrection, where Christ was buried and where "on the third day he rose again from the dead."

This discovery, when first dug up recently by English excavators in an ancient place known as the Garden Tomb, just outside the Damascus Gate of Jerusalem, seemed to be only an irregularly shaped block of stone, incrusted with the grime of many centuries.

One of the excavators noted that the stone seemed to have markings on it. A report was made to the British Department of Antiquities and further examination of the stone was made by an expert, who identified it as a shrine of the Goddess Venus, with a carving of the column and tree of Adonis.

The Garden Tomb where the stone was found has been regarded by many as the "true Tomb of the Resurrection," despite the old and valiantly supported tradition that the place of the resurrection is the one now marked by the Church of the Holy Sepulcher inside the walls of the modern city of Jerusalem.

The significance attached to the finding of a shrine of Venus at the Garden Tomb lies in the accepted historic fact that after the suppression of a revolt in Palestine in the second century the Emperor Hadrian built a new Roman city on the site of Jerusalem and, among other things, erected a temple of Venus over the Tomb of the Resurrection for the purpose of completely desecrating it.

Those who have been excavating in and around the Garden Tomb have all along contended that the finding of any evidence of a shrine to Venus would aid in identifying that place as the scene of the Resurrection.

"Outside the Garden Tomb," writes the Rev. C. C. Dobson in the London Times, "are the distinct traces of a large building which once stood there, as may easily be seen in any photograph of the entrance of the Tomb. On either side of the door are the springs of two arches cut into the rock, and above the door are three columbaria, or recesses, usually found in heathen temples. A stone pavement and a column also exist. Those who view this tomb as the possible scene of the Resurrection have always regarded these traces as those of the Temple of Venus erected by Hadrian, but it was felt that further proofs of identification were needed.

"If the identification of this stone as a shrine of Venus be finally established, it will naturally provide very strong additional evidence for this conclusion. It would, of course, follow that the definite identification of the remains of a Temple of Venus over a large Jewish tomb of the period, which otherwise bears out all descriptions of the Tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, must naturally carry with it a strong presumption that that tomb may indeed be no other than that of the Resurrection itself.

"This stone may thus be found to be another and important link in the chain of identification. Some account of the Garden Tomb will be of interest. It lies in the slope of "the Skull Hill," just outside the Damascus Gate. Attention was first drawn to it by the late Gen. Gordon a few years after its discovery in 1867. He had become convinced that the so-called Skull Hill was no other than the Hill of Calvary, and this conviction led to his seeking for and re-unearthing this tomb.

"Owing to the publicity thus given to it at the time, the Tomb and surrounding ground were secured by a German as a matter of speculation, and he offered it for sale for $10,000.

"A strong committee was formed in England to purchase it, and an appeal, supported by the then Archbishop of Canterbury and many other prominent men, was made in the columns of the Times, on the grounds that the Tomb might be that of the Resurrection, but in any case was an excellent example of the kind of Jewish tomb used at the time.

"In spite of the 'laudable moderation' with which it was made, this appeal naturally did not go unchallenged, especially on the part of those who, loth to deviate from tradition, had hitherto favored the old recognized site in the middle of the city. For some time a controversy was carried on. The purchase was eventually completed, and ever since the Tomb has been preserved, together with the garden around it as possibly the most hallowed spot of Christendom, although the trustees have never dogmatized about it.

"Some years later further remarkable discoveries were made. The ground adjoining proved to be an early Christian burial ground, as one would expect to find near the Tomb of the Resurrection, and contained the ruins of an early church. In a vault adjoining the Tomb two tombstones were unearthed bearing inscriptions to Nonnus and Onesimus, deacons of the Church of the Resurrection,' and 'buried near my Lord,' although the latter inscription, less legible than the other, has been questioned. But it should be added that those who support this Tomb do not depend only on external evidences. They find in its form of construction many interesting features, some of them unique, bearing out and throwing light upon the details of the Bible story."

The shrine is 10 inches long and seven inches wide. It lay buried in the soil in front of the rock face of the tomb entrance.

Many difficult questions are raised by the discovery. The historian Eusebius, who was a contemporary of the Emperor Constantine, records that Constantine caused the destruction of a temple of Venus to make way for the church which he built. Tradition holds that this church was on the present site of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher.

As an argument for the other side of the controversy it has been pointed out that St. Willibald, after a pilgrimage to Jerusalem about the year 730, asserted that the Empress Helena, mother of Constantine, arranged for the building of the church within the city of Jerusalem, though the reputed place of the Resurrection "was formerly outside Jerusalem."

The traditional site of both Golgotha and the tomb of Jesus is that now covered by the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, well within the modern city of Jerusalem.

The authenticity of the traditional site was not disputed until 1741, when Jonas Korte asserted that, being within the city walls, it could not be the true sit of the Tomb of the Resurrection. Korte supposed that the modern north wall was in existence at the time of the crucifixion, but in fact it was built later.

Edward Robinson, in his Biblical Researches in 1841, disputed the correctness of the traditional site on the supposition that the second wall of Josephus (the north wall in Christ's day) passed to the north of the site, which therefore must have been within the city.

Excavations made by Conrad Schick, about 1888, made it virtually certain that the wall lay south and east of the site of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, which therefore was outside the city and may well have been the scene of the crucifixion and burial.

How to Detect "Culture" Pearls

"CULTURE"—pearls are those produced, according to the methods recently developed in Japan, by placing a small bit of foreign matter inside the pearl oyster, returning the oyster to the sea and allowing a pearl to develop around the artificial substance introduced. Such pearls are made of the same materials as are the fully natural ones, and jewelers have been unable to distinguish the "culture" and the "real" ones except by sawing them apart—an operation too expensive to be employed willingly.

Recently, however, the distinguished microscopist of Washington, Dr. F. E. Wright, reported to the Washington Academy of Sciences that "culture" pearls could be detected by two little spots of light that appear on them when properly exposed under the microscope, these spots being due to internal reflection of light from the tiny fragment of mother-of-pearl usually used as a nucleus about which the "culture" pearl is grown.

Dr. Wright has another ingenious method for detecting the origin of a pearl. When pearls are to be strung as a necklace—as most of the best pearls are—a small hole is bored through the pearl. Dr. Wright melts a tiny bead of gold on the end of a very fine gold wire. He inserts this into the hole in the pearl. It serves as a mirror, and by pointing his microscope down the hole Dr. Wright can actually see in his little gold mirror what the inside of the pearl is like.

COLORED ONIONS REPEL GERMS

IN THE course of an investigation of some plant diseases that attack the common onion plant, Dr. J. C. Walker has discovered that the colored varieties of onions are highly resistant to the diseases, whereas the pure white onions succumb at once. The secret is that the skins of the colored onions contain a chemical which is poisonous to the germs causing the disease. If one of these germs tries to penetrate into the colored onion bulb the germ is killed. White onions lack this germ poison and disease finds them, therefore, an easy prey.

The Importance of Explosives in Various Industries in Peace Time.

By GEORGE G. KING,
President Institute of Makers of Explosives.

THE manufacture of explosives in the United States is, in many respects, the basic or key industry on which other industries depend. The coal, metal mining, steel, quarrying, transportation and other industries could not be carried on as they are today without the use of explosives.

Last year more than 500,000,000 pounds of explosives of all kinds were manufactured in the United States and were employed for the innumerable uses of industry and science.

Modern explosives make possible the building of good roads as we know them; in fact, about 1000 pounds of dynamite and blasting powder are used for every mile of roads built in our country. These explosives are employed in getting out stone from the quarries, in clearing the right of way and in drainage.

Nearly everything that we use in our highly complex civilization has a relation to, or is based on, explosives, in some aspect of its manufacture. The great factor of cheap power in our civilization is coal, and last year more than 140,000,000 pounds of blasting powder, besides large quantities of dynamite, were used to mine it.

Explosives enter into the manufacture of such a widely used necessity as the automobile, because without them the metals for the machines could not be produced in the quantity required. It has been calculated that to produce one of the small and widely used cars whose name is familiar to everyone, one and four-hundredth pounds of dynamite are represented in its manufacture.

Explosives also have a part in the production of such a common and useful tool of modern life as the telephone. The various metals which go into the manufacture of this instrument, including aluminum, iron, copper, tin, lead, zinc, silver, gold, platinum, mica and nickel are all produced through the use of explosives in one way or another. Other materials are brought to the place of assembly over railroads, roads or waterways constructed through the use of explosives.

But it is not only the automobile and the telephone, but practically every other tool, machine or utensil of our daily lives which are dependent on modern explosives for their production. The list runs from the alarm clock which wakes us up in the morning to the ice cream which we have for dessert at dinner. The connection of ice cream with modern explosives may not be apparent to the listener until it is remembered that thousands of pounds of rock salt used in making this confection are blasted out with dynamite.

For the first time in history, man is using explosives to help him in raising food. Stump land is being cleared with dynamite in order to make possible more acres of tillable ground. Thousands of acres of swampy and useless lowlands are being turned into good farms by drainage ditches which were blasted out with dynamite.

Fruit trees and other trees are being planted by dynamite and it is found that such planting greatly increases the vigor of the trees and allows them to produce more abundant yields. Old orchards which appear to have passed their usefulness are being rejuvenated by dynamite which, set between the rows of trees and detonated, seems to loosen the ground so that the roots can obtain more food.

Engineers are using dynamite successfully in ridding certain parts of the country of mosquitoes and malarial fever. This is done by blasting ditches to drain ground, for it has been found that in many parts of the country dynamite is the only agent which can economically open up a ditch through woods and swamps filled with debris.

With the invention of dynamite, man for the first time has been able to blast out rocks and reefs at the bottom of harbors and thus we have some of the most important submarine explosive work going on.

The uses of explosives today seem to be numberless. Besides their employment in the basic industries, men are using them to scrap old machinery, tear down walls, break ice jams, blast away snow in high mountain passes, crumble concrete abutments, dig foundations for skyscrapers, keep the sea lanes clear of icebergs and derelicts, take out parts of machinery which have become wedged and open frozen sluice gates. Explosives even have been used to hunt sharks at sea for the purpose of obtaining sharks' leather.

All these are peace-time uses. Explosives are produced for commercial purposes. Dynamite has no place in war. Black powder is no longer used as a propellant in war, its place having been taken by smokeless powder. The great future of modern explosives is in the peace-time development of the country; in building roads, in blasting out materials to construct houses, in helping to build railroads, and in the useful development of mines, industries and farms.

HEARING RESTORED OFTEN IN 24 HOURS

Amazing Results Secured in One Day By Use of Virex, Formerly Known as Rattle Snake Oil.

Deafness and Head Noises need not be dreaded any longer since the discovery of a widely known physician. Now it is possible for some of the most obstinate cases of deafness to be relieved in a day's time by the application of a prescription formerly known as Rattle Snake Oil. This treatment is meeting with wide success all over the country.

Mr. D. Dey, a Nebraska resident, 67 years old, says, "I have used the treatment for only two weeks and my hearing is restored perfectly. The relief was almost instantaneous and now the head noises have disappeared. My catarrh, a case of many years standing, is improving wonderfully."

Mr. Ben Jackson, who lives in Indiana, says, "Before I used Virex I could hear nothing. After ten days I could hear my watch tick."

Angeline Johnson, a Mississippi resident had been stone deaf for eighteen years. She says "Virex has stopped my head noises and I can hear the train whistle 3½ miles away."

Roy Fisher, Iowa man, says, "I hadn't heard a watch tick for eleven years—now I can lay my watch on the table and hear it plainly."

Mr. W. A. Lumpkin, of Oklahoma, says, "After being deaf 38 years, I used your treatment only a few days and hear fairly well."

Mr. Anthony Chapman, of Michigan, says, "The terrible head noises have stopped entirely and my hearing is practically back to normal."

Deaf Baby Now Hears.

Mrs. Ola Valentine, of Arkansas, says, "My little boy, now 5 years old, had been deaf since about 4 months of age. Now he hears very well and is learning to talk."

Mr. Mather Pelleys says, "My young son, deaf for years, has used Virex for only three days and he hears almost as well as ever before."

Such amazing reports come from all over this country and Canada. The prescription which is known as Virex, is easily used at home and seems to work like magic in its rapidity on people of all ages.

So confident are we that Virex will restore your hearing quickly, and to introduce this remarkable treatment to a million more sufferers, we will send a large $2.00 treatment for only $1.00 on ten days' free trial. If the results are not satisfactory the treatment costs nothing.

Send no money—just your name and address to the Dale Laboratories, 417 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Use it according to the simple directions. If at the end of 10 days your hearing is not relieved, your head noises gone entirely, just send it back and your money will be refunded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write today and give this wonderful compound a trial.

Charlotte Bronte and Brussels of Today.

BRUSSELS has many associations with literary England. There are, for instance, the famous Brussels chapters of "Vanity Fair"; there was the inevitably flamboyant sojourn of Byron; and finally there was Charlotte Bronte.

But the Brussels of Charlotte Bronte is, alas, to a great extent a thing of the past. Readers of "Villette" who go in search of the original of the "quaint rue Fossette" must prepare for a great disappointment. Probably they remember that from the rue Royale just behind the Belliard statue a flight of steps leads down to a lower level and terminates opposite the entrance to the pensionnat Heger, and they set off on a journey of exploration. But they have not counted on the town-planning zeal of the Bruxellois.

The flight of steps has been replaced by a highly ornamental staircase with a sculptured fountain at the bottom, and, what is more deplorable, all the houses of the old rue Isabelle which figure in the novel as the rue Fossette have been razed to make room for a wide new street, the rue Ravenstein, and among them has perished the pensionnat Heger, on whose site now rises the imposing building which is the headquarters of the leading Belgian bank. There is not even a tablet to draw the attention of the passing Englishman to a spot where one of the greatest women of his race lived during the crucial years of her life.

The only Bronte relic of importance left in Brussels is the French Protestant Chapel in the rue du Musee where Charlotte attended frequently during her stay. It is rather difficult to find because its entrance has been incorporated in the architectural scheme of the facade of the Belgian Royal Archives, but it well repays a visit, if only because it awakes speculation as to the effect its decoration and its service had on the tortured, sensitive soul of Charlotte. In appearance it has many affinities with the average Nonconformist chapel in England, except that its marble columns and the quasi-idolatry of the allegorical picture painted on the wall behind the pulpit are more of a concession to the esthetic than are usually to be met with in such a place.

The plan of the church, with its gallery running round three sides, the pews covered in dark, dusty green baize, the small pulpit draped in the same cloth, all these recall unpretentious chapels in the home country. It is quite a small place, very quiet within its thick, painted walls and padded doors. And outside there is no rumble of traffic, no clanging of tramcars, none of the Sunday clatter of the boulevards, only the shuttered shops of the sellers of prints and woodcuts and across the lawns and their shrubs the sunlit pilasters of the Royal Library.

Perhaps in these secluded precincts Charlotte may have found that for which she must have longed so often and needed so desperately, rest for mind and body.—John o' London's Weekly.

Scientist Devises Tests for Auto Drivers.

A GOOD automobile driver must have certain definite psychological characteristics. For example, he must have what the scientists call a short "reaction time"—which means that the fraction of a second which elapses between the time that he sees someone in the road in front of him and the time that he applies his brakes must be a very short fraction of a second. People differ in this. Some people take much longer than others to make simple "reactions" like this. Such people make poor automobile drivers.

All this has been known to the psychologists for some time, but it has been put to little practical use.

Recently, however, Dr. A. J. Snow of the department of psychology at Northwestern University, at Evanston, Ill., has devised a series of such tests for taxicab drivers. He is able to determine with some reasonable certainty just how quickly a driver will act in an emergency and whether he will act wisely or will "lose his head" for an instant and precipitate an accident.

Dr. Snow believes that were tests like these required of all candidates for commercial drivers' licenses the percentage of accidents would be reduced and many misfit men would be induced to seek occupations for which they are better suited.

Here's the Secret

I had become utterly discouraged with a heavy growth of hair on my face and lip. I tried every way to get rid of it—all the depilatories I had heard of, electrolysis, even a razor. I tried every advertised remedy, but all were disappointments.

I thought it was hopeless until there came to me the simple but truly wonderful discovery which has brought such great relief and joy to me and to other women that it really cannot be expressed in words.

My face is now not only perfectly free from superfluous hair but smooth and soft as a baby's, all by use of the simple method which I will gladly explain to any woman who will write to me.

This amazing method is different from anything you have ever used—not a powder, paste, wax or liquid, not a razor, not electricity. It will remove superfluous hair at once and will make the skin soft, smooth and beautifully attractive. Its use means an adorable appearance. And you face the brightest light—the most brilliant electric lamps—even the glare of sunlight joyously.

With this method, used according to the simple directions I will give you, your trouble with superfluous hair is over permanently. You will never again appear with that ugly growth to disfigure your face.

So overjoyed was I with the results this discovery brought to me that I gave it my own name—Lanzette.

The Advantage of Having a Musical Name.

IT IS doubtful, indeed, if, from an esthetic point of view, there is not always a disadvantage in a multiplicity of names. Kings are commonly baptized with more names than even they themselves can possibly remember, but as a rule only one of the long catalogue is used, and a King—like a commoner—is content to be known by a single Christian name like Edward or George.

These royal names are for the most part simple and popular. There has been no King Algernon in England. Algernon, for some unaccountable reason, is a name that would seem a little pretentious even in a King. It used to seem to many people absurd in a poet, and it would be possible to argue, if not to prove, that the early failure of Swinburne's inspiration was due to the fact that his Christian name was too much for his genius, says a writer in The New Statesman, published in London.

Certainly, most of the English poets have had names from association with which the muses would not shrink. From Geoffrey Chaucer to Alfred Tennyson, most of them seem to have carried within their names a destiny of poetry. John Keats is the outstanding exception, though I am not sure that even his name would appear quite so ugly if "Keats" were pronounced so as to rhyme with "greats," as it may once have been.

Shelley, it is true, though he had a beautiful surname, also suffered from a name that was not beautiful all through. Speak of him as Shelley and you seem to have the essence of his poetry; speak of him as "Percy Bysshe Shelley" and you have at once the incongruities of his life in a few syllables.

How beautiful in comparison is the name of Mary Shelley! How modest and how musical! Perhaps it is partly because of her name that some of us can hardly bear to hear her criticised. A clever young writer was recently sneering at her because she did not like Shelley to dress in such a peculiar way that people stared at them when they were out walking. But how could a woman with so beautiful a name be expected to sympathize with eccentricities of clothes?

It is easy to forgive Shelley 100 years later, but we who forgive him have not to appear in public with him, feeling responsible, as a wife would, for his being properly dressed.

On this point Mary Shelley was wiser than Percy Bysshe Shelley, and the grace of her wisdom is in her name. He had only an inspired surname, while she had a name that was inspired from the first letter to the last. How well she knew that his genius lay in his surname is clear from that legend of the meeting on the stairs when he breathed the name "Mary!" and she replied "Shelley!" Substitute "Percy!" for "Shelley!" and the world loses one of its beautiful stories.

George Moore some years ago worked out a theory of the appropriateness of the names of men of genius. Surely, the parents of Oliver Goldsmith were unconscious prophets when they gave him so admirable a name. It is as though "The Vicar of Wakefield" had already been begun on the day of his baptism. There have, it is true, been men of genius who have been given names unworthy of them by their parents, but, as often as not, in recent times, they have in later life taken names that seem to fit them perfectly.

Three of the most famous writers in Europe at present—Anatole France, Gabrielle d'Annunzio and Joseph Conrad—have signed works of genius with names of genius, but the names were not given to them in the presence of godfathers.

Again and again we find the man of genius striving for perfection in his name as in his writing. How great a difference Robert Louis Stevenson made by changing the spelling of his second name, "Lewis"! Whether parents can endow a child with genius merely by giving him a perfect name is a matter on which there may be two opinions. But it would be interesting to inquire whether there have been more than one Rudyard Kipling even in name.

And we have much the same feeling in regard to the names of beautiful women. If you fell in love with a beautiful unknown woman, you would be horrified to learn that she had not a name in conformity with her features. You would be like Nicholas Nickleby when he sent Newman Noggs to make inquiries about the lovely lady with whom he had fallen in love. When Newman returned Nicholas asked him eagerly: "The name, the name, my dear fellow!" "The name's Bobster," said Newman. "Bobster!" cried Nicholas, in horror. "That's the name," said Newman.

An Indictment of the Usual American Breakfast.

"OF ALL the misnomers in dietary language, breakfast seems to be the most fantastic." So declares Philip M. Lovell, N. D., in the Los Angeles Times, explaining his reasons for the statement and roundly criticising the average American breakfast, in the following article.

Food has two primary functions—to replenish the body tissues and to recharge the body with energy. When you have slept soundly, restfully, dreamlessly and peacefully for eight or nine hours (which should be the general minimum) you should awaken fresh and brimming with vitality. Were you to make an analysis of your energies for any 24-hour period you would find that you are strongest in the morning and weakest at night.

The body does not need recharging when it is at its best, in the morning.

Hot cakes, waffles, refined package cereals (misnamed breakfast foods), eggs, bacon, ham, sausage, stewed fruit, sugar, cream and coffee—from this list is taken the breakfast of perhaps 90 per cent of the American people. Every one of these foods, regardless of its merit as an individual food, is far too concentrated to be served for breakfast. A meal of this kind is as much as the strongest laborer can burn up with hard physical toil.

The sedentary worker, the housewife, in her state of high nervous tension, the clerk and shop girl with their monotonous routine, will find this breakfast debilitating and nerve exhausting.

For those who are nervous, it will make them more nervous; for those who are constipated it will make them more constipated; for those who are acid it will make them more acid—in fact, this breakfast reconstructs little or nothing and accentuates any disease which may be present. I do not know of a single condition of health or disease where this breakfast, the average American morning meal, is justifiable.

When you wake up with that "dark-brown" taste, bad breath and coated tongue, nature is telling you, in undeniable language, that your body is loaded with waste. The tongue and mouth are but the external portions of the digestive tube, which is approximately 30 feet long. If the tongue and breath are foul, the stomach and intestines are foul. If the tongue be thick and coated with mucus, the intestinal walls will be inflamed and coated.

Surplus food and irritating food have caused this condition. The mucus and foul breath are nature's attempt toward cleansing the digestive tube. Give nature but half a chance and she will work wonders in your behalf. Merely the short fast of 10 or 12 hours, from the meal of the night before to the next morning's awakening, is sufficient to start active elimination.

The average hot cake and coffee, etc., breakfast not only stops this elimination, but by further irritating and clogging makes a curable condition incurable. For persons who are overweight, constipated, sluggish and debilitated, breakfast of any kind is totally unnecessary.

To get rid of that bad taste and foul odor, a glass or two of lemon juice and water, flavored with a teaspoonful of honey, if desired, will wash down the mucus and give a feeling of well-being.

With the exception of the breakfast for the strenuous manual worker, I know of no better breakfast than fresh or dried fruits. This does not mean glaced fruits, or preserved fruits, or pickled fruits, or artificially sweetened fruits. Nor for that matter does it mean fruit juices. The orange is superior to orange juice, the fig to fig juice, the prune to prune juice, and so on with all fruits.

I know of no more delicious and wholesome breakfast than a fruit salad made of three or four varieties of fresh or dried fruits, mixed with nuts and flavored with a little honey, the whole garnished with ground or shredded coconut.

It was what one might term a perfect thrill, of its kind. Hysterical women were weeping. Some of the men likewise developed fits of hysteria. The Judge was the only person in the chamber who kept composure, yet he indicated in his expression that he, too, was stirred deeply.

"Madame," said the Court, "tell your name."

"I am Claudine Fournet," said the woman, still clinging to Louis Derisbourg, whose arms still encircled her. The prisoner stooped, picked up the fallen walking stick, placed it in the woman's hands, then continued to encircle her with one arm as she told her story to the Court:

"I was born in a village in the southern part of France. I grew up there as an innocent girl, a daughter of people poor and upright. When I was 16, it seemed the best thing for me to come to Paris and find work, thus relieving my parents of supporting me. I became a housemaid in an aristocratic family in the city. I liked my work and was happy enough, but the young son of the house looked upon me as he should not have done. He was handsome, rich, educated; I was poor, ignorant and pretty. That young man made love to me, he turned my head, he had his way with me.

"It is the old story—for a part of the way, anyhow. I had a baby, a sweet little son. I loved him, and wanted to keep him. But he who was my baby's father would do nothing for me or for our child. I had to leave my place, quite of course, before the baby came. I could not support myself with an infant on my hands. 'Send the brat to an orphanage,' insisted his father, who was going ahead in his gay life and would have nothing further to do with me. I left my baby at the home for poor infants mentioned by this boy, surrendering him absolutely, so that he never could know who he was or who his people were.

"Your Honor, this boy is my baby. I never heard of him after I left him at the orphanage until the other day when I read about this terrible case. Then I knew he was my own son, and since that moment I have suffered intolerable agonies of remorse.

"After this boy's father deserted me and him, I met, in course of time, the honest workingman who is my husband now and has been for many years. We were married in the regular way, and he never knew that I had been the mother of a child. I feared that if I told him he would not marry me. I told him only when I read about this case, read what my boy had told this Court about the sorry life he was forced to lead because I, his mother, abandoned him to his fate.

"Your Honor, I insist that I am really guilty, not my boy, and I beg you to be merciful to him and to behead me instead of him."

"No, no, my mother—no, no!" cried the prisoner. "You are not to blame, not at all! I alone am guilty."

Standing thus before the bar of the Criminal Court, mother and son, reunited in this remarkable manner, clung to each other and wept together. The Judge coughed slightly, cleared his throat, made some brief remarks to the effect that it was a painful scene, but that the law must have its way.

Then the Court again began delivering the sentence of death. He finished the delivery, that time, and Claudine Fournet fainted in the arms of her son.

down and leaped after them into the boat.

Alice clutched at the sleeves of her coat, plucking at the cloth. The world for her grew dizzy, and whirled about until black water and silvery moon and frosted mists were all a seething of neutral gray. Out of this came to her the sound of the oarlocks—clack-clack; clack-clack! The little boat was sliding away into the mists.

"Wait!" came the voice of The Nightingale. "One of us will come for you. I said I'd throw this thing away. Listen!"

She raised her head and saw that the fog had nearly shut off the sight of the craft in which the two men sat, as impersonal to the vision as two bags of meal upon the seats.

"Go back to the village!" Denny called to her. "For the love of heaven don't wait—don't wait!"

Clack-clack; clack-clack. The oarlocks, moving monotonously under the human hands, sounded like some monstrous clock of eternity. Clack-clack; clack-clack! Fainter and fainter. She could hear the little waves again lapping at the pile below her. The cold crept down her neck and up her sleeves, but it was not as cruel as the cold within. At 4 that afternoon, she had been copying mail orders on her typewriting machine, beside a radiator which had hissed; this seemed many centuries ago. The sound of the oars was now barely audible. Alice threw herself down on her knees and stared out into the gray blank from which there now came no sight, no sound, nothing but the salty, cold breath of the sea.

"Denny!" she called. "Denny!"

Far off, from across the narrow bay, beyond the ridge of summer estates on the farther shore, there sounded faintly the strokes of the great clock in the village tower. It was 9. The little stenographer took her knuckles between her white teeth. She stared into the fog, which answered nothing. Her aching eyes asked it questions; her yearnings ears asked it questions; but the fog answered nothing.

"Denny!" she called. "Denny!"

There was no answer. Denny had gone with The Nightingale. She was alone. Denny had warned her to go back; the mystery of the fog held her there, at the edge of Fothergill's pier, twisting her cold wrists in the grip of her cold hands, under the moon.

Now and then she raised her gaze to this wintry moon upon which there advanced a thousand little clouds, dragging after them across the sky a great black mass of obscurity. The little clouds slid over the moon's face, turning the fog from silver to thick gray. Alice could see the black mass of storm clouds behind them moving on ponderously. These clouds would smother the moon; Alice wondered vaguely why the moon did not run away across the sky and elude them. As she gazed up, strands of her own golden hair were slapped across her face by the freshening breeze coming over the black water. The fog was running past her now, as if it had seen a terrible sight from which it fled.

"Denny!" she called.

Alice did not dare to call again.

The boat was coming back. Clack-clack; clack-clack! The sound was nearer; the strokes were faster now.

She wanted to call out during these terrible minutes, but something within her pleaded with her not to do so. Instead, she crawled to the edge of the pier and stared down at the smothering blackness.

The clack of the oar locks was almost beneath her at last.

The moon struggled to break through some thin place in the somber blanket which had covered her; a last suffusion of her radiance came down upon the sea. There was only one man in the boat. His form, sitting in the rower's seat, was as impersonal as a bag of meal.

Alice did not dare to call out. Something said to her——

The boat bumped the piles below her.

"Alice!" the voice of her lover called.

"Denny!"

"Here; take this." He reached above him, holding something toward her until he felt her hand close about it. "He sent it to you. It's that white rose he wore."

Denny lifted himself onto the edge of the pier, and, reaching forward and taking her into his arms, he stared out across the water as if he were in a dream.

"Denny!" she said. "Denny, speak to me! There's no blood on your head?"

Now You Can End Superfluous Hair Like I Did Mine
At Once And For All
Only a woman who has felt the horror and humiliation of a disfiguring hairy growth on the face, neck, arms and legs can possibly know what joy and happiness came over me when first I realized that at last all trace of superfluous hair had gone and my skin was clear, soft and smooth like that of a babe. And this after years of torture and disappointment with almost every depilatory, liquid, wax, paste, powder and other method, including razors, that I had ever heard of. Before I hit upon the simple, easy, harmless new way which has given me such amazing and lasting relief from my affliction, the ugly hair always came back thicker and heavier than ever. When I confided to some of my friends how I had at last solved the age-old problem of getting rid of superfluous hair—at once and for all—they felt it would be selfish not to share my secret with others, so I have decided to explain exactly how I succeeded to any one interested ABSOLUTELY FREE if you will simply send me your name and address with a stamp for sealed reply.

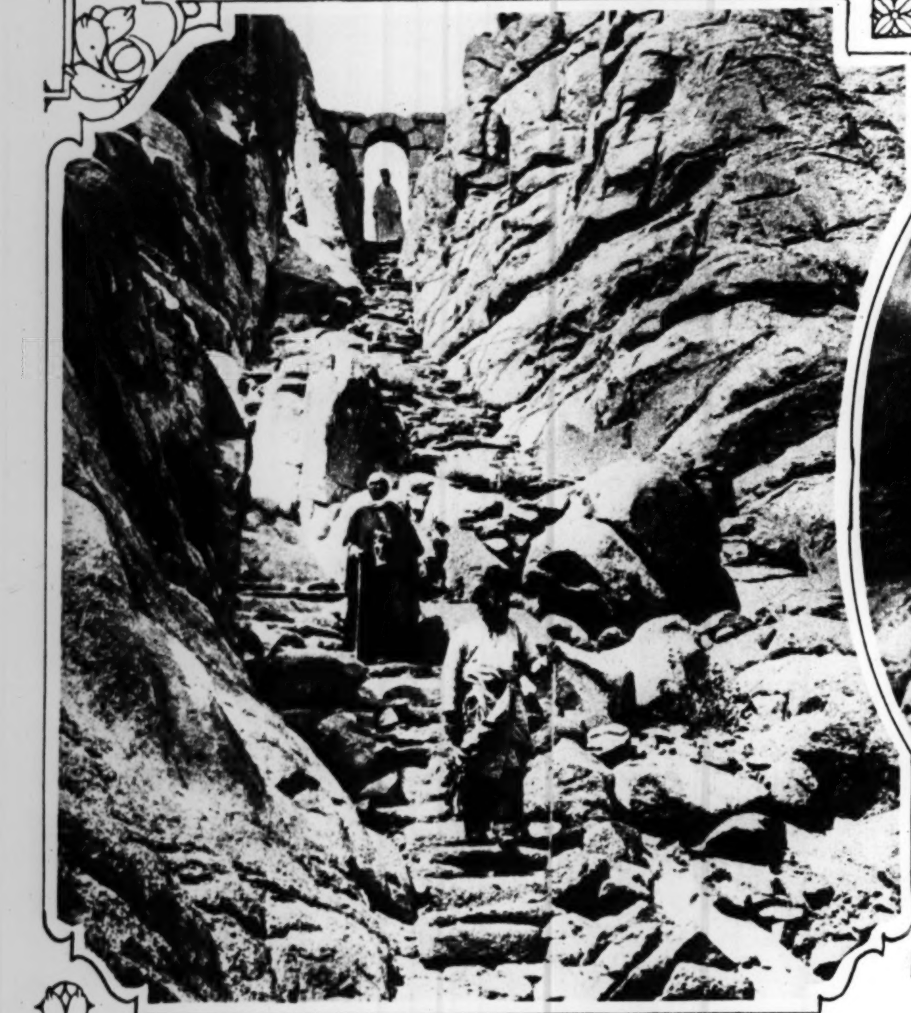
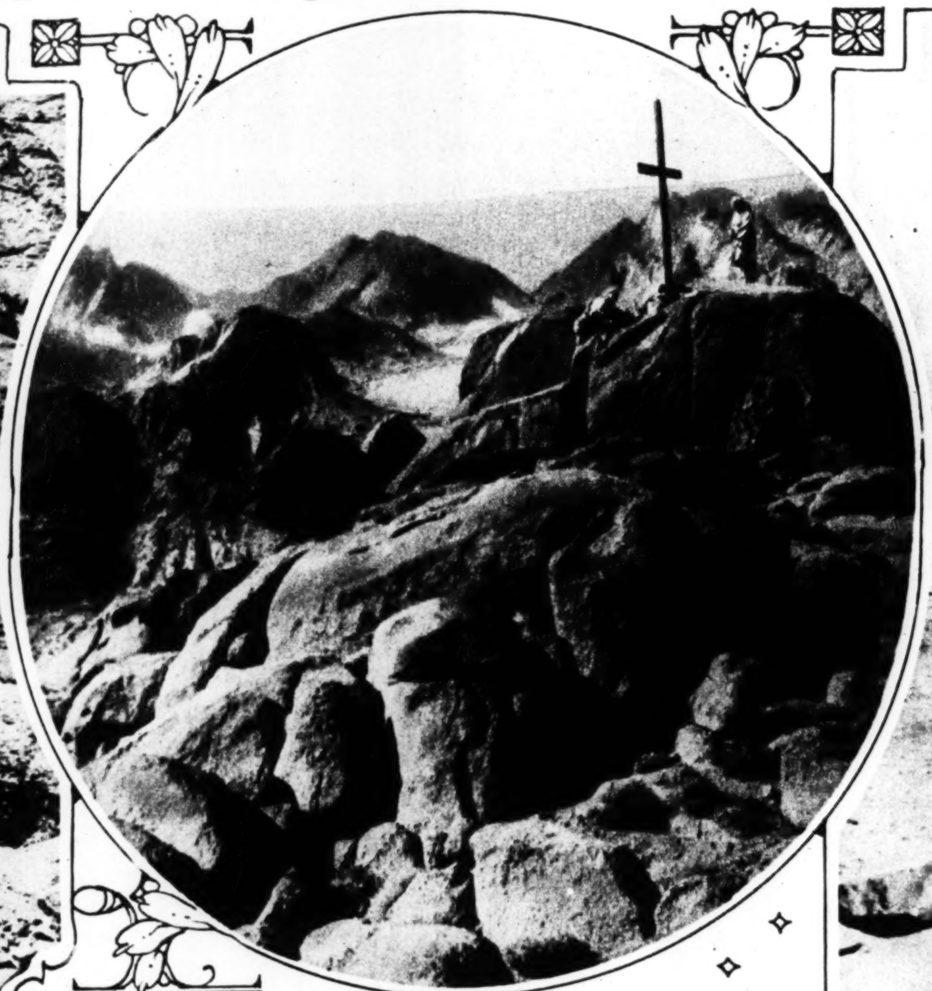
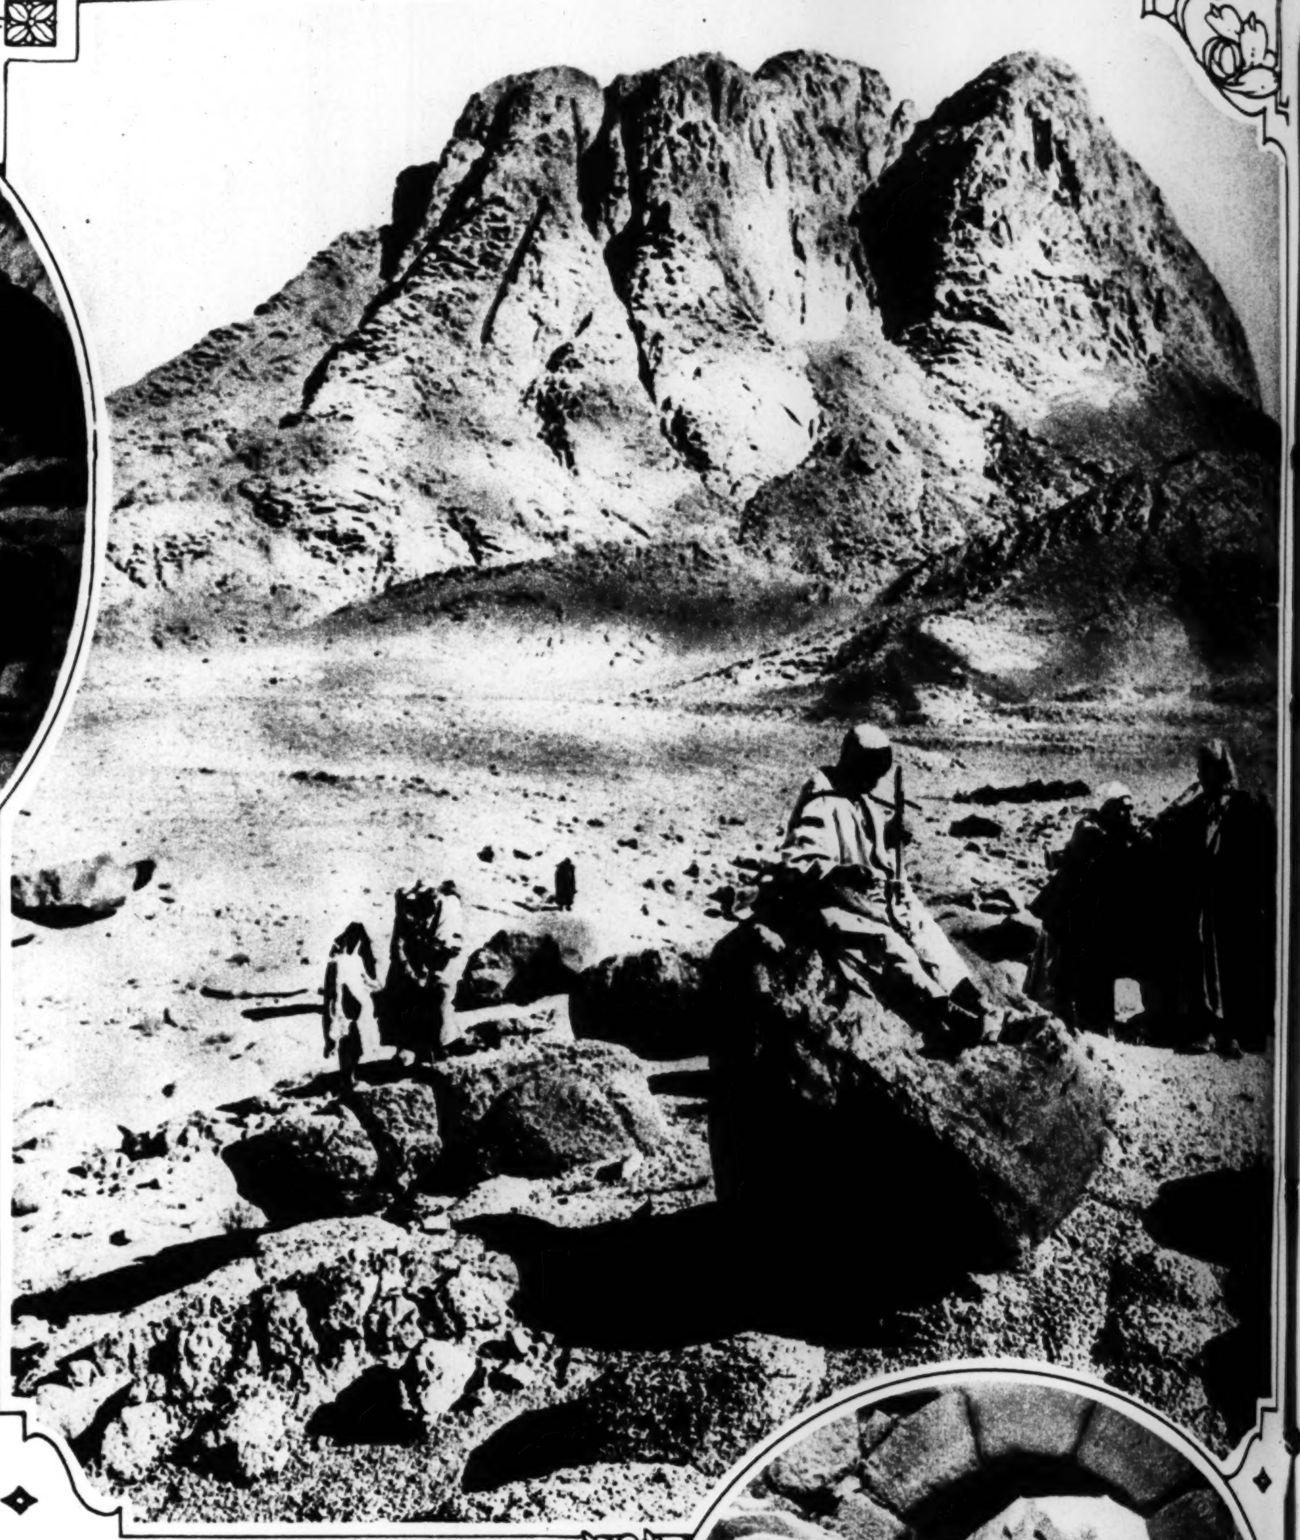
A PICTORIAL JOURNEY TO MOUNT SINAI IN 1924



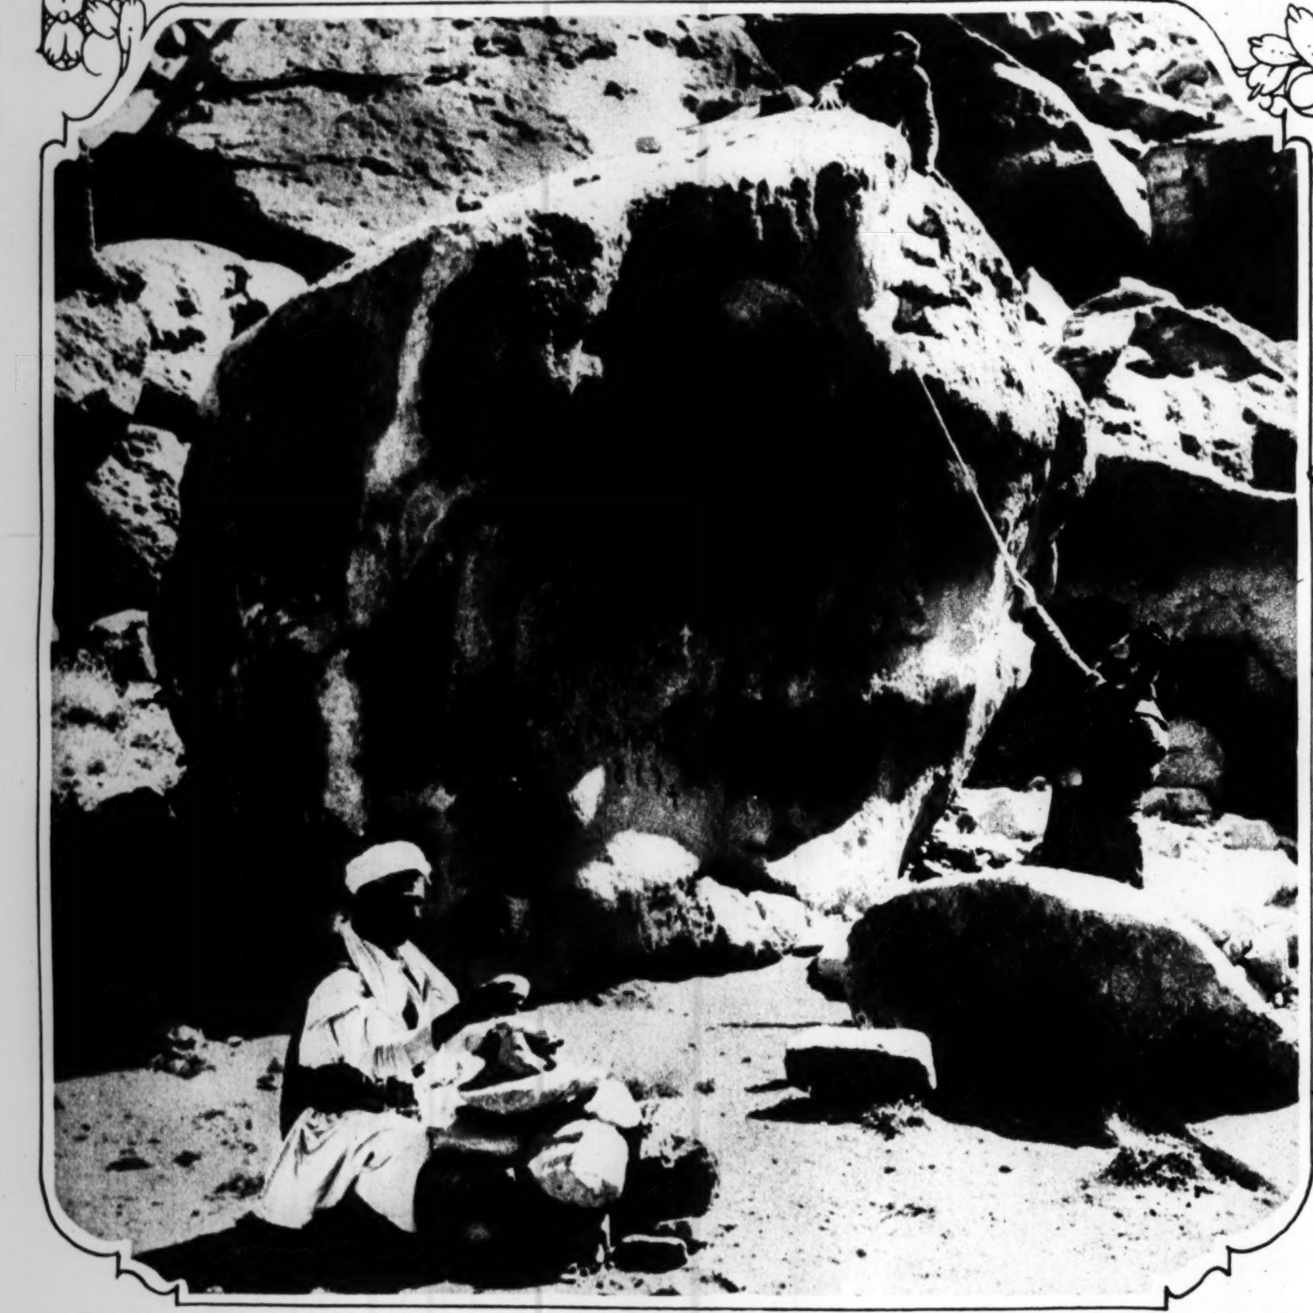
Stone steps leading up to Mount Sinai, Shrine Gate in distance. These steps are said to have been built by the Empress Helena. Only those absolved from sin may pass up them.



On the top of Mount Sinai, which commands the entire Plain of Assemblage. The cross marks the spot where Moses is supposed to have stood when delivering the Ten Commandments to the children of Israel.



The Mount of the Law, from the Plain of Assemblage, where Moses delivered the Ten Commandments to the children of Israel.



The big rock is said to have been the identical one which Moses struck when the children of Israel were in the wilderness. The monk is pointing to the reputed exact spot where the rod of Moses fell and from which sprang forth the stream of pure water to relieve the thirst of the Hebrews.

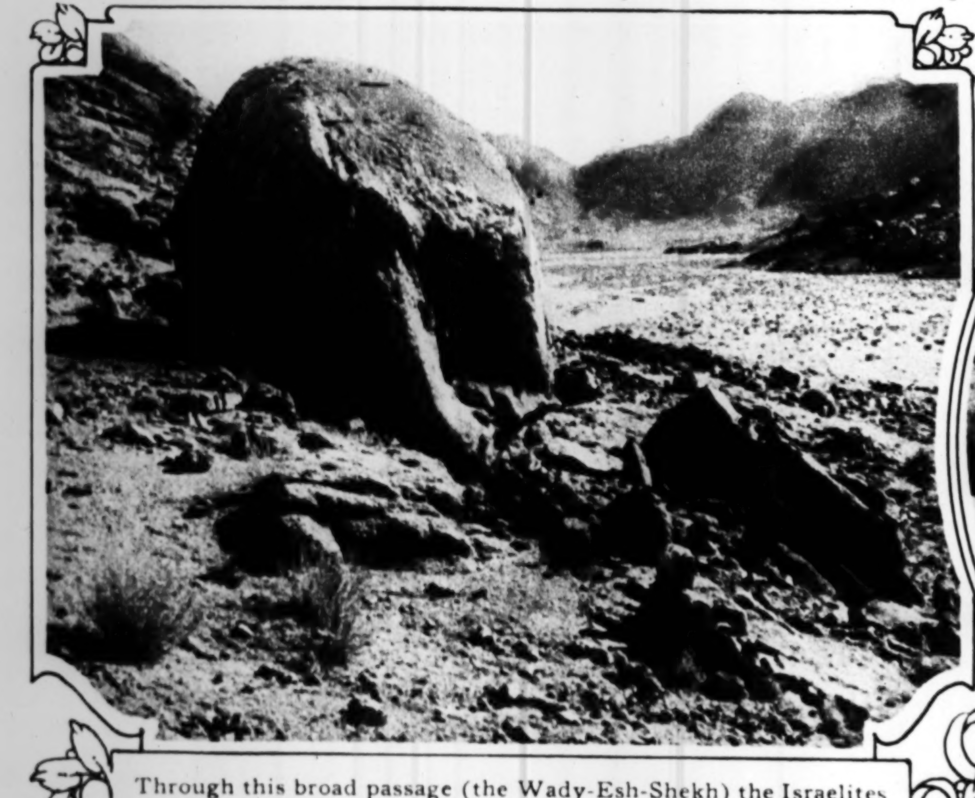
Close-up view of the Shrine Gate at the head of the Pilgrimage Stairway, leading from a portal of the St. Catherine Monastery up Mount Sinai. None may pass this portal until absolved of sin by the priests who live in the monastery.



Through this broad passage (the Wady-Esh-Shekh) the Israelites must have made their way toward the Promised Land, after having received the Ten Commandments at the foot of Mount Sinai.

Safeguard your health at The Danger Line

CHAMPIONS . . . their victories result from stamina. From that fine co-ordination of trained mind and sturdy muscle. From a perfect blend of "knowing how"—how to play the game, and how to keep fit for the game.

To keep fit, you must watch the little things that contribute greatly to health and stamina. Perhaps the best example is The Danger Line—that tiny V-shaped crevice where teeth meet gums. For at The Danger Line food particles collect and ferment, forming acids which attack the teeth and irritate the gums, causing Acid Decay and conditions favorable to devastating pyorrhea.

Stop Acid Decay at The Danger Line
Use Squibb's Dental Cream

Your dentist—any dentist—will approve milk of magnesia for counteracting acids in the mouth which cause decay. Squibb's Dental Cream is made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. It will prevent Acid Decay, not only at The Danger Line, but every other place on your teeth where trouble may begin. It will reduce the chances of pyorrhea. It will protect for hours after use. It will soothe and strengthen tender, bleeding gums and allay sensitiveness. And it cleans and brightens thoroughly.

Standardize on Squibb's Dental Cream in your home. Enjoy better, prettier teeth. Safeguard and promote the health of all the family. Buy the large tube to-day.

This picture carries a fourfold interest. First, it shows one of the many striking exhibits at the recent annual Missouri State Fair at Sedalia. Second, it indicates the rapid advance in locomotive construction, the two engines of the Missouri Pacific Railroad being a mammoth mogul of present-day use and one of the little fellows dating from 1880. Third, the biggest Boy Scout band in the world is shown as a Missouri enterprise. Fourth, beginning just beyond the corner of the tender at the right, the Missouri Pacific Band suggests that even a railroad has an ear for music.

Hundreds of cats, for hundreds of years, have inhabited the ruins of the ancient Forum in Rome. They are fortunate felines, being wards of the city. The special job of a municipal employe is to feed the cats every day, rations being provided from a public fund set aside for that purpose.

When Governor Bryan of Nebraska was notified of his nomination as Democratic candidate for Vice President, Brother William and the two sisters of the celebrated Bryans were on hand at Lincoln, and this group photograph was taken—the first, it is said, ever made of the four together. The sisters are Mrs. T. S. Allen, next to Charles, and Mrs. J. W. Baird, next to William.

"Who's that littlest girl in the chorus?" inquired many who attended the production of "Carmen" at the St. Louis Municipal Theater the last week in August. Well, here she is, in costume—Gretchen Kimmel, 8-year-old daughter of former Circuit Judge and Mrs. Karl Kimmel. Gretchen led the procession of the children's chorus in the first act.

A Great Food—

Thousands pay tribute to the amazing results it has achieved

"My husband invented a new nickname for me: 'Frenzied Medicator.' Constipation had become chronic. So had the pernicious and easy habit of taking cathartics for relief. One evening my husband showed me the Fleischmann advertisement, simultaneously producing two silver-wrapped yeast cakes. 'At least this is food, not dope!'

"To be obliging I promised to try it out. The yeast proved slower in action than my pet drastic drugs, but I soon discovered its superiority. In two months my internal economy was operating like a well-oiled motor. Today I am surprisingly regular, despite my mother's insistence that as constipation is 'inherited in our family,' I must expect to take medicine all my life! Two yeast sandwiches daily keep my 'health budget' down to six cents a day."

(Mrs. Lillian B. Ramsey of Evanston, Ill.)

There is nothing mysterious about its action. It is not a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense. But when the body is choked with the poisons of constipation—or when its vitality is low so that skin, stomach, and general health are affected—this simple, natural food achieves literally amazing results.

Concentrated in every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast are millions of tiny yeast-plants, alive and active. At once they go to work—invigorating the whole system, clearing the skin, aiding digestion, strengthening the intestinal muscles and making them healthy and active.

Dissolve one cake in a glass of water

(just hot enough to drink)

—before breakfast and at bedtime. Fleischmann's Yeast, when taken this way, is especially effective in overcoming or preventing constipation.

Or eat 2 or 3 cakes a day—spread on bread or crackers—dissolved in fruit juices or milk—or eat it plain.

Fleischmann's Yeast for Health comes only in the tinfoil package—it cannot be purchased in tablet form. All grocers have it. Start eating it today! You can order several cakes at a time, for yeast will keep fresh in a cool, dry place for two or three days.

Write us for further information or let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Address: Health Research Dept. 533, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"A year ago found me morose and irritable, with a nervous, rundown body and an exceptionally bad complexion. One day while sitting at a soda fountain I read an ad for Fleischmann's Yeast and concluded to give it a trial . . . Within a week I slept better, and everyone complimented me on my improved appearance. Today I am a picture of health, have a wonderful complexion, and everyone says I look five years younger."

(Miss Jane Branch of Houston, Texas)

"When I say that I used to dread the sight, smell, or taste of food—well, it's the absolute truth. I would come home and mother would have the table fairly groaning with good healthy foods—yet just as sure as fate, about three hours later a thousand demons would seem to start fighting inside me." Then he began eating Fleischmann's Yeast. In less than a month "my agonies vanished. I gradually indulged in the foods which used to have the most appalling effect, but nothing doing—they couldn't annoy me!"

(Mr. Homer Gauthier of Beverly Road, Brooklyn, N. Y.)

"I am a graduate nurse. Back in 1911 while in charge of an operating room, I was afflicted with boils. I tried many remedies—still boils came, and I got run down and unable to carry on. Finally a physician told me to take Yeast . . . That was twelve years ago, and I have never had a boil since. I have used Fleischmann's for hundreds of patients and for a number of different ailments. I am glad to say that twelve years have not dimmed my enthusiasm for Fleischmann's Yeast, or staled my appreciation of what it has done for me and for others in the course of my professional life."

(Miss Ann Batchelder of New York)

"It looked like hanging on to the pill wagon the rest of my days. One day while reading a story, I ran into an advertisement of Fleischmann's Yeast. Soon I was eating yeast and very soon I just automatically quit medicines. Directly my body began daily to free itself of poisons and waste in a very easy, natural, healthful way. Today, thanks to Fleischmann's Yeast, I am well, happy, and full of pep."

(Mr. James H. Boyce of Memphis, Tenn.)

LANDING MADE AT MITCHEL FIELD

Prince of Wales Among Many Persons Waiting at Air Port to Receive the Army Airmen.

By the Associated Press.

MITCHEL FIELD, N. Y., Sept. 8.—The army's round-the-world flyers reached the aviation field here at 3:30 p. m. today from Boston.

The Prince of Wales was in the distinguished throng waiting to greet the flyers.

Lieut. Nuegesser, French flying ace, was in the party with the Prince. The Prince was given a hearty welcome by an immense crowd. As he entered a box and stood smiling, photographers snapped his picture from all directions.

Lieut. Nelson, in the plane New Orleans, was the first to land. The fliers had made the 220-mile hop from Boston in 3 hours and 28 minutes.

As the last plane glided to earth the first shot of a 21-gun salute boomed out. The Prince of Wales, who had motored to the field for the occasion, stood in his box and waved his hat as the aviators taxied their machines to positions before the grand stand.

Fifteen thousand persons were on the field but none was more excited than Lieut. Nungesser, French ace, who, standing at the Prince's side, jumped up and down and shouted himself hoarse.

As the fliers, escorted by Maj. W. N. Hensley Jr., the Mitchel Field commandant, walked to the grand stand where the official welcoming party was waiting to receive them, the crowd broke through the ropes, rushed past the military and police guards and surrounded the airmen.

Pushing their way through crowds, the aviators were lead to the stand and presented to Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr., who greeted them in a brief address. Lieut. Smith, the flight commander, responded.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8. — The round-the-world flyers passed over City Island, east of the Bronx, at 3:04 p. m., Eastern daylight time.

Swinging across the Bronx the airmen proceeded down Manhattan Island towards the battery. Scores of thousands of New Yorkers standing on housetops, on the sidewalks and in parks watched the squadron as it sped south.

Following Fifth and Madison avenues the planes were plainly visible to a multitude who gave them a noisy welcome. Whistles on factories, steamboats and trains and horns on thousands of automobiles sounded and a great cheer went up from the pavements and housetops.

The din continued as the flyers, escorted by a dozen aircraft, winged due south. Block after block shrieked its greeting aloft until the flyers, after circling over the lower canons of Manhattan, steered east for the short spin to Mitchel Field at Mineola.

Traffic on the city's busy avenues was virtually suspended for the few minutes the flyers were in sight.
